LYTCHETT-MATRAVERS, a par. in the hund. of Cogdean, co. Dorset, 6 miles N.W. of Poole, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Blandford. The village is situated on a high hill, commanding a view of the sea. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £430. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £551. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is of ancient date, and, from an inscription on a brass plate, is supposed to have been built before the Conquest. It contains several monuments, including one to Lord Matravers, from whom the place takes the suffix to its name. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There are National schools. H. Dillon Trenchard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LYTCHETT-MINSTER, a par. in the hund. of Cogdean, co. Dorset, 2 miles S.E. of Lytchett-Matravers, and 4 N.W. of Poole, its post town. It is situated at the northern extremity of Wareham harbour, and is bounded on the S. by Rock Lee river, which is crossed by a bridge, and falls into Lytchett Bay. A priory was founded here in early times. From the hill called Lytchett Beacon there is an extensive prospect over Poole harbour and the surrounding country. Nearly half the surface is in heath and waste; the remainder is divided between arable, meadow, and woodland. There are pits for potter's clay, which is conveyed to Poole harbour by means of a short canal. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £15 9s. 6d., and the vicarial for £350. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £295, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, with the exception of the tower, is a modern edifice, dedicated to St. Mary. It was built from the materials of the old priory. The parochial endowments produce about £24 per annum. The Independents and Baptists have each a chapel. There are both National and British schools. The principal residence here is Lytchett House, built by Sir Claude Scott, Bart., who called it "Sans Souci." To the S. of the village is Lytchett Beacon, a very large tumulus, serving as a landmark for ships entering Poole harbour. A pleasure fair is held on Whit-Monday. W. R. Fryer, Esq., is lord of the manor.

LYTESCARY, a hmlt. in the par. of Charlton Mackrell, co. Somerset, in the vicinity of Somerton.

LYTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Heversham, ward of Kendal, co. Westmorland, 5 miles N.W. of Milnthorpe. It forms a tnshp. with Crosthwaite and the hmlt. of Raw. There are orchards, and an extensive bog.

LYTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Amounderness, co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles S.W. of Kirkham, 8 N. of Southport, and 14 W. of Preston, its post town. It is situated on the N. bank of the estuary of the river Ribble, and is the terminus of a branch line of the West Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village is mostly modern, and has some good houses. It is well lighted with gas, and possesses every accommodation for the comfort of its numerous visitors, the place being much resorted to in the summer months for its salubrity and facilities for sea-bathing. About a mile to the E. is Lytham Pool, a large natural basin, where ships transfer their merchandise to lighter vessels, to be conveyed up the river to the port of Preston. At the northern extremity of the basin is a graving-dock for building and repairing vessels. Many of the people are engaged in the fisheries. The National Life Boat Institution has a station in the vicinity. A portion of the beach has been levelled, and a public promenade formed along it, affording a view of the scenery on the S. side of the estuary. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £568. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £131. The parish church is a neat edifice of red brick, with a tower, dedicated to St. Cuthbert. There is also the district church of St. John, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £60. The church of St. John is a modern structure. The charities, including the endowment of the free school, produce about £110 per annum. The Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics have places of worship; and, in addition to the free school, there is a good National school, and one belonging to the Roman Catholics. Here are some remains of a priory, founded about the 12th century. Lytham Hall is the principal residence. Colonel Clifton is lord of the manor. Saturday is the principal market day.

LYTHAN, ST., a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.W. of Cardiff, its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £199, in the patron. of the archdeacon. There are remains of a cromlech. Dyffryn is the only seat.

LYTHE, a tnshp. united with Birch, in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 1 mile S.E. of the town of Ellesmere. The Ellesmere canal passes through the tnshp. Lythe Hall is the principal residence.

LYTHE. See MILLAND, co. Sussex.

LYTHE, a par. in the eastern div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Whitby, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Easington. The North-Eastern railway has a station at Whitby. The par., which is of large extent, is situated on the north-eastern coast, and includes the tnshps. of Barnby East, Borrowby, Ellerby, Goldsborough, Lythe, Hutton Mulgrave, Mickleby, Newton Mulgrave, and Ugthorpe, and the hmlt. of Egton Bridge. Lythe was, at one time, a market town, and belonged to the Manley family. At Kettleness and Sandsend in this parish are extensive alum works, affording employment to a large number of the inhabitants. They have been carried on for above 250 years, and are now the property of the Marquis of Normanby. Jet is found along the sea-shore. The lofty cliff at Kettleness having become undermined, on the night of December 17, 1829, glided down towards the sea, carrying with it the whole hamlet situated on its summit; but a vessel lying off the coast saved the inhabitants. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable, pasture, and woodland, with about 800 acres of unenclosed moor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. with the cur. of Ugthorpe, £238, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower, and has recently undergone considerable alterations. There is likewise the district church of Grosmont, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £60, also in the patron. of the archbishop. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel. There is a school for boys and girls, partly endowed. Mulgrave Castle, situated a little to the S. of the village, is surrounded by grounds of great extent; it is the seat of the Marquis of Normanby, who is lord of the manor.

M.

MABE, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 4 miles W. of Falmouth, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Redruth. This neighbourhood abounds in granite, a large quantity of which was used in the construction of both Waterloo and London bridges. Two-thirds of the land is arable and pasture, and the remainder common. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Falmouth to Penryn, where the granite is shipped. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £139. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Mylor, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is an ancient stone edifice, with lofty granite tower, dedicated to St. Mabe. There are charities of about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have a small place of worship. At Hellind, in this parish, is an ancient cross.

MABERY, or MACBEARY, a loch in the northern div. of co. Wigton, Scotland, 9 miles N.W. of Newtown-Stewart. It is situated at the head of the river Bladenoch, and contains several small islands.

MABLETHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Alford, its post town, and 16 S.E. of Louth. It is situated on the coast of the German Ocean, and includes the hmlt. of Stain. This place is much frequented in summer for its sea-bathing accommodation, the sands extending for several miles along the beach. It formerly consisted of two parishes, St. Mary's and St. Peter's, and is said to have derived its name from the abundance of maple-trees, the stumps of which are still to be seen at low-water mark. The church of St. Peter has long since been destroyed by encroachments of the sea, and the living annexed to Theddlethorpe St. Helen. The living of St. Mary's is a rect. with that of Stain annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £700. The church has a brass and other relics. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a National school. Thomas Alcock, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MABLETHORPE ST. PETER, an ancient par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln. [See the above.]

MABYN, ST., a par. in the hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.E. of Wadebridge, 4 N.W. of Bodmin, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Camelford. The river Camel flows through the neighbourhood, with its lofty banks clothed with wood to their summits. The village is neatly built. At Trevisquite and Colquite, in this parish, were formerly chapels. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £712. The church is an old stone edifice, dedicated to St. Mabinana. It has a lofty square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles, and was entirely repaired at the expense of the late rector. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The charities amount to about £6 per annum. There is a National school, also an almshouse for seven families. The Rev. C. Peters, the controversial author of the "Dissertation on Homer and Job," was some time rector of this parish. Colquite is an old seat. A fair is held on the 14th February for the sale of cattle.

MACALLAN, an ancient par. now joined to Knockandow, co. Elgin, Scotland.

MACARONY, or SOUTH CHANNEL, in the Wash, off the coast of Lincoln. It lies between Hook Hill and Roger's Sands, and is the nearest approach to Boston.

MACARTHY'S ISLAND, an islet in the Upper Lake of Killarney, Ireland.

MACBETH'S CASTLE. There are remains of two fortresses of this name, one in Dunsinane, co. Perth, and the other at Broughton, co. Peebles, Scotland.

MACCLESFIELD HUNDRED, one of the subdivisions of Cheshire, situated in the north-eastern part of the county. It includes the town of Macclesfield, and the pars. of Alderley, Cheadle, Gawsworth, Mottram-in-Longden-Dale, Northen, Prestbury, Stockport, Taxall, and Wilsonslow, with portions of Astbury and Rostherne, comprising an area, exclusive of the town of Macclesfield, of about 148,000 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Chester.

MACCLESFIELD, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. palatine of Chester, 17 miles from Manchester, 32 E.N.E. of Chester, and 167 from London by road, or 165 by the North Staffordshire railway, on which it is a station. The town is situated on the acclivity of a steep hill, near the borders of the district still called Macclesfield Forest. The river Bollen, which runs through the lower part of the town, divides the E. from the W. portion, but is crossed by several bridges. Macclesfield is one of the oldest towns in England, being included in the royal demesne of the earls of Mercia. In Domesday it is described as a seat of Earl Edwin, and as forming part of the earldom of Chester; but it afterwards lapsed to the crown. It was first chartered by Prince Edward, as Earl of Chester, in 1261; which charter was confirmed successively by Edward III., Richard II., Edward IV., and Elizabeth. During the Civil War it was besieged and taken by Sir William Brereton for the parliament. Subsequently four regiments were raised there, and placed at the disposal of King Charles II. In 1745 the Pretender took possession of the town, but was forced to retire before the forces of the Duke of Cumberland. The corporation was settled in the reign of Charles II. Under the Municipal Reform Act it is divided into six wards, and is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 36 common councilmen, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Macclesfield." —The town consists of four principal streets, containing houses of a superior kind. They are well paved and drained. The road from London to Stockport, running through Park and Mill streets, forms one principal street, and the road from Chester to Buxton another. Macclesfield is well supplied with water, and lighted with gas. Numerous improvements have taken place since the establishment of the local board of health in 1852. A park was opened in 1854, near the Prestbury-road, which comprises 16 acres, and cost about £6,000. It originated in a memorial from the working classes to the late Sir Robert Peel, and, when completed, was transferred to the corporation in trust for the inhabitants. There are many public buildings, viz., the townhall, erected in 1825; the museum, borough gaol and police office, market-house, mechanics' institution; public library, established in 1770, and containing about 14,000 volumes of standard literature, and a complete collection of public records; a theatre, two banks, and a savings-bank. The public baths and washhouses were built in 1849, and cost £3,000, which was raised by subscription. The union workhouse was built at a cost of £10,000. The almshouses were founded and endowed by Elizabeth Stanley in 1703. The population in 1851 was 39,048, which in 1861 had decreased to 36,101. The township covers an area of 2,210 acres, and contains coal, slate, and stone quarries. The Macclesfield Poor-law Union contains 41 parishes and townships, with an area of 65,078 acres.—Formerly Macclesfield was the centre of an extensive trade in wrought buttons of mohair twist and silk; and even a century ago, as an encouragement to this trade, an Act was passed to prevent the wearing of buttons covered with the same stuff as the garment was made of; but the attempt to enforce this Act brought into use horn and metal buttons. This particular manufacture has wholly given way, but Macclesfield may now be reckoned as the principal seat in England of the silk, satin, and velvet trade. The weaving of silk was introduced here in 1787, and numerous mills have been erected in all parts of the town. The oldest silk-mill is in Park-green, and the street leading from thence to the market-place is called Mill-street in consequence. The manufacture of cotton used also to be carried on, but has quite disappeared. Gimps, fringes, and other silk trimmings, are made in large quantities. There are also a few makers of engines, several dye works, foundries, potteries, and breweries; and small wares are extensively made.—The Macclesfield canal connects this town with Manchester, and the Grand Trunk canal with London, but the railway has almost superseded this mode of transit. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the archdeac. and dioc. of Chester, val. £201, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees. It was once held by Watson, author of the "History of Halifax." The church, which is dedicated to St. Michael, was founded in 1279 by Queen Eleanor, but was almost entirely rebuilt in 1740. It has a tower with a peal of ten bells, and two mortuary chapels, one of Archbishop Savage, a native of Macclesfield, who died in 1508, and the other of the Leghs, of Lyme, who were at Agincourt and Cressy. There are five other churches in different parts of the town, the livings of which vary in value from £66 to £250. Christ Church, a proprietary church under the old church, was built in 1775, and has sittings for 1,205 persons. It contains an organ upon which the great Handel often played, and a pulpit in which John Wesley preached. St. Paul's, Hallefields, was not completed until 1844, and cost about £5,500. It can be seen from almost any part of the town. St. Peter's, Windmill-street, was built in 1848, at a cost of some £3,000, with sittings for 600 persons. St. George's, High-street, erected by Dissenters in 1822, but since placed under episcopal authority, accommodates about 1,700 persons, and cost about £6,500; and Trinity Church, Hurdsfield, was erected in 1839, at a cost of £2,500, with 800 sittings. Besides these churches there are places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive, New Connexion, and Association Methodists, Baptists, Roman Catholics, and Mormonites. The free grammar school of King Edward VI., founded in 1502 by Sir John Percyvale, Lord Mayor of London, and a native of Macclesfield, was originally endowed with £10 per annum. Its income now exceeds £1500 per annum, and it is considered one of the first schools in England. The present schoolhouse is of stone, and was built in 1856 at a cost of about £3,000. There is also a modern free school, built in the Elizabethan style in 1840 for about £2,500, and supported out of the surplus funds, of which not more than £500 per annum are ever to be expended on the modern school. The Sunday-school is one of the handsomest buildings of the town; and its principal room, which will hold 2,000 persons, is fitted with galleries, and an organ. It was completed in 1813, at a cost of nearly £6,000, and contains a library of 1,200 volumes. There are besides St. Michael's National school, Christ Church National school, St. Paul's, St. Peter's, St. George's, and some thirty others.—Macclesfield publishes the Macclesfield Chronicle, Courier, and Herald, and gives the title of earl to the Parkers. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs for cattle, cloth, hardware, wool, &c. are held on the 6th May, 22nd June, 11th July, and 11th November. The races take place in October.

MACCLESFIELD FOREST, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, and hund. of Macclesfield, co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles E. of Macclesfield, its post town. This is the chief of several townships which formed part of the ancient royal forest of Macclesfield. The village is a small straggling place. The living is a cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120. The church is a small edifice, rebuilt about 1824 on the site of the old one. There are small charities of about £2 10*s.* per annum, also a parochial school. The Earl of Derby is lord of the manor and seneschal of the forest.

MACDARA ISLAND, off the coast of Galway, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Gorumna Island. It is about 1½ mile in circumference.

MACDUFF, a seaport town and burgh of barony, in the par. of Gamrie, co. Banff, Scotland. It is situated about 1 mile E. of the town of Banff, on the opposite side of the river Doveran, and on the declivity of a hill descending towards the sea-shore. It is included in the parliamentary boundaries of Banff burgh, and both towns are connected by a bridge of seven arches. It has a station on the North of Scotland railway. The town has risen since the early part of the 18th century from being a small fishing village to a place of respectable size and trade. It is built on the property of the Earl of Fife, whose seat lies in the neighbourhood, and to whose family it has been chiefly indebted for its modern improvements and prosperity. Through the influence of James, Earl of Fife, it was created a burgh of barony by George III. in 1783, when its name was altered from Down to its present appellation, and it has from that period increased rapidly in extent and consequence. The houses are well built, and the streets regularly planned. There is a chapel-of-ease, a Free church, several schools, and a public library. There is a town-house and two branch banking establishments, viz. the Union Bank and the North of Scotland Bank. The harbour, the property of the Earl of Fife, is considered the best in the Moray Frith, and has more traffic than that of Banff, the harbour dues being lower, and the accommodation better than the harbour of that town. As a station for the herring fishery it is exceedingly valuable, a greater supply of that fish being obtained and shipped from this port than from any other between Fraserburgh and Cromarty. The chief exports are, grain, salmon, cod, cattle, pork, and excellent granite; the imports are, hemp, flax, timber, iron, lime, coals, and colonial produce. Several vessels trade with London and the Baltic. The town is governed by a provost, bailies, and council, and it has a weekly market on Tuesday.

MACDUFF'S CASTLE, two fortresses of this name, one at Culross and the other at Wemyss, co. Fife, Scotland; and at Kilconquhar in the same county are Macduff's Cave and Cross.

MACEFEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles E. of the town of Malpas. Lord Kenyon is lord of the manor and sole proprietor.

MACETOWN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.E. of Dunshaughlin, its post town. It is about 2 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The soil is generally of medium quality, and the road from Dunshaughlin to Duleek traverses the interior. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Kilmessan, £316, in the patron. of the crown and the Marquis of Drogheda. Ruins of an ancient castle are here.

MACFIN, a vil. in the bar. of Coleraine, co. Antrim, Ireland, 4 miles from Coleraine. It is a station on the Belfast and Northern Counties railway.

MACGILLYCUDDY'S REEKS, a group of mountains in the bar. of Dunkerrin, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles W.S.W. of Killarney. They chiefly consist of slate, and are the loftiest summits in Ireland. Carn Tual, the highest, is 3,404 feet above sea-level. The purple mountains and Toomies, with the pass of Dunloe, are among the group.

MACHAIG, a loch in co. Perth, Scotland. It lies under Uaighmore Hill, and is about 2½ miles in circumference.

MACHANY WATER, a trout stream joining the river Earn at Kinkel Bridge, co. Perth, Scotland.

MACHAR, NEW, a par. in the Aberdeen district of co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is 7 miles N.N.W. of Aberdeen. It has a railway station on the Great North of Scotland line. It is situated near the river Don, and includes Straloch (a part of Banff). The length of the par. is 9 miles, and its breadth from 2 to 3 miles. The surface is for the most part level. The soil is various, but in general arable and well cultivated. It is in the presb. and synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £217. The church, a commodious structure, was erected in 1791. There is a Free church, and also two non-parochial schools. The parish anciently formed part of Old Machar. On an island in Loch Goull, or Bishop's Loch, in this parish, are the ruins of the seat of the bishops of Aberdeen before the chantry was erected. In 1647 the Covenanters gained a victory over the Royalists on a moor in this parish, where there are four mineral springs. Straloch, Parkhill, and Elrick, are the chief mansions. Fairs are held on the second Mondays of January, February, March, April, May, November, and December.

MACHAR, OLD, a par. in co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It contains the quoad sacra pars. of Bonaccord, Gilcolmston, Holburn, and Woodside, which belong to the burgh, also the old cathedral, King's College, &c., with part of the town of Aberdeen, which see.

MACHEN, a par. chiefly in the lower div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, but partly in the hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N.W. of Newport, its post town. It is situated between the Rumney and Ebba, and includes the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Machen, and Rhydgwern. Here are mines from which are obtained calamine, coal, iron, and lead. The principal seat of industry is Upper Machen, where there are extensive iron and tin works, a foundry, and the works of the Rumney Railway Company. The Monmouthshire canal, and the Rhymney and Tyrhowey railways, afford facility of conveyance to Newport. The surface is hilly, and the soil gravel, alternating with clay. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £14, and the rectorial for one of £649 3*s.* 9*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £351. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The charities, including a school endowment, amount to about £16 per annum. The Baptists, Independents, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, each have chapels. There are good schools for boys and girls, and an infants' school, built by the late Sir Charles Morgan. Machen Plâs is the principal residence. In the vicinity are several mineral springs and the remains of a castle.

MACHERS, THE, a large peninsula lying between Wigtown Bay and Luce Bay, and constituting one of the three great divisions of the co. Wigtown, Scotland. Its name, which is Celtic, signifies "flat or low country."

MACHNO, a feeder of the river Conway, rising in co. Carnarvon.

MACHON BANK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall-Bierlow, par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

MACHREE ISLANDS, or SEVEN HOGS, islets off the coast of Kerry, Ireland. They are situated on the E. side of Brandon Bay.

MACHWY, a river of co. Brecon, rises near Rhulen, and, after forming a cascade of 40 feet, joins the river Wye at Llanstephen.

MACHYNLLETH, a hund. in co. Montgomery. It is situated in the western part of the co., and includes the pars. of Cemmes, Darowen, Llanbrynmair, Llanwrin, Machynlleth, and Penegos.

MACHYNLLETH, or MAKUNTHLETH, a par. and market town in the hund. of the same name, co. Montgomery, 11 miles S.E. of Dolgelly, and 31 W. of Montgomery. It is a station on the Newtown and Machynlleth and Aberystwith and Welsh Coast railway. It is situated in a valley at the foot of Arran-y-Gessel, near the confluence of the rivers Dovey and Dulas. The par. includes the tnshps. of Garsion, Isygarreg, and Uchygarreg. The Romans had a station here called Maglona. Owain Glyndwr assembled his first army at this place after his accession to the government of Wales. The town is well built and clean, but with no particularly attractive features. There is a town-hall, a bank, and one for savings. It is united with others to Montgomery in returning one member to parliament. The surrounding scenery is mountainous. The principal employments are in the slate quarries and lead mines, the products of which, with timber, are shipped at Derwenlas, 2 miles below the town, which is accessible to vessels of about 70 tons burthen. Flannel and other woollen goods are extensively manufactured, and tanning is carried on. On the streams are several mills for grinding corn, and for the preparation of wool for weaving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £230, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, with the exception of the spire, is a modern edifice, dedicated to St. Peter. There is an endowed school with an income of £54. The other charities produce in all about £65 per annum. The Baptists, Independents, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, have each a chapel. There are National schools for boys and girls, also infant schools. Roman remains have been found in the neighbourhood. In the town is a large arched gateway, all that is left of the old building where the parliament assembled, and in which Owain Glyndwr was crowned. There are several good residences in the vicinity. The waters, abounding with fish, afford excellent sport to the lovers of angling. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in March, 16th May, 26th June, 9th July, 7th August, 18th September, 21st October, 26th November, and Wednesday previous to Christmas Day, for the sale of corn, cheese, and live stock.

MACKANAGH, an islet in Lough Carra, bar. of Dunkerron, co. Kerry, Ireland.

MACKNEY, a vil. in the hund. of Moreton, co. Berks, 1 mile W. of Wallingford. It is situated on the Thames, near the line of the Great Western railway.

MACKWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 2½ miles N.W. of Derby, its post town, and from whence there is a railway transit by all the northern lines. It is situated on a tributary of the river Derwent, and includes the tnshp. of Markeaton. The lands are chiefly in pasture, and the surface is well wooded. Considerable quantities of cheese are made here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £161. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a tower surmounted by an octagon spire. It has a memorial window containing effigies of the four evangelists. The parochial endowments realise about £45 per annum, a portion of which is for school purposes. There are schools for boys and girls. The only remains of Mackworth Castle, the seat of the De Mackworths, is an old gateway, the remainder having been demolished during the Parliamentary War. The property belongs to Lord Scarsdale, but William Munday, Esq., is lord of the manor. Thornhill is the principal residence.

MACLEOD'S MAIDENS, three basaltic rocks in Bracadale Loch, coast of Scotland. They are situated off Idrigil Point, in the Isle of Skye.

MACLONEIGH, a par. in the bar. of East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Macroom, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface consists of some bog and mountain, with a considerable proportion of arable land. The river Lee traces part of the border. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. with Kilmichael, £774, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilmichael. There are parochial and two other schools. Castleview is the principal residence.

MACNEAN LOUGHS, UPPER and LOWER, two lakes, chiefly in the prov. of Ulster and partly in that of Connaught, on the borders of cos. Cavan and Leitrim, Ireland. They lie about half a mile distant from each other, between loughs Erne and Melvin. The upper lake, which contains several small islands, is 5 miles long, the lower 3 miles.

MACOSQUIN, or CAMUS-JUXTA-BANN, a par.

and post-office vil. in the bar. of Coleraine, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Coleraine. The par. is 6 miles long by 4 broad. The surface consists of a mountainous and a flat district, both lying along the western bank of the river Bann. The soil is middling. The interior is traversed by the roads from Coleraine to Kilrea, Garvagh, and Dungiven. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £650, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is part of the former abbey church, is a commodious building. It was repaired in 1826. Here are likewise two Presbyterian meeting-houses and a Covenanters'. There are several Sunday and daily schools in the parish. Numerous seats are dotted over the landscape. The name of the parish originated from a monastery which was founded at Camus in 580 by St. Comgal. The last vestiges of the monastery were removed to form a wall around the burial-ground of the parish; an old cross and font are yet preserved. A Cistercian monastery was also founded here in 1172 by the O'Cahans, called the Abbey of St. Mary de Fontana. This parish belongs principally to the Richardson family, of Somerset, who purchased it from the Merchant Taylors' Company. Here are remains of several ancient fortifications, besides some curious artificial caves. Salmon are in plenty. Two or three powerful medicinal springs occur within the limits. Iron, slate, and basalt exist, but are not worked.

MACREDDEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Aughrim.

MACRONEY, a par. in the bars. of Condons and Clangibbon, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Kilworth. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is hilly, comprising some parts of the Kilworth mountains. The rivulet Araglyn and the road from Cork to Dublin pass through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Kilworth, £712, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilworth. Here is a hedge school. Castlecooke is the chief seat. The parish is the site of a police station. Limestone and slate are the prevailing rocks.

MACROOM, a par., post, and market town in the bar. of West Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface comprises a mountainous district named Muskerrybeg. The arable land is of good quality. The river Sullane intersects the interior, and is joined by the Lany within the limits. The river Lee courses along the southern boundary. The roads from Cork to Killarney and from Cork to Bantry cross the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £368, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1824. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Aghabullogne. There are Sunday and daily schools. Macroom Castle is the demesne of the Hon. W. Hedges. Mount Massey is another seat. The town is situated on the bank of the river Sullane, and on the Cork and Killarney road, 19 miles W. of Cork, and 171 from Dublin. It presents an irregular and poor appearance, but contains a court-house, market-house, parish church and chapels, bridewell, mills, &c. The river is crossed in two places by bridges of nine arches. It is a chief police station, and petty and quarter sessions are held in the court-house. The castle is a very prominent object on the river's bank. It succeeded the ancient castle founded by the Carew family in the reign of John, and repaired by the MacCarthys in the 16th century. It was stormed and reduced in 1620 by Sir Charles Wilmot, and was for the second time burnt in 1690, when it was forfeited by the MacCarthy family. The Poor-law Union of Macroom lies within the county of Cork, and contains 16 electoral divisions. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 12th of every month.

MACSWYNE'S BAY, on the coast of Donegal, Ireland. It is situated inside St. John's Point, and has from 3 to 10 fathom water. And at Horn Head, on the same coast, is MacSwyne's Gun, a narrow cave through which the sea dashes with such violence that it may be heard at the distance of 20 miles.

MADDAFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Okehampton, co. Devon, in the vicinity of the town of Okehampton.

MADDESTON, a vil. in the par. of Muiravonside, co. Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Falkirk.

MADDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Branch, co. Wilts, 4 miles N. of Stapleford, and 6 N.W. of Amesbury. Devizes is its post town. It lies on the main road between the two last-mentioned places, and with Rollstone and Shrewton forms one township. The manor formerly belonged to Sir Stephen Fox, ancestor of the earls of Ilchester and lords Holland, who assigned to be paid out of the rents £188 to the hospital of Farley, which he founded in 1638. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £64. The church is an ancient edifice dedicated to St. Mary. The charities amount to about £8 per annum. Some traces of ancient buildings are to be seen in the neighbourhood. The manor belongs to James Maton, Esq.

MADDY, a loch on the E. side of North Uist, Western Islands, coast of Scotland. It contains many small islands.

MADEHURST, a par. in the hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.W. of Arundel, its post town, and 7 S. of Petworth. It is a small agricultural place situated in a fertile district. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £81 4s. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £100. The church is a small edifice dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. It has recently undergone thorough repair. Madehurst Lodge and Dale Park are the principal residences—the latter commanding a wide prospect.

MADELEY, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, its post town, and 17 N.W. of Stafford. It is a station on the London and North-Western line of railway. The par. is situated on the river Lea, a tributary of the Wever, and includes the hmlt. of Little Madeley, where brick-making and coal-mining are carried on. Nails are manufactured in the village of Madeley, which stands on the roads from Whitchurch and Nantwich to Newcastle. The surface is hilly and well-wooded, and comprises a small portion of peat-bog. The substratum abounds with coal, of which several mines are in operation. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable, meadow, and pasture. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £333 8s. 5d., and the vicarial for £192. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £266. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to All Saints. It contains monuments and effigies of the Egerton and other families. The register commences in 1678. Almshouses for ten persons and a free school were founded and endowed by Sir John Offley, the income of which now amounts to £95, besides charities for the poor, the whole producing about £155 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

MADELEY HOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Checkley, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Uttoxeter.

MADELEY-MARKET, a par. and market town in the parliamentary borough of Wenlock, co. Salop, 2 miles N.E. of Broseley, 6 S.W. of Wellington, and 15 S.E. of Shrewsbury. There are several stations in this parish on the Madeley and Coalbrookdale and the Severn Junction and Wellington branches of the Great Western line of railway, and a station on the Coalport branch of the London and North-Western line. Its name indicates its situation between two rivers, and its adjunct is derived from a grant of a market by Henry III. to a community of Cluniac monks at Wenlock, to whom Madeley then belonged. It is situated on the banks of the river Severn, which is here crossed by two iron bridges, one of which has given name to the town of Iron Bridge. This bridge, which weighs 378 tons, and has an arch of 100 feet span, was constructed at Coalbrookdale in 1779. The other one was constructed in 1817. The par. includes the districts of Coalbrookdale and Coalport, and the market town of Iron Bridge. The main road from Iron Bridge to Shiffnal passes through the parish, which includes scenery that may vie with the most beautiful in the counties of Monmouth or Devon, especially in the neighbourhood of Coalbrookdale. The district abounds with coal, iron, stone, and potters' clay. A great many of the people are employed in the mines, quarries, and extensive ironworks of Madeley Court and Madeley Wood, as well as in the manufacture of porcelain, rope, and oil. The town is lighted with gas, and there is a court-house in which the county court is held. The workhouse for the Poor-law Union of Madeley, which comprises 12 parishes, is in this parish. The original market having fallen into disuse, it was revived about the middle of the last century, when a new market-house was erected near the foot of the iron bridge in Coalbrookdale. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £300. The church is a stone structure of Grecian architecture, rebuilt towards the close of the last century, on the spot occupied by the old Norman edifice. The Rev. John Fletcher, a celebrated and much respected divine of the last century, was vicar of this parish. There is also a district church at Iron Bridge, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £196, in the gift of the vicar. The Church of the Holy Trinity, at Iron Bridge, is a Gothic structure with a massive tower recently erected. The parochial charities amount to about £20 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, besides chapels at Coalbrookdale and Iron Bridge, where the Society of Friends have a meeting-house. There are large National schools, conducted in a handsome building; also an infant school. Joseph Reynolds, Esq., is lord of the manor. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on 26th January, 29th May, and 12th October.

MADERTY, a par. in the Strathearn district of co. Perth, Scotland, 9 miles W.S.W. of Perth. It contains the barony burgh of Craig, and the vils. of St. David and Bellyclone. The size of the par. is 5½ miles by 5. The surface is level, and the soil, which is chiefly arable, is very fertile—there are about 450 acres under plantation. The average rent of arable land is about £1 12*s.* per acre. The river Pow, or Powaffray, runs along the northern border of the parish. It is in the presb. of Auchterarder and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £234. Here also is a Free church. On the banks of the Pow, in this parish, stand the ruins of Inchaffray Abbey, founded in 1200 by Gilbert Earl of Strathearn and his Countess Matilda. Maderty was given in 1607 by James I. to the Drummonds, together with the title of Baron Maderty. Remains of a Roman way to Ardoch are traceable.

MADINGLEY, a par. in the hund. of Northstow, co. Cambridge, 4 miles N.W. of Cambridge, its post town and nearest railway station. In this parish is the manor of Burlwas, the proceeds from which are applied to the benefit of the members of parliament for the county. The village is a small agricultural place. The impropriation belongs to the Bishop of Ely. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a spire and stained E. window. There are National schools for both sexes, with residence for the teacher. Madingley House is a structure in the Elizabethan style.

MADLEY, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 6 miles W. of Hereford, its post town and nearest railway station, and 17 N.W. of Ross. It is situated on the river Wye. A castle formerly stood here, and at one time there was a market, but it has long since fallen into disuse. Petty sessions are still held in the village. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Hereford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. with the cur. of Tiberton annexed, £608, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient Norman edifice of stone, with a square embattled tower. The roof is a vaulted one, resting upon pointed arches supported by pillars. It has windows of stained glass, and contains many monuments and a stone font. Beneath the chancel is the ancient crypt. The parochial endowments produce about £27 per annum. There is a National school for boys and girls. The Baptists have a chapel, and there are remains of two ancient crosses.

MADOES, ST., a par. at the western end of the Carse of Gowrie, co. Perth, Scotland. It is situated on the river Tay, 6 miles S.E. of Perth, its post town, and contains the hmlts. of Cottown and Hawkestone. Its length from N. to S. is 1¾ mile, and it is 1½ at its greatest breadth. The surface is flat, and for the most part under tillage. The par. is in the presb. of Perth, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister's stipend is £219. The church was erected in 1798. The churchyard contains a Runic monument. There is a pier and shore-house, which were built in 1830. There is a sandstone quarry at Cotton. The parish is traversed by the Perth and Dundee line, Glencarse being the nearest railway station. Near the eastern boundary of the parish is a stone of some historical note called "the Hawk's stane." The original name of the parish is supposed to have been St. Madoch, or Madox, and is generally pronounced by the inhabitants Semmiedores. Sir John S. Richardson, Bart., is the sole heritor.

MADRESFIELD, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 2 miles N.E. of Great Malvern, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Upton-on-Severn. The Malvern Link station on the West Midland line of railway is about 1 mile E. from the village. It is situated on the river Severn, at the foot of the Malvern hills, and includes the hmlt. of Dripsill, where the manufacture of bricks, drain pipes, &c., is carried on. Two-thirds of the land is in pasture, and the remainder arable and orchards, the latter producing apples and pears in profusion. There are nine hop plantations. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £222. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £230. The church is an ancient Gothic edifice. There is a free school, supported by the patron. Madresfield Court, the seat of Earl Beauchamp, is a mansion in the early English style of architecture, surrounded by a park. It has a gallery of portraits from the time of the Tudors, some by Holbein. Charles I. slept here in 1646, at which time the place was put in a state of defence for the royal cause. Earl Beauchamp is lord of the manor.

MADRON, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 8 miles N.E. of the Land's End, and 17 S.W. of Redruth. It is situated to the N.W. of Mount's Bay, and the higher grounds command sea views. The par. includes the market and post town of Penzance. Mining operations are carried on here, chiefly in copper, lead, and tin. The principal portion of the tin is obtained from the Wherry mine, which extends for a considerable distance under the sea. Alumina, fire-clay, granite, and porphyry are also worked. The workhouse for the Penzance Poor-law Union is situated in this parish. Brickmaking is carried on in this neighbourhood, and the bricks are much esteemed for smelting-houses and furnaces, being capable of enduring an intense degree of heat. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £431 10*s.* 10*d.*, and the vicarial for £660. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with that of Morvah annexed, £740. The parish church is an ancient stone edifice in the Gothic style of architecture, with an embattled tower and porch. It contains several stained-glass windows, and is dedicated to St. Madern, whose sacred well is still shown. There is also a district church at Penzance, a perpet. cur., to which is annexed St. Paul's chapel, val. £150, in the gift of the vicar. The register dates far back. In the churchyard are numerous monuments of the Borlase, Nicholls, Trengwainton, and other families. The charities consist of endowments to Daniel's school amounting to about £100 annually. The Wesleyans have five chapels, and there are schools for boys and girls belonging to the Church and the Wesleyan body. The Rev. John Wesley preached here for about eighteen years. In the vicinity of the town of Penzance are remains of stone crosses, and at Lanyon is a cromlech computed to weigh about 20 tons, also a stone with an ancient British inscription, said to be a monument to Rialobran, son of Cunoval. Within the parish are a number of good seats and residences, some very old.

MAENAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglwys-fach, hund. of Isaf, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles N. of Llanrwst. It is situated on the river Conway, and has some remains of a Cistercian monastery founded by Edward I. in the thirteenth century, which afterwards came to the Wynne family.

MAENCLOCHOG, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 9 miles N.W. of Narberth. Haverfordwest is its post town. It is situated at the foot of the mountain Precelly, and includes the hmlt. of Voilan. Slate is obtained here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £70. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There was a logan stone here. Fairs are held on the 10th March, 22nd May, and 5th August, for the sale of live stock.

MAENEFA, a tnshp. in the par. of Dymeirchion, co. Flint, 3 miles S.E. of St. Asaph.

MAENTWROG, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 8 miles N.E. of Harlech, and 15 N.W. of Dolgelly. Tan-y-Bwlch is its post town. It is situated on the Roman road Sarn Helen, at the foot of Moelwyn, and is watered by the river Dwyryd. Here are slate quarries, and some of the people are employed at stocking knitting. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Festiniog, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Twrog. It contains a monument to Archdeacon Prys, who once held this living, and translated the Psalter into the Welsh tongue. The charities amount to about £3 per annum. Coins and other Roman remains have been found.

MAEN-Y-BARDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Caerhun, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S. of Conway.

MAER, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 6 miles S.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, and 14 N.W. of Stafford. The Whitmore station on the London and North-Western railway is about 2 miles N. of the village. The par. includes the hmlts. of Maer Heath and Maerway Lane. The former was until recently an extensive rugged moor, but has been partially enclosed and planted. There is a lake of about 25 acres in extent, the source of the river Tern, a tributary of the Severn. There are two sandstone quarries, which are worked for rough building. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £45, and the ministerial for £160. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £160. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone edifice with an embattled tower, standing on the side of a well-wooded hill, and mostly rebuilt in 1610. The register commences in 1558. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. William Davenport, Esq., is lord of the manor. Maer Hall, the family seat of the Davenports, is the principal residence.

MAERWAY LANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Maer, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, as above.

MAESBROOK, UPPER and LOWER, tnshps. in the par. of Kinnerley, co. Salop, 5 miles S.E. of Oswestry.

MAESBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of the town of Oswestry. The Ellesmere canal passes through the township.

MAESCAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Devynnock, co. Brecon, 7 miles W. of Brecknock. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Camlet and Usk.

MAESGAMEDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwyddelwern, co. Merioneth, 3 miles N. of Corwen.

MAESGWARTHA, a parcel in the chplry. of Llanelly, co. Brecon, 2 miles S. of Crickhowell. Limestone is quarried.

MAESGWAYLOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Overton, co. Flint, 6 miles N.E. of Chirk.

MAESGWIG, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws-yn-Rhos, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of Abergele.

MAESGWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Nantmel, hund. of Rhayader, co. Radnor, 4 miles S.E. of Rhayader. Lake Gwyn is near this place. Llwynbaried House is the chief seat.

MAESGWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwyddelwern, co. Merioneth, 2 miles N. of Corwen.

MAESLEMYSTAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangadfan, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Llanfair.

MAESMANCYMRO, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanynys, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.W. of Ruthin.

MAESMAWR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandinam, co. Montgomery, 5 miles S.W. of Newtown.

MAES MYNIS, a par. in the hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 1 mile S.W. of Builth, its post town. The rivers Donhiw and Irvon flow through the parish, which includes the vil. of Nantyain. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £128, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small ancient edifice dedicated to St. David. The charities amount to about £8 per annum.

MAESRYCHEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandysilio, co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.W. of Llangollen.

MAESTEG, a vil. in the par. of Llangonoyd, co. Glamorgan, 8 miles N.W. of Bridgend by the Llynoi Valley railway, on which it is a station. This is a place of recent growth on the banks of the river Ogmore, and has extensive ironworks. A tramroad communicates between this and Porthcawl.

MAESTREFGOMER, a tnshp. in the par. of Tref-Eglwys, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N. of Llanidloes.

MAESTREFNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-y-Pennant, co. Merioneth, 7 miles N.E. of Towyn.

MAESTRON, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanykil, co. Merioneth, in the vicinity of Bala.

MAESTROYDDIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Conwil-Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 8 miles N.W. of Llandovery. It is situated on the river Twrch.

MAESYFYNNON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanddaw saint, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S. of Llandovery. It is situated at the foot of the Black Mountains. Here are remains of ancient cairns.

MAESYGLASEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Mallwyd, co. Merioneth, 2 miles S. of Dinas Mowddwy.

MAES-Y-GROES, a tnshp. in the par. of Gilcen, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 4 miles N.W. of Mold.

MAESYR ODYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Glyn-y-Myfyr, co. Denbigh, 10 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

MAESYTREFNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Towyn, co. Merioneth, in the vicinity of Towyn.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE, an ext. par. place of Cambridge University, in the town and co. of Cambridge, which see.

MAGDALEN GATE, a station on the Wisbeach, Walsingham, and Lynn branch of the Great Eastern railway.

MAGDALEN LAVER. See LAVER MAGDALEN, co. Essex.

MAGEE ISLAND. See ISLAND-MAGEE, co. Down.

MAGENEY, a vil. in the bar. of East Narragh, co. Kildare, Ireland, 5 miles from Carlow and 6 from Athy. It is a station on the Carlow branch of the Irish South-Eastern railway. It is situated near the junction of the Grand Junction canal, with the river Barrow.

MAGESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Frampton, co. Dorset, 5 miles N.W. of Dorchester.

MAGHEA, or MAHEE, a small island in the par. of Tullynakill, in the bar. of Lower Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It lies on the E. side of Lough Strangford, and is about 1 mile in length.

MAGHERA, a par. in the bar. of Upper Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Castle-Wellan. Clough is its post town. The par. is 2 miles in length and breadth. The surface lies along the shore of Dundrum Bay. The soil is generally fertile, but sandy. The river Burren traces the western border, and the road from Newry to Ardglass passes through the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Down, val. £294, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The present church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1825. Here are 2 Sunday and 3 daily schools. Ruins of the ancient church are seen near the present one, likewise part of a round tower, and a pillar tower, besides several Druidical stones.

MAGHERA, a par., post, and market town, in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par. is 8 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 6 miles. It contains the vils. of Maghera, Swatteragh, and Curran. The surface is mountainous, heathy, and boggy. The river Moyola traces one of its boundaries, and the Grellagh is a stream of the interior, which is also intersected by the roads from Bellaghy to Dungiven, and from Coleraine to Newry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £1,412, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1819 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The parish likewise contains two Presbyterian meeting-houses and two Roman Catholic chapels which are mutually united. Here are several daily schools, besides two or three Sunday-schools. Maghera House is the chief seat. The town is situated at the cross roads from Coleraine to Armagh, and from Londonderry to Belfast, 26 miles S.E. of Londonderry, and 121 from Dublin. The ecclesiastical history of the place dates from a very early period. It appears to have been an episcopal seat from the close of the 6th century to 1158, at which period it was transferred to Derry. During the rebellion of O'Neal in 1641, the town was partially destroyed by fire at the hands of the Macdonnells. Here is a chief police station, and petty sessions are held once a fortnight. The town contains a market-house, bleach-grounds, flax-mills, &c. A dispensary in the town is within the Magherafelt Poor-law Union. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in every month.

MAGHERABOY, a bar. in the co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded on the N. by the bar. of Lurg, on the E. by Lurg and Tirkennedy, on the S. by Glenawley, and on the W. by co. Leitrim. It is 18 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 7 miles. This bar. contains the par. of Devenish, and parts of Boho, Cleenish, Enniskillen, Inishmacsaint, Rossory, and Trory, with part of the town of Enniskillen, and the whole of the vil. of Derrygonnelly.

MAGHERABOY, a vil. in the par. of St. John, in the bar. of Carbury, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, near Sligo.

MAGHERACLOGHER, a vil. in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated at the estuary of the river Clady, on Gweedore Bay.

MAGHERACLOONE, a par. in the bar. of Farney, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Carrickmacross. Kingscourt is its post town. The par. is 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The surface consists for the most part of good soil. The chief waters of the district are Loughs Fea, Rahans, and Ballyhoe, and the river Lagan. The interior is traversed by the road from Carrickmacross to Kingscourt. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £382, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1825. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels, and near a score of day schools. Loughfea Castle is the chief seat.

MAGHERACREGGAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Ardstraw, in the bar. of Strabane, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Castleberg.

MAGHERACROSS, a par. in the bar. of Farney, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the town of Carrickmacross. It is 7 miles long by 3 broad. The surface comprises a considerable proportion of bog and rock, and several lakes diversify the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £439, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the parish expense in 1779. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, a Presbyterian meeting-house, and several Sunday and day schools.

MAGHERACROSS, a par. in the bars. of Lurg and Tirkennedy, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Enniskillen. It contains the vil. of Ballinamallard, which is its post town. The surface includes a considerable proportion of bog. It is traversed by the road from Enniskillen to Omagh. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £382, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected about 70 years ago, partly by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and partly by private contribution. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Derryvullane and Trory. Here are a Wesleyan Methodist meeting-house, two Sunday and several day schools. Jamestown is the principal residence.

MAGHERACULMONEY, and Islands, a par. in the bar. of Lurg, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the vils. of Ederney and Lack, and its post town Kesh. The surface lies along the middle of Lower Lough Erne; it is generally hilly, the highest ground being on Tappaghan, 1,110 feet. The river Kish waters part of the interior. Several islands in Lough Erne are included in the par. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £586, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is ancient, and was repaired in 1825 by means of a sum lent by the consolidated fund. Several day schools are in the parish. The chief seats are Ardrarney House and Clarevieu. Here are ruins of an old abbey, likewise of a castle, and an ancient cross is still preserved.

MAGHERADROOL, a par. in the bars. of Kinelarty and Lower Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Ballynahinch, which is its post town. It is 6 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The soil is generally fertile. The principal waters of the interior are lakes Bow, Derry, Long, and Macauley; also, the river Ballynahinch. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands at Ballinahinch, was erected by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1830. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, three Presbyterian meeting-houses; also several Sunday and day schools are within the parish. Montalto was formerly the residence of the Earls of Moira. The old church has become a ruin, containing several tombs.

MAGHERAFELT, a par., post, and market town in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par. is nearly 5 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3, containing the towns of Castle-Dawson and Magherafelt, both of which are stations on the Cookstown branch of the Belfast and Northern Counties railway. The soil is mostly good. The river Moyola intersects the parish in the N., and the road from Coleraine to Armagh crosses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £644, in the patron. of the primate. The church, which is situated in the town, is a neat building erected in 1664. It received some additions in 1718 and 1790. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to another at Wood's chapel. There are also Presbyterian and Wesleyan Methodist meeting-houses. The demesne of Castle-Dawson is an attractive feature. Farm Hill and Millbrook are other seats. The town is situated on the road from Coleraine to Armagh, and on the banks of the river Moyola. It consists of four main thoroughfares diverging from a large square, mostly containing well-built houses, and presents a cleanly appearance. There are a market-house, court-house, bridewell, and police office. General sessions are held twice a year, and petty sessions once a fortnight. There are likewise two branch banks in the town, and among several charity schools is one endowed by Rainey. The proprietors of the town are the Salters' Company of London. The greater part of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of linen and muslin, and, besides the miscellaneous trade, bleaching, tanning, brewing, &c., is carried on to some extent. The Magherafelt Poor-law Union lies wholly within the county of Londonderry, and contains 25 electoral divisions. There is a dispensary. Thursday is market day. A grain market is held on Wednesday, and a linen market on the second Thursday in every month, and fairs are held on August 25th, October 29th, and December 29th.

MAGHERAGALL, a par. in the bar. of Upper Massereene, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Lisburn, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is slightly hilly, and the soil generally good. The Lagan canal and the Ulster railway pass within a brief distance. The living is a rect.

and vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £142, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1830 by means of a sum lent by the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Methodist meeting-house, five Sunday and several daily schools. Brooke Hill is the chief seat. The old church was destroyed by the O'Nials in 1641. A cromlech is seen here, called the Giant's Cave.

MAGHERAHAMLET, or TEMPLE MOILE, a par. in the bar. of Kinelarty, co. Down, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Ballynahinch. It is situated under the Slieve Croob mountains, near the source of the river Lagan. The surface is hilly, and slate is quarried. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Down, Connor, and Dromore, val. £90. The church is a commodious structure, built in 1814. There are daily and Sunday schools.

MAGHERALIN, a par., partly in the bar. of East O'Neilland, co. Armagh, and partly in the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Moira. The par. is of large extent and populous. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the linen trade. Various minerals, as coal, building-stone, limestone, and basalt, are quarried. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, Connor, and Dromore, val. £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is a large and ancient structure, was once the cathedral. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and several day schools. The principal residence is Grace Hall. At Linn Huachville, in this parish, are traces of St. Colman's monastery, founded at the close of the 7th century.

MAGHERALLY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Banbridge, its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. The surface lies within a short distance of the river Bann, and consists of a rich soil. The interior is crossed by the roads from Banbridge to Belfast and Ballynahinch. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £195, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church was erected in 1770 by means of a loan by the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Presbyterian meeting-house and four or five day schools. Tully-benan is the principal residence.

MAGHERAMESK, a par. in the bar. of Upper Massereene, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Lisburn. Moira is its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface lies along the bank of the river Lagan, near Lough Neagh. It consists of a good soil. The Ulster railway and the Lagan canal are within a short distance. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with another, £179. Here is a Society of Friends' meeting-house. A round tower was formerly used as the parish church, traces of which may still be seen. The chief residences are Trummery House, Thornbrook, Mount Pleasant, Primrose Hill, Walnut Vale, and Bell's Town. An extensive Danish rath, and O'Nial's Castle, called Innisloghen, formerly stood here. The latter was reduced in 1602 by Sir A. Chichester.

MAGHERAMORNE, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Carrickfergus. It is a railway station on the Carrickfergus and Larne branch line. It is situated on the shore of Lough Larne. Magheramorne House is the principal residence.

MAGHERASTEPHANA, a bar. in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Its boundaries are the bars. of Tirkennedy, Clonkelly, Coole, and Knockinny, and the cos. of Tyrone and Monaghan. It is 13 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 6½ miles. The bar. contains the par. of Aghavea and parts of those of Aghalurchur, Cleenish, and Derrybrusk, with the towns of Lisnaskea and Maguires-bridge.

MAGHERAVEELY, a vil. in the par. of Clonee, in the bar. of Clonkelly, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles E.N.E. of Newtown-Butler. It is situated on the road to Rosslea. Fairs are held on 29th May and 2nd October.

MAGHEROSS, a par. in the bar. of Farney, co. Monaghan. See CARRICKMACROSS.

MAGHERY, a vil. in the par. of Tartaraghan, in the bar. of West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Charlemont. It is situated on the S.W. side of Lough Neagh, near the river Blackwater. Fairs are held on 31st January, 30th April, 24th June, and 31st October.

MAGHERY, a vil. in the par. of Templecrone, in the bar. of Boylagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Dunglow. It is situated at the head of a small bay, to which it gives name. Maghery Lake is hard by.

MAGHULL, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Halsall, hund. of West Derby, co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Ormskirk, its post town. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes through the tnshp., as does also the western section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, which has a station here. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £155, in the patron. of the rector of the parish. The chapel, which is an ancient edifice, has been repaired and enlarged. There is a school with an endowment of £12 per annum.

MAGILLIGAN, or TAMLAGHTARD, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Keenaght, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Newtown Limavady. It is a station on the Belfast and Northern Counties railway. The par. is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3½ miles. The surface lies along the E. shore of the mouth of Lough Foyle, and is principally of a mountainous, barren, and boggy character. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £344, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1778. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian meeting-house, two or three Sunday and some half dozen daily schools. Bellavena is the principal seat. It is alleged that St. Colomb founded a religious establishment in the vicinity. Magilligan Point has a coast-guard station.

MAGLASS. See MAYGLASS, co. Wexford.

MAGLORDSHIP, a hmlt. in the chplry. of South Crossland, West Riding of co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Huddersfield.

MAGNUS BAY, ST., on the W. coast of the mainland of Shetland, Scotland. It is 8 miles deep and 10 long from Sandaness to Eshaness. It contains many voes, or harbours, with good anchorage, particularly Olna Frith, Hillswick, Unzie Frith, and Gron Frith Voe.

MAGOR, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 7 miles E. of Newport, and 6 miles S.E. of Caerleon, its post town. It is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, and has a station on the South Wales railway. The tnshp. includes the chplry. of Redwick. Petty sessions are held in the village, which is a small agricultural place. The living is a vic. with Redwick, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £285. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a place of worship for Baptists, also a National school.

MAGORBAN, or MOGORBIN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Cashel. Fethard is its post town. It is 3½ miles in length, and its extreme breadth is 3½ miles. The surface consists of a fertile tract, lying within the Golden Vale. It is traversed by the road from Cashel to Fethard. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £192, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1814 by means of a gift and loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are three day schools. Woodhouse, Coleraine House, and Silverfort House, are the principal residences.

MAGOURNEY, a par. in the bar. of East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles E. of Macroom, containing its post town Coachford. The par. extends over an area 5,869 acres, lying between the rivers Lee and Dripsey. The road from Cork to Macroom traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £555, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an old building. The Roman Catholic Chapel is united to that of Agabullogue. There are two or three day schools. Dripsey House is the chief seat. A dispensary in the par. is within the Macroom Poor-law Union. Some remains are seen of the old church of Kilcolman, likewise of Macarthy's castle. Building-stone occurs within the limits.

MAGOWRY, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Killenaule, its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1½ broad. The soil is good. The road from Killenaule to Carrick-on-Suir traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val with Killenaule, £817, in the patron. of the bishop.

MAGUE, or MAIG, a river of co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It rises in two head streams, one in the bar. of Upper Connello, the other in the bar. of Coshlea, which become united near Bruree, and, flowing past Ballynaught, Croom, and Adare, it falls into the river Shannon, 3 miles to the E. of Pallas Kenry. It is 28 miles long, and its principal tributaries are the Looba, Morning Star, and Comogue. The river is navigable as far as Adare.

MAGUIRESBRIDGE, a small post and market town in the par. of Aghalurcher, in the bar. of Magherastephana, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles S.E. of Enniskillen, and 101 from Dublin. It is a station on the Dundalk, Enniskillen, and Londonderry section of the Irish North-Western railway. The town stands on the banks of the river Colebrook, or Maguire, which is here crossed by a bridge,—hence the name of the town,—also on the road from Enniskillen to Clones. It presents a neat and cheerful appearance, and contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian and Wesleyan meeting-houses, schools, &c. There is also a police station and a dispensary joined to that of Lisnaskea. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 1st Wednesday in every month, 3rd Wednesday in May, 17th January, 5th July, and 2nd October.

MAGUNIHY, a bar. in co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Trughenackmy, Glanerought, Iveragh, and co. Cork. It is 20 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 9 miles. This bar. contains the pars. of Aglish, Kilbonane, Kilcredan, Kilcummin, Killaha, Killarney, Kilmanare, Molahiffe, and parts of Aghadoe, Currans, Kilcolman, Killeentierna, Killorglin, and Nohavaldaly.

MAGUS MUIR, a district in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 3 miles W. of St. Andrew's. It was formerly wild and bleak, but now its aspect is greatly altered by the plough. It was here that Archbishop Sharp was murdered on the 3rd May, 1679, by Balfour of Burley and his band. Some of the Covenanters taken at Bothwell Bridge were brought here and executed.

MAHONSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Dulane, bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Kells. Mahonstown House is the neighbouring seat.

MAHOONAGH, a par. in the bar. of Glenquin, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Newcastle, its post town. It is 4 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The surface consists generally of good land, and is intersected by the river Deel and the road from Newcastle to Mallow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £425. The Roman Catholic Chapel is united to that of Feohonagh. There are four day schools. Maine House is the chief seat. The objects of antiquity are Castlemahon Tower and Fitzgerald's Fort.

MAIDA HILL, a hmlt. and suburban district in the pars. of St. Marylebone and Paddington, hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, about 3 miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London. The Grand Junction canal passes through the neighbourhood. It is now a fashionable suburb of London, containing many villa residences.

MAIDEN BOWER and MAIDEN CASTLE, the name of several ancient British and Roman camps in cos. Bedford, Dorset, Durham, and Yorkshire.

MAIDEN BRADLEY, a par. partly in the hund. of Mere, co. Wilts, and partly in the hund. of Norton Ferris, co. Somerset, 4 miles N. of Mere, and 8 E. of Bruton. Frome is its post town. It includes the hmlt. of Yarnfield. In the reign of Henry II. a hospital was founded here, which, towards the close of the 12th century, became a monastery of Austin Friars, and, at the dissolution, was given to the Seymour family. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £121, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and has monuments of the Seymours. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. Maiden Bradley House is a seat of the Duke of Somerset.

MAIDENHEAD, a market town and municipal borough in the pars. of Bray and Cookham, co. Berks, having separate jurisdiction, though locally in the hund. of Bray and Cookham, 7 miles N.W. of Windsor, 14 N.E. of Reading, and 26 from London, or 22½ by the Great Western railway, which has a station here. There is also a branch line to Oxford. The town, situated on the western bank of the Thames, is approached from the London road by a stone bridge of seven arches, built in 1772 at an expense of £20,000, to replace a wooden one of the reign of Edward III., for the repair of which a tree was allowed annually out of Windsor Forest. There is also a bridge of 10 brick arches, carrying the line of the Great Western railway across the Thames. With the exception of its river-front, the town is encircled by a fertile country, including the heights of Taplow and the dark belting wood of Clifden on the eastern bank of the Thames. Its ancient name was South Allington, or Elington, to distinguish it from North Elington, now North Town. It afterwards was called Maiden Hythe, of which its present name is a corruption. The first charter was granted in the reign of Edward III. for the purpose of keeping the bridge in proper repair; and, by a recent Act, the corporation were authorised to transfer the tolls received from vessels passing under the bridge to the traffic on the road over it. The government of the town is vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 common council, two of the aldermen retiring from office in rotation every three years, and four of the council every year. The town consists chiefly of one long street on the Old Bath-road, extending from the bridge to the bottom of Folly-hill. It contains a townhall, with market house beneath, a small gaol for the temporary confinement of prisoners, two commercial banks, one for savings, and a literary and scientific institute. The workhouse for the Cookham Poor-law Union is situated within the borough. The town is lighted with gas and paved, and is the great thoroughfare from the metropolis to Bath, Bristol, and the West of England. Petty sessions are held here, and it is a polling place for the county. There are two large breweries, flour mills, malt kilns, and an extensive timber trade. The living is a sinecure incumbency* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £172. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew and Mary Magdalene, is a modern structure, rebuilt in 1826, standing on the site of a chantry, said to have been founded by Queen Margaret, wife of Edward I. It has lately been repaired at a cost of nearly £500. The Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends, have each a place of worship. There is a Sunday-school for girls, endowed by Lady Pocock with property producing £81 per annum. Spoore's school has a revenue of £82; Seymor's, £18; and the National school an income from endowments of £60. Here is an almshouse for 8 poor couples, erected and endowed by James Smythe, Esq., in 1639, annual income, £48. There are also considerable sums left by Sir Isaac and Lady Pocock for the benefit of the poor, and rewards for servants of good character. The parochial charities amount altogether to £793. There are British and infant schools. On the river, at a short distance above the town, is a lock of solid stone, used for working a large corn mill, called the Ray Mill Lock. This was the birthplace of Rickman the architect. It was at the Greyhound Inn here that Charles I. took final leave of his children. Ives Place, Northfield House, Loggan House, and Ray Lodge are the principal residences. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the Wednesday in Whitsun-week, 29th September, and 30th November.

MAIDEN HOUSE, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N.W. of Sleaford.

MAIDEN-NEWTON, a par. in the hund. of Tollerford, co. Dorset, 8 miles N.W. of Dorchester, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Beaminster. It is situated on the river Frome, and is a station on the Great Western line of railway, which, from here, has a branch to Bridport. The par. includes the hmlts. of Cruxton and Notton. This place, which is now an inconsiderable village, was formerly a market town. Some of the people are employed in the manufacture of twine, and in an iron foundry and brewery. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £496. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient Norman edifice, built in the form of a cross, with a large embattled tower rising from the intersection. There are charities of about £10 per annum arising from a bequest of Jane Charming in 1835. The Independents have a chapel. There is a National school, with a small endowment. Near the end of the last century, some portions of Roman tesselated pavement were found on the lands of Mr. Sheridan at the southern extremity of the parish. The ancient rectory house is an antique building, with stained-glass windows, emblazoned with the arms of Wadham, Wyndham, and others.

MAIDEN PAPS, the name of several hills in Scotland, one in co. Caithness, near Dunbeath, and another in co. Roxburgh, near Hawick.

MAIDEN ROCKS, a dangerous reef about one mile long, off the coast of Antrim, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Larne. It is marked by two lighthouses, built in 1828, and is situated in N. lat. 54° 56′, and W. long., 5° 45′.

MAIDENWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Farforth, Wold div. of the hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S. of Louth. It was formerly a separate par., but was united to Farforth in 1753. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln.

MAIDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Greens-Norton, co. Northampton, 6 miles N.W. of Towcester, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Daventry. A tributary of the river Tow flows through the parish, and the Weedon station on the London and North-Western line of railway is about 6 miles N. of the village. The manufacture of silk stockings was formerly carried on, and many of the women are employed in making lace. There are quarries of building-stone and limestone. The greater portion of the tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act. There is a chalybeate spring, formerly in high repute. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £289. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone edifice, with a square tower surmounted with a pyramidal roof of tiles. The parochial charities produce £21 per annum, chiefly arising from 10 acres of land let in allotments, one half the rental of which is for church repairs, and the other for the poor. The Wesleyans have a chapel. William Grant, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MAIDS' MORETON, a par. in the hund. and co. of Bucks, 1 mile N.E. of Buckingham, its post town, and 6 miles S.W. of Stony Stratford. It is situated on the river Ouse, and a branch of the Grand Junction canal. This place derives the first part of its name from the circumstances under which the church was erected. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The soil is a mixture of clay and gravel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £294. The church was built in the middle of the 15th century by two maiden sisters, daughters of Lord Peover or Pegore. It has a tower, and is dedicated to St. Edmund. The interior was much defaced during the civil wars of Charles I., but retains still traces of its former beauty. It contains several stalls highly enriched, and some very old tombs and brasses. The parochial charities for the poor and other purposes produce nearly £90 per annum.

MAIDSTONE, a hund. in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, contains the borough of Maidstone, with the pars. of Barming, Boxley, Debtling, East Farleigh, Linton, and Loose, comprising an area of 12,830 acres, exclusive of the borough of Maidstone.

MAIDSTONE, a par., post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 8 miles from Rochester and Chatham, 24 W. of Canterbury, and 34 by road from London, or 44 by the North Kent railway. It is also a station on the South-Eastern railway. The town is situated on a declivity near the foot of a range of chalk hills on the eastern bank of the river Medway. This town, which consists of four principal streets, is of great antiquity, and was ranked by the Britons as their third city. According to Nennius, it was called Caer Meguaid or Medwig, from the name of the river Medway; it was afterwards called Medwagston or Medwegestan, and is the Meddestane of Domesday. At a very early period Maidstone formed part of the possessions of the see of Canterbury, and so remained until Archbishop Cranmer transferred it to Henry VIII. It was given by Edward VI. to Sir Thomas Wyatt, who raised the insurrection against Queen Mary, when it was confiscated to the crown. Charles I. presented the town to the Hattons, and it ultimately came into the possession of the Romney family. In 1648 it was stormed by Fairfax, but steadfastly maintained its loyalty during the civil war. Edward VI., Elizabeth, James I., Charles II., and George II., successively granted charters to the town.—Maidstone is remarkable for the excellence of its water, and the dryness of its soil. It has many fruit orchards and innumerable hop gardens. It is well paved and lighted, and supplied with water from reservoirs on the opposite bank of the Medway, the navigation of which has been greatly improved, and the traffic increased, by the construction of a lock 2 miles below the town. It returns two members to parliament, the old boundaries remaining unaltered by the Reform Bill; and is one of the polling places for West Kent. In 1851 the number of inhabited houses was 3,676, and the population 20,801, which in 1861 had increased to 23,058, while the number of houses had in the decennial period increased to 4,119. The cemetery is an extensive enclosure about a mile from the town.—Maidstone by the new Act was divided into three wards, and is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 town councillors. It has a large trade in hops, corn, and timber; numerous paper-mills; extensive stone quarries, from which the Kentish rag is obtained; and a few calico printers. In the town are also an extensive oil-mill, iron foundries, manufactories of felt, blankets, and hop bags, breweries, malt-houses, tan-yards, timber and coal wharves, and corn-mills. The chief public buildings are the assize court and county gaol, which was erected in 1818, at a cost of £200,000 (it covers 14 acres, and has 34 wards and upwards of 450 cells); the county lunatic asylum at Barming Heath, which has accommodation for nearly 700 inmates; the townhall, and, nearly opposite, a spacious corn exchange; cavalry barracks; the West Kent Infirmary, on the left bank of the river; and the Charles Museum. The bridge, which has seven arches, is very old. There are also gas-works, and butter and fish markets, besides assembly rooms, two banks, a savings-bank, mechanics' institute, and other benevolent institutions. There is a statue of the Queen by the late Mr. Thomas, under a stone canopy, by the side of which are drinking fountains erected in the High-street, bearing the inscription—"Alexander Randall to his native town."—The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £650, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is one of the largest parish churches in the kingdom, and was built about 1395 by Archbishop Courtenay. It is an excellent example of the perpendicular style, 227 feet long by 91 feet, and has four stone stalls and several old wooden ones, besides wall paintings, old brasses, and tombs. The church has recently been restored in a very costly manner, but the steeple, which was destroyed by lightning in 1730, has never been rebuilt. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of the Holy Trinity, St. Peter's, St. John's, St. Paul's, St. Philip's, and St. Stephen's at Tovil, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £420 to £95. There are also ten other places of worship, for Wesleyan Methodists, Independents, Baptists, and other Dissenters. There are numerous schools—a free grammar school on the foundation of St. Benet's guild of Corpus Christi, with two scholarships at University College, Oxford; a model school, Woodward's blue-coat and Sir C. Booth's schools; besides almshouses founded by Sir John Banks, Corrall, Hunter, Duke, and Brenchley, and numerous other charities. There are remains of Edward III.'s Grey friary foundation, of St. Faith's chapel used in Elizabeth's time by the Walloons, and of Archbishop Courtenay's college, of which Grocyn, the friend of Erasmus, was master. Several Protestant martyrs were burnt in Maidstone in the reign of Queen Mary. The plague raged here in three of the latter years of Queen Elizabeth's reign, also in 1604, 1607, and in 1666-7-8. Many persons of eminence have been born in this town, including Archbishop Lee in 1482, Jenkyns the composer, Jeffrys the painter, and Broughton, secretary at Charles I.'s trial. Two newspapers are published in Maidstone, the Maidstone Gazette and the Maidstone Journal, the former on Tuesday, and the latter on Tuesday and Saturday. The militia headquarters are here. Numerous Roman coins have been found at various times. There are corn and hop markets every Thursday and Saturday, and a cattle market the second Tuesday in each month. Fairs are held on the 13th February, 12th May, 20th June, and on the 17th October is the great hop fair.

MAIDWELL, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 10½ miles N. of Northampton, its post town, and 7 S. of Market Harborough. The village, which is small, is situated on the high road from Northampton to Market Harborough, and is chiefly agricultural. There are some mineral springs in the neighbourhood. The par. includes the hmlt. of Maidwell St. Peter's, formerly a distinct par. Limestone is quarried for building purposes, and for burning into lime. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1696 for land and a money payment. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £218. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. It is very neatly arranged, and is in good repair. The church of St. Peter, having become dilapidated, was taken down in 1543. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, including the endowment of a scholarship at Clare Hall, Cambridge, founded by Lady Trott, for a youth of this parish. There is a free school for both sexes. Henry H. H. Hungerford, Esq., of Dingley, is lord of the manor and the principal landowner.

MAIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Meifod, co. Montgomery, 3 miles S.E. of Llanfyllin.

MAINE, a river of co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its source is among the Knockacur and Knockanadirive hills. After a course of 24 miles, chiefly in a south-westerly direction, it falls into Dingle Bay at Castlemaine Harbour. It is joined by the Tullig at Castleisland, and by the Fleskroe at Currens.

MAINE, a stream of co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Its source is near the Gollin Mountain, in the bar. of Kilconway. It is about 25 miles long, and falls in Lough Neagh near Randalstown. It is joined by the Clogh near Springmount, and by the Kells and Braid at Gracehill. It has a cascade about 550 feet deep, and a good salmon fishery.

MAINHAM, a par. in the bar. of Ikeathy and Oughterany, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Clane. Maynooth is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is good. The road from Prosperous to Maynooth intersects the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Clane, £349, in the patron. of the crown. Here is Clongowe's Jesuit College.

MAINLAND OF ORKNEY, or POMONA, the chief and much the largest of the Orkney Islands, Scotland. It contains the pars. of Birsay, St. Andrew's, Deerness, Evie, Firth, Harray, Holm and Pophay, Kirkwall and St. Ola, Orphir, Rendall, Sandwick, Shenness and Stromness. The size of the island is 20 miles by 3 to 15, with an area of about 150 square miles. The surface consists of bare moor and moss, with pasture for small sheep and cattle; there are a few fertile valleys, and no part of the island is more than 4 or 5 miles from the sea. There are several fresh-water lakes, among which are Orphir, Stennis, Skaill, Birsay, and Aikerness. These send off streams which abound with fish, and turn several mills. Besides other game, grouse and plover are shot here. Half the inhabitants live by agriculture, and the other half are fishermen. The coast is much broken up, and on the W. is bold and precipitous. Around the whole coast safe anchorage and harbours occur, more particularly at Stromness, Kirkwall Dew, and Holm Sound.

MAINLAND OF SHETLAND, the largest of the Shetland Islands, Scotland. Its pars., though in most instances including adjacent minor islands, are Aithsting and Sandsting, Bressay, Burra and Tuarff, Delting, Dunrossness, Lerwick, Nesting, Limnasting and Whelsay, Northmavine, Tingwall, Whiteness and Weesdale, and Walls and Sandness. It is 60 miles in length, and its breadth varies from 3 to 10 miles, save at one point, called Mavis Grind, in Hagraster Voe, where it is only 100 yards broad. No part of the island is more than 3 miles from the sea. The coast, which is very irregular, consists of high rugged cliffs, deep inlets, or voes, and large caves. The surface is a succession of desolate hills and mosses, with a green hollow here and there, and attains a height of 1,500 feet at Rona, or Roeness Mountain. In the S. clay slate prevails, in the middle gneiss, in the N. greenstone and granite. But sandstone and many other specimens of rocks and minerals are found, as asbestos, garnet, copper and iron ores, &c.

MAINS AND STRATHDIGHTY, an united par. in co. Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Dundee, its post town, and includes the vils. of Kirkton and Beldovan—at the latter place is a station on the Dundee and Newtyle railway. The length of the parish is 5¾ miles by 3¼ at its greatest breadth. The surface is hilly, but fertile, and for the most part under cultivation. The chief streams are the Fithie Water and the Dighty Water. There are extensive freestone and slate quarries in the neighbourhood. The united par. is in the presb. of Dundee and synod of Angus and Mearns, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £217. In 1799 the two parishes were united, and both at that time had their respective church. The present church for the united parish is a commodious structure erected in 1800. There are a Free church and several schools, also an asylum for imbecile children, erected by Sir John and Lady Ogilvy. Mains was formerly called Mains of Fintry, after Fintry Castle, the old seat of the Grahams, which came to Claverhouse. The chief seats are Baldovan House, Strathmartine House, and Balmure House. About three-fourths of the inhabitants are employed in manufactures similar to those of Dundee. The parish is intersected by the Dundee and Newtyle railway.

MAINSBOROUGH, a hund. in the Winchester div. of co. Hants, contains the pars. of Brown Candover and Chilton Candover, comprising an area of 3,420 acres.

MAINSBRIDGE, a hund. in the Southampton div. of co. Hants. The upper div. contains the pars. of Botley, Burlesdon, Hamble-le-Rice, Hound, and St. Mary Extra, comprising an area of 9,320 acres; the lower division contains the pars. of Chilworth, Millbrook, North Stoneham, and part of South Stoneham, comprising an area of 10,460 acres.

MAINSFORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop-Middleham, N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 7 miles E. of Bishop Auckland, and 9 S. of Durham. It is situated on the river Little Skerne, and the ford of Mainway, across a morass formed by the stream, gives name to the village. The Darlington line of railway passes near the township, which is rich in limestone. The principal residence is Mainsforth Hall. On an adjoining hill is an old house called the Swan-House, where certain dues called the swan-oats were formerly paid to the convent of Durham. The antlers of a moose deer were found embedded in the soil at a spot in this township.

MAINS-OF-ERROL, a vil. in the par. of Errol, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Perth.

MAINSTONE, a div. of the hund. of Clun, co. Salop. It contains the pars. of Bettus, Llanvair, Waterdine, and part of Mainstone, comprising 22,590 acres.

MAINSTONE, a par. partly in the hund. of Clun, co. Salop, and partly in the hund. and co. of Montgomery, 4½ miles S.W. of Bishop's Castle, its post town. It is situated on Offa's Dyke, and includes the tnshps. of Castlewright, Edenope, Knuck, and Reilth. The village is a small agricultural place. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £293, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £4 16*s.* per annum. A school for boys and girls is supported by subscription.

MAINSTONE, a tythg. in the lib. of Romsey, co. Hants, near Romsey.

MAIN WATER, a stream of co. Ayr, Scotland, rises under Benerard, and joins the river Luce at New Luce.

MAISEMORE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles N.W. of Gloucester, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Hartbury. The village, which is small, is situated at the bridge over the river Severn, which occasionally overflows the adjoining lands. It is wholly agricultural. The soil on the banks of the Severn consists of a red loamy clay, but in the higher places of gravel. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1793. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £89, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a stone structure with an embattled tower containing three bells. The chancel has lately been restored. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. Maisemon Lodge is the principal residence, from which there are fine views of the surrounding country.

MAISEY, a tythg. in the par. of Ogbourne St. Andrew, co. Wilts, 1 mile N. of Marlborough.

MAISEY-HAMPTON. See HAMPTON MASSEY, co. Gloucester.

MAISTERTON, a par. now annexed to Newbattle, co. Edinburgh, Scotland.

MAKER, a par. partly in the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, and partly in the hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Devonport, its post town. It is situated near Cremil-ferry, and contains the populous vils. of Milbrook and Inceworth. It was formerly a borough and market town under the Trefusis family. On Maker's height are the military barracks, and a formidable battery for the defence of Plymouth Sound, which bounds the parish on the S.E. At Wood Park is a rope-factory, and boat-building is carried on at Middle Anderton. The land is of a hilly nature, with a loamy soil, but the lower grounds are clayey, with a stony subsoil. Mount Edgecumbe House, the seat of the Edgecumbe family, and from which its representative derives the title of earl, was originally built in the reign of Mary, and was garrisoned for Charles I. It occupies an elevated site commanding an extensive prospect. At the courts-leet which are held by the lords of the manors a portreeve, constable, and other officers are appointed. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £223, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Macra, is an ancient stone structure with a tower and steeple containing six bells. It stands on a hill between Mount Edgecumbe and Ramhead, within the county of Devon, and serves as a landmark to mariners. There is a district church at Milbrook, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150. The parochial charities produce about £63 10*s.* per annum, besides the interest of £96 in the savings-bank. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions, also three Sunday-schools. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel at Milbrook. The parish contains two manors, of which Lord Clinton is lord of the manor in co. Cornwall, and Earl Mount Edgecumbe of the manor in co. Devon. Fairs are held on 1st May and 29th September for cattle.

MAKERSTOWN, a par. in the Kelso district of co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Kelso. Its length eastward is about 3 miles, and its greatest breadth 2½. The surface consists of a plain sloping towards the S. The soil in the S. is a rich loam, and thin clay in the N. The greater proportion of the area is under cultivation. The river Tweed traces the southern and south-eastern boundary of the parish. It is in the presb. of Kelso, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £240. The parish church was erected in 1807, and there is also a Free church. Makerstown House, the seat of Sir Thomas M. Brisbane, Bart., the principal landowner, has an observatory in lat. 55° 34′ 45″ N., long. 2° 31′ W.

MALAHIDE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The par. is 2 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 1½ mile. The soil is mostly of first-rate quality. Malahide Bay, on the mouth of the Broadmeadow Water, washes the parish on the N. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £99, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Patrick's. The church is in the early English style, erected in 1832 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Swords. There are two schools, one of which is under the National board. Malahide Castle was restored by and is the seat of Lord Talbot de Malahide. It is a noble pile, and contains among other splendid compartments the "Oak Chamber," with fine carvings. There is a large collection of valuable pictures, and an altar-piece by Durer, said to have come from the oratory of Mary Queen of Scots. The grounds are elegantly laid out, and open to visitors every day. Seapark is the next attractive seat. The village is situated on Malahide Bay, near Lambay Island and Ireland's Eye, 9 miles N. of Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin and Drogheda railway, and the seat of coastguard and police stations. Numerous visitors resort here during the bathing season, to whom several good inns offer accommodation. The principal trade of the place is derived from a somewhat extensive oyster bed in the bay. Malahide was granted to Richard Talbot by the crown in 1174. During the Commonwealth it was held by M. Corbet, who resided here some time. Near the castle stand the remains of the old church, with tombs to the Talbot family. There is a dispensary, which is within the Balrothery Poor-law Union. The railroad is carried across the harbour by means of a wooden viaduct.

MALBOROUGH, or MARLBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge, its post town. It is an agricultural village situated on one of the loftiest points in the county, overlooking the British Channel. The parish is bounded on the S. by the open sea, between Bolt Head and Sail. Part of Malborough parish is included for ecclesiastical purposes in that of West Alvington. The other part is united with the seaport of Salcombe and seven hamlets. There are ruins of Ilton Castle, erected in 1336 for the defence of the coast; also remains of Fort Charles, repaired by Charles I. at an expense of £3,000, but taken by the parliamentarian forces in 1645. An estuary extends from Bolt Head to Kingsbridge Quay, a distance of 6 miles. The surface is hilly, and the land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 500 acres of waste. The soil is a red marl, alternating with a white loam and sand in some parts. At Woodville, in this parish, the temperature is so mild that oranges, citrons, myrtles, and olives flourish in the open air, requiring only temporary protection in very severe weather. The Duke of Devon, as vice-admiral, holds an admiralty court here, the jurisdiction of which embraces an extensive line of coast. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of West Alvington, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is an ancient edifice with a lofty tower surmounted by a spire, and containing six bells. It stands on a commanding eminence near Bolt Head. The interior of the church contains a monument to the late Lord Kinsale; besides which there are several relics of ancient date. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, the bequests of Mrs. Alice Bayning and Richard Dyer for church repairs and for the poor. There are National, industrial, and infant schools; also a small chapel for the Baptists.

MALBOROUGH, an ext. par. place in the borough of Droitwich, co. Worcester.

MALDEN, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Kingston, co. Surrey, 2 miles S.E. of Kingston, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Ewell. It is a station on the Epsom and Leatherhead branch of the South-Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated on a rapid stream called the Hogg's Mill. It is wholly agricultural, but extensive powder mills have been established in the parish. Merton College was founded here in 1264 by Walter de Merton, Bishop of Rochester, but afterwards removed to Oxford. Malden is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Maeldane. The land is chiefly arable, with some woodland and common. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240, and the vicarial for £75. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Chessington annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £417, in the patron. of Merton College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John, has a square tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains an old hour-glass stand near the pulpit. The church was restored and repewed in 1848. The register dates from 1676. There is a National school. At Chessington is a powerful chalybeate spring called Jessop's Well.

MALDON, a market town, bonding port, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 10 miles E. of Chelmsford, 16 S.W. of Colchester, and 37 N.E. by E. of London by road, or 44 by the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a principal station, having branch lines to Witham and Braintree. It is situated on a hill on the right bank of the Chelmer, about a mile above its junction with the river Blackwater, and 12 miles from the sea. The haven is convenient, and vessels of 200 tons can come up to the bridge during spring tides; but a canal, 2¼ miles long, cut from above the town to Collier's Reach quay, passing Heybridge, has transferred part of the trade thither. Its subports are, Burnham, Bradwell, Leigh, and Rochford.—The town of Maldon is of ancient date, having been fortified in the Saxon times by Edward the Elder against the Danes, who attacked it in 921 without success, and again in 993 under Unlaff, when they were victors. It was first incorporated by charter of Henry II., and has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward III. The bounds of the old borough, which contained the three parishes of St. Mary, St. Peter, and All Saints, were extended under the Reform Act so as to include the adjoining parishes of Beleigh, Heybridge, Spital, and Northey Island. The population of the parliamentary borough in 1861 was 6,261, against 5,888 in 1851, and of the municipal 4,785 against 4,558, showing a considerable increase in the decennial period. It is also a polling place for the southern division of the county. The municipal corporation consists of a mayor, who is also returning officer, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with a recorder, treasurer, coroner, and other officers. It has a revenue of £660. The corporation bears the style of "mayor, aldermen, and capital burgesses and commonalty of Maldon," and has jurisdiction not only over the borough, but at sea, for 25 miles eastward of Knowle Sands. Borough quarter and petty sessions are held here, and the county court sits every alternate month.—The town, which is well paved and lighted with gas, is situated on an acclivity rising abruptly from the S. bank of the river Blackwater, here crossed by a bridge. It consists mainly of two streets crossing at right angles, with several smaller streets. The houses are in general well built, and there are many excellent shops. The principal buildings are the townhall, a lofty and ancient structure of brick, sometimes called the D'Arcey Tower, from Robert D'Arcey, its founder, who in the reign of Henry V. was the king's escheator for this county; the public hall, a modern structure in the High-street, containing the corn exchange and the mechanics' institute; the county court-house, a building recently erected in the London-road; the railway station, a building in the Elizabethan style; the custom-house, an old brick building situated in Fullbridge, where is also the union poorhouse. There are also assembly rooms, a police and fire-engine station, museum, two banks, savings-bank, gas-works, &c. In the town and its immediate neighbourhood are malt-houses, flour-mills, a brewery, boat-building yards, sail-lofts, rope-walks, wharves, iron-foundries, agricultural implement and machine manufactory, saw-mills, cooperages, lime-kilns, brick and tile yard, and on the Blackwater extensive salt-works and fisheries. The principal business is in the oyster fisheries, coal, timber, and general trade.—Maldon is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing 34 parishes, with which the superintendent registry and new County Court districts also correspond. The custom of borough-English prevails in the manor, which gives title of viscount to the Earl of Essex.—The town consists of three parishes, All Saints', St. Peter's, and St. Mary's, but the first two were united in 1306 for ecclesiastical purposes. The living of All Saints is a vic.* with that of St. Peter annexed, in the dioc. of Rochester, joint val. £319. The church of All Saints, standing in the upper part of the town, is an ancient and spacious edifice, in the decorated style. It has a triangular tower at the W. end, surmounted by a hexagonal spire, and containing six bells. It contains an old font of Purbeck marble, and several windows enriched with stained glass, and one a copy of one in Melrose Abbey; also tombs of the D'Arcies, and of Vernon, the Levant merchant, who imported his own tombstone from Smyrna. There were formerly three chantries attached. The register dates from 1556. The church of St. Peter, having fallen into ruins, except the tower, Dr. Plume, then Archdeacon of Rochester, erected on its site, in 1704, a brick building, adjoining the tower, to contain his rich theological library, which he presented to the town. The living of St. Mary's is a perpet. cur., val. £165, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church, situated in the lower part of the town, on the river bank, is a spacious structure, rebuilt in the reign of Charles I. on the site of a more ancient one founded in 1056 by Ingelric the Saxon. The tower, which appears to be older than the rest of the building, is a massive pile, supported by immense buttresses, and containing six bells. The Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Society of Friends, have each a large and well-built chapel. The grammar school, founded by Alderman Breeder in 1608, was further endowed by Dr. Plume, who was born in this town in 1630, and subsequently founded the Plumian professorship of astronomy in Cambridge University. There are National, British, and infant schools for boys and girls.—About 1 mile W. of the town are the interesting ruins of Beleigh Abbey, founded in 1180 by Robert de Mantell, and now converted into a farmhouse. There was also a Carmelite friary at Maldon founded about 1291 by Bishop de Gravesande. Dr. Baker, of Maldon Hall, is lord of the manor.—Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in May, and 13th and 14th September, for horses and cattle.

MALEW. See KIRK MALEW, Isle of Man.

MALHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-in-Malham, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Settle. It is a small village situated in the fertile vale of Malham-Dale, chiefly the property of Lord Ribblesdale, who is lord of the manor. At the head of the Dale is Malham-Cove, a limestone ridge 286 feet in height, extending across the valley, which in rainy weather so pents up the waters of the rivulet that they rise to the summit of the ridge, and, rushing over, form a magnificent cataract. There are some lead mines, which, however, have not proved profitable in the working. Calamine and limestone of excellent quality also abound. The lands are chiefly pasture and meadow, the herbage being of the finest quality. In the village is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a free school, founded and endowed by Rowland Brayshaw in 1717. Near the village is Jennett's Cave, a dark and gloomy recess overhung with ivy. Fairs are held on the 30th June for lambs, and 15th October for sheep.

MALHAM-MOOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-in-Malham-Dale, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Settle. It is situated near Malham, at the head of the river Aire, which rises in Malham Water, a lake well stocked with trout and perch. This lake, or tarn, as it is called, is about 1 mile in diameter, and formerly, with the adjoining lands, belonged to Fountains Abbey. On one side the waters force their way through some fissures in the rock, forming a cascade near 100 feet in height. The surface of this township is chiefly high moorland, affording tolerable pasturage for sheep. The principal residence is Tarn Hall, a mansion commanding views of the lake and its surrounding scenery.

MALIN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Cloncha, in the bar. of Innishowen, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Camdonagh, and 169 from Dublin. It is situated near the head of Strabeagy Bay. There is a police station, and petty sessions are held at intervals. About 6 miles N.W. of the village is Malin Head, the most northerly point of Ireland, in N. lat. 55° 22′. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday, the 23rd June, 1st August, and 1st November.

MALIN BAY, a rocky inlet on the coast of Donegal, Ireland, between Teelin Head and Rossan Point.

MALIN BEG and MALIN MORE, vils. in the par. of Cloncha, in the bar. of Innishowen, co. Donegal, Ireland. They are situated on Malin Bay, under Leban Mountain.

MALIN-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nether-Hallam, par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile W. of Sheffield.

MALINSLEE, a tnshp. in the par. of Dawley Magna, co. Salop, 4 miles W. of Shiffnal. It is a station on the Coalport branch of the London and North-Western railway. Most of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Dawley. The church is modern.

MALLAMS, a hmlt. in the par. of Portland, co. Dorset, 4 miles S. of Weymouth.

MALLARDSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Kells, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E.S.E. of Callan. Kilkenny is its post town. It is 2½ miles long, and its extreme breadth is 2 miles. The surface consists of a fertile portion of the valley of the King's river. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Kells, £551, in the patron. of the Bishop and Marquis of Ormond. Millardstown House is the residence of the locality.

MALLERSTANG, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kirkby Stephen, East Ward, co. Westmoreland, 2½ miles S.E. of Kirkby Stephen, its post town. The tnshp., which is extensive, is situated near Pendragon Castle, under Wild Boar Fell, which occupies the southern extremity of the tnshp. It comprises the hmlts. of Castlethwaite, Hanging-Lund, Outhgill, Shortgill, Southwaite, and the district of Hellgill. The houses are much scattered on both sides of the Eden stream, which is here crossed by a bridge built by the Countess of Pembroke in 1661. This stream, which flows through the centre of the tnshp., issues from a mountain on the borders of Yorkshire, from which the rivers You and Swale also take their rise. There are collieries and a slate quarry. On a hill near the village is a stone pillar erected by the Countess of Pembroke, called Morrill's Seat. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £64. The church is a neat structure, rebuilt by the Countess of Pembroke in 1663. There is a school for the children of the Dale. At Castlethwaite, in this township, are the ruins of a square tower that formed part of Pendragon Castle, originally built by Uter Pendragon in the time of Vortigern, and the walls of which are 12 feet thick. It was burned by the Scots in 1541, but was completely repaired in 1661, and finally dismantled by the Earl of Thanet in 1681. At a short distance from the castle is an ancient fortification, surrounded by a moat and vallum.

MALLING, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 3 miles S.W. of Aylesford, and 5 W. of Maidstone, its post town. It contains the hmlt. of Larkfield. Hops are grown here in considerable quantities. The river Medway bounds the parish on the N. The two paper mills give employment to a number of the people. Brickmaking is carried on. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1805, and has since been exchanged for a rent-charge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. with the cur. of New Hythe annexed, of £757. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure with a tower. There are almshouses for five poor widows, with an annuity of £12 to each, founded by Elizabeth Smith. There is an endowed National school for both sexes, for which a new building has been recently erected. Clare House and Bradbourne House are the principal residences. A fair is held on the 15th July for pedlery.

MALLING, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Ringmer, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 1 mile N. of Lewes. The par. is bounded on the W. by the river Ouse. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey, at which time the church was collegiate. At the Dissolution, the dean and prebendaries had a revenue of £45 12s. The Archbishops of Canterbury had formerly a palace here, of which the chapel has been converted into a cottage. The workhouse for the Lewes Poor-law Union is situated in this parish. In December, 1836, eight persons were killed here by an avalanche of snow from the hill above the village. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Lewes and dioc. of Chichester. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £117. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was rebuilt in 1632 on the site of an ancient one founded in the 7th century by Ceadwalla, king of the West Saxons. It was repaired and re-paved in 1837, and contains an altar-tomb to Sir William and Lady Kemp. The principal residences are Malling House and the Deanery.

MALLING TOWN, or WEST MALLING, a par. and decayed market town in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2 miles W. of East Malling, and 5½ N.W. of Maidstone. It was anciently called Malinges, and was given by Edward the Confessor to the Bishops of Rochester, one of whom, Cundulph, founded a Benedictine nunnery here in 1090, which, about a century afterwards, was burnt, but again restored. Its revenue, at the Dissolution, was returned at £245 10s. 2½d. The W. front of the abbey is all that now remains, forming an interesting ruin. Adjoining it is the modern mansion, called Malling Abbey, built by the Honeywoods partly out of the remains of the old structure. The market, granted with the fairs to the abbess, in the reign of Henry III., was held on Saturday, but has long been discontinued. The town, situated in a healthy spot, is neatly built, and contains some good houses. The streets are wide and well paved. Petty sessions for the upper half of the S. division of the lathe of Aylesford are held in the town. More than a third of the parish is woodland, and a considerable portion laid out in hop grounds. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Maidstone and dioc. of Canterbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a Norman tower at the W. end. In 1778, it was re-roofed, and a new spire subsequently added. It contains a monument to Sir Robert Brett. The Baptists have a place of worship. There is a National school. It is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 22 parishes, and the seat of a superintendent registry; but it is included in the Maidstone new County Court district. Fairs are held on the 12th August, 2nd October, and 17th November.

MALLOCH. See MARNOCH, co. Banff.

MALLOW, a par., post, and market town in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The par. has a small portion lying within the bar. of Duhallow. It is 4½ miles long by 3½ broad, and contains, besides the town of its own name, the vil. of Lackanalooha. The surface consists of a part of the valley of the Blackwater river. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £450. The church, which stands in the town, was erected in 1820 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It is a handsome structure. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, and meeting-houses for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and for Independents. The principal seats are Dromore, Mallow, Bearforest, Carrig Longueville, and Quartertown. The town is situated on the N. bank of the river Blackwater, at the cross roads from Cork to Limerick, and from Dublin to Millstreet, 20 miles N. of Cork, and 147 from Dublin. It is a station on the Killarney branch of the Great Southern and Western railway. It consists principally of one long street, well paved, and presenting a neat appearance. A bridge of three arches connects the town with its suburb Ballydaheen, which forms part of the borough. Mallow is a parliamentary borough and excise town, governed by a manor seneschal and 21 commissioners. It was first chartered by James I., and sent two members to the Irish parliament; but since the Union, it has sent but one representative to parliament. The constituency in 1859 was 151. It contains a chief police station, court-house, market-house, excise office, bridewell, two banks, a savings-bank, barracks, spa-room, tan-works, mills, newsroom, club, dispensary, fever hospital, and poorhouse. The population in 1861 was 4,824. The Agricultural Association and Duhallow hunt meet here. Mallow owes its importance to the existence of its warm spring, the waters of which are similar in properties to those of Clifton, and, being in much repute, the place is frequented in the season by numbers of fashionable folks. The surrounding country is dotted with numerous villas and county residences. Mallow was anciently a possession of the Desmond family, by whom it was forfeited, and whose ancient stronghold, Mallow Castle, is seen near the bridge. The town, after its forfeiture, was granted to Sir John Morris, from whom it came to the Jephsons. At the opposite extremity of the town, stands Castle Gurr. In 1642 the place was attacked by Lord Mountgarret, and, in 1690, Mac Donnough made advances upon the town soon after the Battle of the Boyne, but met with a decided repulse. Mallow Poor-law Union contains 13 electoral divisions in co. Cork, with 25 guardians. The poorhouse has room for 1,450. Quarter and petty sessions are held here. Tuesday and Friday are market days. Fairs are held on 1st January, Monday before Shrove Tuesday, 13th May, 27th July, and 30th October. Great cattle markets are held on the 1st Tuesday in each month, and races are run in September.

MALLTRAETH, a hund. in co. Anglesea. It is situated on Maltraeth Bay, and contains the pars. of Aberffraw, Cerrig-Ceinwen, Heneglwys, Llangadwaladr, Llangristiolus, Llangwyfan, with Trefdraeth. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Bangor.

MALLWYD, a par. in the hunds. of Talybout and Mathrafel, cos. Merioneth and Montgomery, 9 miles from Dolgelly, its post town, and 2 S. of Dinas-Mowddwy. It is situated on the river Dyfi, under Camlan and Moel Dyfi, comprising Dinas and 7 other tnshps. Mallwyd is a favourite resort of anglers, and, from its varied scenery, is much frequented by artists. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £255, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Tydecho, is a small, plain structure, with the communion-table in the centre. The churchyard is famous for its yew trees, one of which is 24 feet in girth. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. At Pont-Fallwyd, a short distance from the village, is a waterfall of the river Dovy.

MALMESBURY, a hund. in co. Wilts, containing the pars. of Abbay, Ashley, Bremilham, Brinkworth, Brokenborough, with Charlton, Crudwell, Dauntsey, Draycot-Cerne, Foxley, Garsdon, Hankerton, Kemble, Lee, Malmesbury St. Paul, Long Newnton, Norton-Coleparle, Oaksey, Poole-Keynes, Seagry, Great and Little Somerford, St. Quintin Stanton, Sutton Benger, St. Mary Westport, and parts of Hullavington and Minty, comprising an area 57,030 acres.

MALMESBURY, a par., post., and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 42 miles N. of Salisbury, 94 W. of London, and 7 W. of the Minety station on the Great Western railway. It is situated on elevated ground on the river Avon, over which there are six bridges. The converging branches of the river partly encircle the town, uniting at its southern extremity, where they form the Lower Avon. It is stated by Leland to have been an ancient British town, called Caer Bladon; but the earliest historical mention is of the middle of the 7th century, when a fortress existed here called Ingelburne. It was subsequently famed for its mitred Benedictine abbey, founded on the site of the hermitage of St. Mailduff and Aldhelm, hence called Mealdelmesbyrig by Bishop Leutherius of Winchester, in 675. Buildings gradually arose round the abbey, forming a town which was chartered by Edward the Elder, and was endowed by Athelstan with the common called King's Heath. It continued to flourish, notwithstanding the ravages of the Danes, and, at the time of the Conquest, was one of the most important places in Wilts. A castle was built here by Bishop Roger, of Salisbury, in Henry I.'s time, which was taken by Stephen, and again, in 1152, by Prince Henry, afterwards Henry II., who laid siege to this fortress, and took it after an obstinate defence. The abbot was made a mitred parliamentary baron by Edward III., and the revenue of the abbey at the Dissolution was £803 17*s.* 7*d.* The town, which gives title of earl and baron to the Harrises of Great Durnford, was garrisoned in the Civil War for Charles I., and was twice taken by the parliamentary army.—Under the Charter of Incorporation, confirmed by William III. in 1696, it is governed by a high steward, an alderman, and 12 capital burgesses. It returned two members to parliament from Edward I.'s time, but, since the Reform Act, it returns but one, the right of election being extended to the £10 householders of an enlarged district.—The town is well lighted with gas, and was paved under authority of an Act of Parliament obtained in 1798. It consists of a principal street, called High-street, which is crossed at the top by Oxford-street and Gloucester-street, the latter leading to the parish of Westport St. Mary. It contains two banks, a savings-bank, townhall, and a spacious market-place, in which is an octangular market cross, erected in the reign of Henry VII., and ornamented with flying buttresses, pinnacles, and an octangular central turret. A brisk trade was formerly carried on in woollen cloth, but is now decayed. There are breweries, tanyards, and a newly-established ribbon manufactory; pillow lace is also made by the women and children. Malmesbury Common, or King's Heath, which was given to the town by King Athelstan, was enclosed under an Act of Parliament, passed in 1826, which entitles every freeman in the borough to one allotment, and to every capital burgess from 8 to 15 acres. The loftiest point of the common is Shade Hill.—The town is a polling-place for North Wiltshire, and petty sessions for the hundred of Malmesbury are held here once a month. The outlying portions of the new borough are chiefly in meadow and pasture, with a small proportion of rich arable land.

The old borough comprises parts of the parishes of St. Paul, St. Mary Westport, and the Abbey district.—The living of St. Paul's is a discharged vic., valued in the king's books at £8 2s. 1½d. The church is dilapidated, but the tower, surmounted by a lofty spire, is still standing, and contains the bells, rung on public festivals. The living of St. Mary is a vic.* with the perpet. curs. of Rodborne and Corston annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, joint val. £265, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church dedicated to St. Mary is supposed to have been built by Bishop Roger of Salisbury, and formerly belonged to the abbey. That part only is used which was given to the town by William Stumpe, the wealthy clothier, by whom it was purchased at the Dissolution. This portion consists of the W. front, nave, and its aisles, part of the transepts, and the decorated south porch, containing the figures of the Twelve Apostles in fine preservation. About thirty years since the whole fabric was substantially repaired and the vaulted roof restored. The interior is handsomely fitted up, and over the altar is a painting representing Christ raising Lazarus, which was presented by the Earl of Suffolk. There are chapels-of-ease at Corston and Rodborne. The parochial charities produce about £215 per annum. There are almshouses endowed with £20 per annum, National and infant schools, besides private and endowed schools. The Independents, Moravians, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Calvinistic Methodists have places of worship.—Near Westport Church stands the house where Thomas Hobbs, the famed philosopher, resided. He was a native of this place, as was also Mrs. Mary Chandler the poetess, and William of Malmesbury, the celebrated English historian of the reign of Stephen. At King's Walls Roman coins and triangular bricks have been found, with traces of Bishop Roger's town wall. The poorhouse for the Malmesbury Poor-law Union, which embraces 25 parishes in Wilts, is situated on the road to Sherston, on the site of ground where formerly stood a convent of the Knights Hospitallers. In this building, of which some small portions remain, Henry VIII. was entertained by Stumpe, the wealthy clothier, and Charles I. dined in 1643. Lord Northwick is lord of the manor.—A small market for general provisions is held on Saturday, and markets for cattle on the last Tuesdays in every month, except March, April, and May. Annual fairs for horses, cattle, and sheep, are held on the 28th March, 28th April, 5th June, and 15th December.

MALONE, a hmlt. and the seat of a post-office, in the bar. of Upper Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Belfast. It is situated in the valley of the Lagan river. Here stands a new church. Malone House is in the vicinity.

MALPAS, a par., post and market town, chiefly in the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, but partly in the hund. of Maylor, co. Flint, 5 miles N.E. of Whitchurch, and 10 S. of the Beeston station on the Chester and Crewe railway. It is situated on an eminence near the river Dee and Ellesmere canal, and contains Beckley, Broxton, Bickerton, and 21 other tnshps. Malpas was anciently called Depembech, signifying a bad pass or road, and was given by Hugh Lupus, the first Norman Earl of Chester, to Robert Fitzhugh, who had a castle here, but no traces of it are now visible, except a circular mound on which the keep stood. The ancient barons exercised capital jurisdiction within the limits of the barony. It has descended through the Suttons, St. Pierres, &c., principally to the Cholmondeleys, who take hence the title of viscount. It is a polling-place for the election of members for the southern division of the county, and petty sessions are held in the town. Courts leet and baron are held annually, at which constables are appointed. The town is situated on an eminence near the Shrewsbury and Chester road, and commands extensive prospects over a great part of North Wales, Staffordshire, and the Vale Royal. It consists of four streets, which diverge at right angles from a common centre. It is amply supplied with water from a public well, and is well paved. The magistrates meet monthly at Broxton. The excise-office is held at the Red Lion inn. The houses are in general low and irregularly built. The living is a rect.,* in two medieties, called the higher and lower, in the dioc. of Chester, val. £1,000 and £910 respectively. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, has a tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior of the church was restored and beautified at great expense in 1841. It forms a grand appearance with its richly clustered pillars supporting six lofty pointed arches, and a gallery at the W. end. The ceiling is of dark oak, empanelled and richly carved, and the floor inlaid with encaustic tiles. The E. window is ornamented with glass medallions of great antiquity, the gift of the present Marquis of Cholmondeley. There are richly carved screens, enclosing the two ancient chapels of the Cholmondeley and Brereton families, in which are several stained windows, with tombs and effigies of those families. In addition to the parish church, there are two endowed chapels, at Tushingham and Bickerton, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* val. £144 and £120. The parochial charities produce about £302 per annum, of which £119 goes to Alport's school, £25 to the free grammar school, and £34 to Brereton's almshouses. An infant school has been recently added to the Alport school. Fairs are held on the 5th April, 26th July, and 8th December, for cattle and pedlery.

MALPAS, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 1 mile N.W. of Newport, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Brecon canal, near the river Usk. There was formerly a Cluniac cell to Montacute Priory, in Somersetshire, founded by William de Balun in the reign of Henry I., which at the Dissolution was given to the Herberts. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £100. The church, which formerly belonged to the priory, is an ancient stone structure, dedicated to St. Oswald. It has an embattled tower crowned with pinnacles, and a carved oak ceiling, and stalls with effigies of the 14th century. The tithes were commuted in 1839. Malpas court is the principal residence. There is a National school.

MALSWICK, a tythg. in the par. of Newent, hund. of Botloe, co. Gloucester, near Newent.

MALTBY, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Raithby, hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Louth. Here was formerly a preceptory of Knights Templars, which was afterwards transferred to the Hospitallers.

MALTBY, a par. in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding co. York, 6 miles E. of Rotherham, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Sheffield. It is situated in a fertile and richly wooded valley on the high road from Rotherham to Bawtry, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Hooton Levett. There are the ruins of Roche Abbey, consisting of the entrance gate, transept, &c. There is also a stone cross of great antiquity. The soil is clay and loam on a subsoil of limestone. The celebrated Roche Abbey quarries, which furnished the stone for the richly groined roof of King's College, Cambridge, are in this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has a spired tower containing three bells. The church was rebuilt in 1859, exclusive of the tower. It has a memorial window. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, of which £15 goes to the National schools. There are also Sunday and infant schools. The Wesleyans and Reformed Methodists have places of worship. Sandbeck Hall, a seat of the Earl of Scarborough, is a stone mansion, situated in an extensive park well stocked with deer. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MALTBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Stainton, W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Stokesley, and 3 E. of Yarm. It is situated near the river Tees.

MALTBY-LE-MARSH, a par. in the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Alford, its nearest railway station and post town. It is a small but improving village, wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £294. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £256. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. The chancel contains the effigy of a man in armour, said to be one of the knights who fell in a duel at Earl's Bridge. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum, of which £78 goes to Bolle's charity school, and the remainder to the poor. A large new schoolhouse, with residence for the master and mistress, was erected in 1849 at the expense of the Rev. J. Allott. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship. Captain Moor is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MALTEY, an islet in Rona Strait, W. coast of Inverness, Scotland, near the Isle of Skye.

MALTHYRAFEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangyniew, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N.E. of Llanfair.

MALTON, OLD AND NEW, a market town, parliamentary and municipal borough, in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 21¾ miles N.E. of York, and 213 by road from London. It has stations on the Thirsk, Malton, and Driffield, and on the York, Whitby, and Scarborough lines of railway. The town, which comprises the two pars. of New and Old Malton, is situated on a hill on the N. bank of the river Derwent, here crossed by a stone bridge of three arches, connecting the town with the populous suburb of Norton, in the East Riding. In the vicinity is the Whitby Junction, where there are several branch lines of railway communicating with the neighbouring towns. It is a place of very remote antiquity, and is supposed to have been a Roman station where the equites singulares, or emperor's body-guard, were stationed. In the Saxon times it became a royal vill of the kings of Northumbria, and subsequently belonged to Colebrand the Dane. It was given by the Conqueror to Gilbert Tyson, and had a strong castle, which Eustace St. John gave up to David, King of Scotland. It was taken by Archbishop Thurston, and burnt, but was rebuilt by Eustace Fitzjohn in the reign of Stephen. The castle was finally destroyed by Henry II., and on its site a castellated mansion was built by Lord Eure in the reign of James I., of which only the lodge and entrance gateway are now remaining. It is a borough by prescription, returning two members to parliament from 1640, and twice in the reign of Edward I., the bailiff being the returning officer. Under the Reform Act the limits have been extended by the addition of Old Malton and Norton, the latter being a suburb on the left bank of the river Derwent, which was made navigable from this point to the river Ouse in the reign of Queen Anne, thus affording water communication with Hull, Leeds, Halifax, and other places. The town is governed by a bailiff and two constables, chosen at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. It has a board of health, and petty sessions are held every alternate Saturday. The general quarter sessions for the North Riding also take place here. It is well lighted with gas, and paved. It contains three banks, a savings-bank, mechanics' and literary institutions, with a library and newsrooms, townhall, corn exchange, county court-house, assembly rooms, masonic hall, theatre, and spacious market-place, from which the several streets diverge. The houses are generally well built, and many of them of modern erection. The meetings of the Board of Guardians are held at the county court-house. The Malton Horticultural Society hold their meetings here. There are corn-mills, breweries, maltings, iron and brass foundries, and agricultural machine works. Lime and whinstone are quarried to a considerable extent. On the W. side of the town is the cattle market, occupying an open area of 3 acres, on which slaughter-houses have been erected by Earl Fitzwilliam, who is lord of the manor and proprietor of the greater part of the land, which he inherits through the Wentworths. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £170 Old Malton church is an ancient stone structure dedicated to St. Mary. There are also two district churches in New Malton, viz. St. Michael's and St. Leonard's, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £195 each. The church of St. Leonard's has a lofty unfinished spire, and that of St. Michael's, situated in the market-place, is of great antiquity, with a square western tower. The parochial charities produce about £101, of which £96 goes to the free grammar school of Old Malton, founded in 1547. There are National, British, and infant schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists, have each a chapel. There is also a meeting-house for Quakers. At Old Malton are traces of a priory of Gilbertine canons, founded by Eustace Fitz-John in 1150. The union poorhouse is partly situated in St. Leonard's, and partly in Old Malton parishes. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held in the week prior to Palm Sunday, on the Saturday before Whitsuntide, and on the 11th October.

MALTRAETH, a bay on the coast of Anglesea, 3 miles S.E. of Aberffraw. It is dry at low water, with a sandy bottom, and is of considerable importance, being near the line of the Chester and Holyhead railway.

MALVERN, GREAT, a par. and post town in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 5 miles N. of Upton-on-Severn, and 8 W. of Worcester. It is a station on the Worcester and Hereford line of railway, and the junction station of the Tewkesbury and Malvern branch line. It is a watering-place, situated on the eastern declivity of the Malvern hills, which here separate the counties of Worcester and Hereford. The par. contains the hmlts. of Barnard's Green and Newland, besides the town of Malvern, which has recently become a place of considerable importance. Here was anciently an hermitage, founded in the reign of Edward the Confessor, which was made a Benedictine cell to Westminster Abbey by Aldewine, the hermit, in 1083. Of the conventual buildings, the ancient Tudor gateway, Abbey barn, and church, are all that now remain. The Malvern hills consist of about twenty distinct summits, the whole forming a circle extending 9 miles in length from N. to S., and 2 broad. The highest points are the Herefordshire Beacon Camp, which is 1,444 feet above sea level, and the Worcestershire Beacon, 1,300 feet, affording excellent pasturage for sheep. The views obtained from these hills are very extensive, including several counties, with the cathedrals of Worcester, Gloucester, and Hereford. The modern town of Malvern is well built, and contains many terraces, with good shops, hotels, baths, two banks, and several boarding-houses; but the more ancient portion is irregular, consisting of houses scattered on the declivity of the mountain. The public library is a building of the Doric order. In the vicinity are flower gardens, which are open to subscribers, and where flower shows frequently take place. Malvern has numerous hydropathic establishments, which have added much to its increasing prosperity. There are a chalybeate and a bituminous spring, the water of which is remarkable for its purity, and for its gently aperient and diuretic properties. The former is in the eastern part of the village, near the church; the latter, called Holy Well, is situated 2 miles to the S. of it. Every accommodation has been provided for drinking these waters, and for hot and cold bathing. The water of the Holy Well has been found on analysis to contain per gallon 1·6 grains of carbonate of lime, 5·33 carbonate of soda, 2·896 sulphate of soda, 1·553 muriate of soda, ·625 carbonate or iron, and 1·687 of residuum. The water of St. Anne's Well contains per gallon, 3·55 carbonate of soda, 1·48 sulphate of soda, ·955 muriate of soda, ·352 carbonate of lime, ·328 carbonate of iron, and ·470 of residuum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £350. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, was formerly the church of the Benedictine Abbey. It is a cruciform structure with a lofty embattled tower rising from the centre. The interior of the church contains a remarkably beautiful E. window, carved seats, and several monuments, among which is one to the wife of R. Thompson, Esq., of Malvern Priory. The whole of this edifice has recently been restored at great expense. There are also two district churches—viz. Trinity Church, at North Malvern, and St. Mary's, at Barnard's Green, the livings of which are both perpet. curs. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There are National, industrial, and endowed schools. There are two chapels of the Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion, and one for the Independents. Lady Emily Foley is lady of the manor.

MALVERN, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Lower Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 4 miles S. of Great Malvern, its post town, and 1 mile S. of the Malvern-Wells stations, on the Worcester and Malvern and Tewkesbury and Malvern branch railways. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated under the Malvern Hills, on the roads from Ledbury to Worcester and Upton. It formerly had a Benedictine cell to Worcester Abbey, founded in 1171 by the two brothers Joceline and Eldred, in a gloomy cavity under the Herefordshire Beacon, which is partly in this parish. From the summit of this hill, which is 1,444 feet above the sea-level, a most extensive view is commanded over the rich plains of Worcester, Gloucester, and Hereford, with the hills of South Wales in the distance. The land is chiefly rich meadow and woodland, comprising some of the finest oak timber in England. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £44. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, formerly belonged to the Benedictine priory. It is an ancient stone structure, some part of which is in ruins; but the parts used as the parish church, including the tower and chancel, are in good preservation, and have recently been repaired. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Adjoining the church is Little Malvern Court, constructed with the materials of the old priory. It has recently been restored. To the S. of the parish is a camp. Charles Michael Berington, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MALVERN WELLS, a vil. in the par. of Hanley Castle, hund. of Lower Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 1 mile N. of Little Malvern. There are railway stations here, as well as at Malvern. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is a modern structure dedicated to St. Peter.

MALWOOD CASTLE, in the New Forest, co. Hants, 10 miles W. of Southampton. It is situated near Stoney Cross, where William II. was accidentally shot by Tyrrel whilst hunting.

MALZIE WATER, a stream of co. Wigtown, Scotland, rises in Loch Mochrum, and falls into the river Bladenoch.

MAMARAGHTY, a mountain in co. Mayo, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Newport. It attains an altitude of 2,340 feet.

MAMBLE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 5 miles S.E. of Cleobury Mortimer, and 1½ S. of Bayton. The village, which is small, is situated near the Tenbury and Leominster canal, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. The substratum abounds with coal, which is worked and transmitted by means of a tramway to the canal. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £235, and the vicarial for £180. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Bayton annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £328, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient structure, with a wooden spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a monument to the late Lieutenant-Colonel Greswold, erected by the officers of the Enniskillin dragoons, and tombs of the Blounts of Sodington Hall, an old seat in this parish, which was partially burnt by the Parliamentarian troops in the civil war of Charles I. On the site of this mansion, which was taken down in 1807, were found Roman bricks, pavement, with other relics of antiquity.

MAMHEAD, a par. in the hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 10 miles W. of Exeter, its post town, and 4 N. of Dawlish. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Ex. There is a coastguard station. The subsoil is red sandstone and gravel. The surface is varied and richly wooded. Great quantities of fine flax are produced. Building stone is quarried. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £145. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. 200. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, has a tower containing five bells. The church has been recently restored. The interior contains a monument to the Lisburne family, and one has been lately erected to Sir Robert Lydston Newman, Bart., who fell at the battle of Inkermann. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. Mamhead House is the principal residence. In Mamhead Park are some Ilex trees of a fine description. On Haldon Hill is an obelisk of Portland stone 100 feet in height, which serves as a landmark to mariners. Sir R. Lydstone Newman, Bart., is lord of the manor.

MAMHILAD, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.E. of Pont-y-pool, its post town, and 7 from Abergavenny. The parish, which is small, is situated on the Brecon canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff. Mamhilad House is the principal residence.

MAMHOLE, or MANMOEL, a hmlt. in the par. of Bedwelty, lower div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 7 miles N.W. of Pont-y-pool. It is situated near the Monmouth canal, between the rivers Rumney and Sirhowey. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal and iron works which are extensively carried on. The district is very populous.

MAM-TOR, or the SHIVERING MOUNTAIN, one of the loftiest summits of the Peak, co. Derby, 2 miles W. of Castleton. It attains an altitude of 1,300 feet, and has on its summit the remains of a double ditched camp of 16 acres, and two barrows. At its base is the famous Odin lead mine, and in various places are obtained fluor spar, bitumen, and manganese.

MANACCAN, or MONATHON, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 6 miles S.E. of Helston, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Falmouth. The village, which is small, is situated near the coast, in a vale to which it gives name. The par. contains the vil. and small port of Helford, on the river Hel, over which is a ferry. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and some in the coasting and Baltic trades, the chief import being timber. The port affords safe anchorage for vessels of from 200 to 300 tons burden, and is principally used by vessels unable to reach the port of Falmouth on account of contrary winds. The new metal titanium was first discovered in the titaniferous iron ore of this place, from which circumstance it was originally called Manaccanite. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240, and the vicarial for £180. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £193, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Menaacus and Dunstan, is a venerable structure with a large fig-tree growing out of the S. wall. It was thoroughly restored and enlarged in 1824. Kestell is an old seat which formerly belonged to the family of the same name. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans, also a National school. At Resmorden is a double entrenched camp, near which Roman coins have frequently been found, and at Tregonwell are vestiges of an ancient chapel. The Rev. R. Polwhele, the county historian, was vicar of the parish from 1794 to 1821.

MANACLES, THE, a reef of granite rocks off the coast of Cornwall. They lie about 5½ miles to the S. of Falmouth Harbour, and have near them the sunken rocks of Penwin and Vaze.

MANAFON, a par. in the hund. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 7 miles from Welshpool, its post town, and 7 N. of Newtown. It is situated near the river Rhiew, and contains the tnshps. of Manafon, Gaynog, Llan, and Llys, also the hmlt. of Dwyriew. The parish abounds in hills and open moorland. The village is small, but neatly built. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £460, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice, recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There are village schools.

MANATON, a par. in the hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 5 miles S. of Moreton-Hampstead, its post town, and 10 N.W. of Newton-Abbott railway station. It is a small agricultural village, situated near the river Wrey. Within the parish is Grimspound British camp, extending over 4 acres, being 400 feet in diameter, and containing several circles of much smaller dimensions. Here is a curious rock called Bowerman's, which consists of five large stones above 30 feet in height, resembling in shape a gigantic human figure; also the Horsham Steps, consisting of several detached rocks, under which the river Bovey flows for several hundred feet before forming the cascade of Becky Fall. The soil consists of sand, with a subsoil of granite. The latter, which is extensively worked, supplied part of the material for the erection of Waterloo Bridge, London. At Challacombe, in this parish, are extensive tin mines. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £209. The church, dedicated to St. Winifred, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty embattled tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a carved screen. In 1779 the E. front of the church was destroyed by lightning, and one of the pinnacles forced through the roof. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans, also a school partly supported by subscription. The Rev. J. B. S. Carwithen, Bampton lecturer at Oxford in 1809, was a native.

MANBY, a par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles S.E. of Louth, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Leyburn railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Act of Enclosure in 1815. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £482. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 5*s.* per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Simon Thomas Scrope, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MANBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Broughton, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Glanford-Brigg. It contains Manby Hall.

MAN, CALF OF, an island in the Irish Sea, lying to the S. of the Isle of Man, from which it is separated by a rocky channel several hundred yards in breadth. It is nearly opposite the promontory of Spanish Head, and is about 5 miles in circumference. The cliffs, especially on the western side, rise perpendicularly to the height of from 300 to 400 feet, the highest point of the island being 500 feet above the level of the sea. It is chiefly used as sheep pasture, and commands distant views of the Welsh, Scotch, and Irish mountains.

MANCETTER, or MANCESTER, a par. in the Atherstone div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, containing Atherstone railway station and post town, 1 mile S.E. of the vil. of Mancetter. It is situated on the Coventry canal and river Anker, and contains the populous hmlts. of Atherstone, Hartshill, and Oldbury, the seat of the Okeovers. It is supposed to be the site of the Roman Manduessedum on Watling Street, and has a camp of 6 acres, where numerous relics have been found. In this parish are extensive stone quarries, and productive mines of manganese of superior quality. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £230. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, standing on the site of the camp. It has an E. window of ancient stained glass, and a tablet to Robert Glover, of Mancetter House, who was burnt at Coventry as a Protestant martyr in Queen Mary's time. In addition to the parish church, there are two district churches, viz. at Atherstone and Harthill, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* val. £150 and £155 respectively. The parochial charities produce about £829, of which £205 goes to the hospital or almshouses founded by James Gramer in 1724. The Trent Valley railway and the Coventry canal pass through the parish. Mancetter House is the principal residence, and has been the family seat of the Glovers for a considerable period. Oval flint axes or celts, Roman bricks, gold, silver, and brass coins, with various other antiquities, have been found here.

MANCHESTER, a municipal and parliamentary borough, tnshp., par., union, and episcopal see, in the hund. of Salford, co. palatine of Lancaster, 162 miles from London, situate in a low tract of ground on each side of the Irwell, at the confluence of the Medlock and Irk. Its ancient name was variously Manaurium, Manutium, or Mancunium. It was created a parliamentary borough at the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832, and contains the following pars.:—Ancoats, Ardwick, Beswick, Birch, Blackley, Bradford, Broughton, Burnage, Cheetham, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Chorlton-cum-Medlock, Crumpsall, Denton, Didsbury, Droylsden, Failsworth, Gorton, Harpurhey, Haughton, Heaton Norris, Hulme, Levenshulme, Longsight, Moss-side, Moston, Newton, Openshaw, Platt, Redbank, Reddish, Rusholme, Stretford, and Withington. Manchester is now the great seat of the cotton manufacture, and as it possesses advantageous railway communication with every important town in the kingdom, is alike prosperous and populous, and has risen to a position of the first magnitude. The chief public buildings are—the Royal Exchange, originally a semicircular structure, situated at the junction of Market-street, W. end, and St. Ann's-square; was enlarged in 1838, and opened in 1840, and then further enlarged to present dimensions in 1847; principal room, 185 feet by 94; height, 60; total area, 1,668 square yards; is divided longitudinally by two light colonnades into three avenues, the columns being Ionic, copied from the Temple of Erectheus; the stone of the present edifice was laid on the 1st May, 1847; opened to subscribers 19th May, 1849. The townhall, stone, corner of King-street and Cross-street; first stone laid in 1822; erected from the designs of William Godwin; completed in 1825; copied from Temple of Erectheus; dome in great hall from the octagonal tower of Andronicus, known as Athenian Temple of the Winds; in the niches on each side of the portico are figures of Solon and Alfred the Great, and in the attic story above it are medallions of Hale, Locke, and Solon; the great hall, approached by a broad staircase, is 131 feet long and 38 feet wide, its walls, and the dome which forms the centre of the building, being covered with allegorical frescoes; in this building is situated the offices of the Chamber of Commerce, which consists of twenty-four directors, and is one of the chief mercantile institutions of the town. Post-office, situated in Brown-street, Market-street, since enlargement of the Exchange; an unpretending building, the upper part of which is used as the borough court room. Corn exchange, Hanging Ditch, a more pretentious edifice, with a front of six Ionic fluted columns; opened in 1837, and cost £4,000; holds 2,500; is supported by cast-iron pillars; chief hall contains an area of 600 yards. Branch Bank of England, Pall Mall and King-street; Doric, from designs by Cockerell; opened in March, 1847. The Athenæum, erected in 1837, from the designs of Sir Charles, then Mr. Barry, at a cost of £18,000; projected "to afford persons of the middle classes a suitable place of meeting in which they might be informed of all advances in science and art;" contains a library of 20,000 volumes, news-room, class-rooms, lecture hall, &c., and about 1,500 members. The Manchester and Salford assize courts, in Ducie-street, Strangeways; erected from designs and under the superintendence of Mr. Waterhouse, then a local architect; the finest architectural edifice in Manchester; contains two greater courts for civil and crown business, with smaller courts for chancery proceedings; a fine library, filled with some law publications for the use of the barristers attending the courts; grand jury room, dining hall, large central hall, with a great number of ante rooms and subterranean rooms for the despatch of business connected with the assizes: the design is Gothic, and although the civil court is rather too large for the convenience of the persons chiefly interested, and for acoustic purposes, the general arrangement and construction of the building reflect great credit on the architect. The Free Trade Hall, near the Theatre Royal, in Peter-street, with massive stone front; conspicuous as containing one of the largest meeting halls of the United Kingdom; opened 8th October, 1856; cost upwards of £40,000; erected, by a joint-stock company in £10 shares, from designs of Mr. Edward Walters, a local architect, in pursuance of a resolution passed 19th July, 1853: it contains a chief hall, 134 feet long, 78 feet wide, and 52 feet high, capable of holding nearly 5,000 persons; an assembly room, 75 feet by 37½ feet, and 28 feet in height, accommodating 600 persons, and several other rooms of smaller dimensions; the façade in Peter-street is 75 feet in height, and has a total length of 159 feet.—Manchester contains about 50 Episcopal churches, 29 Wesleyan Methodist, 17 Methodist Associate, 10 Roman Catholic, 25 Independent, 10 Baptist, 5 Scotch Presbyterian, 6 Unitarian, 1 Catholic Apostolic, Greek, German, Welsh, and Calvinistic chapels, together with a variety of meeting-houses for the Friends and the various Methodist denominations. Of the churches the principal are—the Cathedral, or old Collegiate Church, which is situated in Victoria-street, midway between the Victoria railway station and the Royal Exchange. It was erected by Thomas de la Warr, under a license from Henry V., in the ninth year of his reign, 1422, the first stone being laid in July of that year. The living had been originally, and early in the 13th century, a rectory. Otto de Grandison, in 1299, was appointed rector, by presentation of the king. Its value in the 14th century was established by a survey to be the same as at a former estimate made by inquisition in 1282, and as being 200 marks. Its endowment consisted of eight burgage tenements in Manchester and in the villages of Newton and Kirkmoneshulme, with parks, woods, and pastures; a manor, which contained within the precinct two acres of land, and a place of pasture without the gate, between the waters of the Irk and Irwell; also the wood of Alport, which might be enclosed, and made a park at the will of the town; a manor-house, with woods and moors of turbary so many and so large that they were not measured, but esteemed, according to the custom; together with a mill upon the water of the Irk; a mill for dyers; and a common bakehouse, at which it was compulsory, by the custom of the manor, for the burgesses to bake. At the Conquest the manor of Manchester was assigned, with a large tract of land extending between the Ribble and Mersey, to Roger of Poitiers, by the Norman William; but Hugh of Poitiers having afterwards forfeited his rights by treason, the same lands were reassigned to another follower, the Baron Albert de Gredley, from whom it descended to Thomas de la Warr. This Thomas de la Warr, as will be found by a reference in Camden printed elsewhere, was lord of the manor, patron, and parson of the parish, and also parliamentary representative. In order that the spiritual duties might be properly performed, he applied to the king for a license to found a college, to be endowed with the lands of the rectory of Manchester, which license having been accorded, the existing edifice was commenced as a collegiate church, attached to the college, in virtue of the new endowment under the royal license. The foundation consisted of a warden keeper, eight fellow chaplains, four clerks, and six choristers. By a deed of gift and feoffment, the lands of the rectory were then assigned to Thomas Bishop of Durham, chancellor of England, and other trustees, Thomas de la Warr, the patron, presenting to the bishop of the diocese John Huntington to be master or keeper. The college was dissolved by Edward VI., but was restored by Queen Elizabeth to train the youth of Lancashire and extend Protestantism, and in the church were uttered some of the most violent philippics of that reign against Popery. This fine old historical church remained a collegiate church till 1847, when the see of Manchester was created, and it became the cathedral of the diocese; it consists of a nave, tower, aisles, with clerestory, choir, side aisles, chapels, vestry, &c.; its style is perpendicular Gothic, and offers some features of superior excellence of its order, but the softness of the stone has led to frequent repair and the replacement of nearly the whole of the original structure by more modern work. The work of restoration has been carried on without the necessity of closing the edifice, principally by the subscriptions of parishioners, who have raised more than £8,000 for that purpose, besides nearly £5,000 towards restoring the tower, the foundation-stone of which was laid on the 4th of August, 1864. St. Ann's church, Grecian, stands in the centre of the town, and forms the southern side of St. Ann's-square; consecrated July, 1712, the foundation-stone having been laid in May, 1709; sittings for 1,175 persons; had originally a cupola, taken down in 1777, and a spire erected in its place. St. Mary's, near St. Ann's, in St. Mary's-street, consecrated in September, 1756, the foundation-stone having been laid July, 1753; and St. John's, at the bottom of St. John-street, leading out of Deansgate; it was founded by Edward Byrnn, Esq., April 28, 1768, and was consecrated in 1769; it contains a stained-glass window by Pickett, of York, and a marble monument by Flaxman at the back of the rector's pew, erected in commemoration of the Rev. John Clowes attaining the fiftieth year of his ministry; it also possesses a modern monument in Caen stone, of an elaborate Gothic design, to the memory of Mr. William Marsden. St. Mary's, Hulme, in Moss-lane, at its junction with Boston-street; erected in fulfilment of the last will and testament of the late Wilbraham Egerton, Esq., of Tatton parish, Cheshire, by whom it was also endowed; the spire is 224 feet high, and is surmounted by a vane of 18 feet; in all, 252 feet; the style is the early geometrical decorated, from designs by Mr. Crowther. Among other churches noticeable on account of their architectural merits, or decorations, are—Trinity Church, Salford, the oldest in the borough, with a tower of perpendicular Gothic, and fitted with dark oak pews. St. Matthew's, a large building, erected after designs by Barry, and which has a spire of 132 feet in height. St. Simon's, Salford, early English, with a spire 150 feet, a carved oak pulpit, and three well-executed coloured windows. St. Luke's, Cheetham Hill-road, perpendicular Gothic; a fine building, with a tower terminating in an elegant crocketted spire 170 feet. All Saints, Grosvenor-square, which has a fine tower, surmounted by a dome with a ball and cross, and is a very capacious building, standing on an admirable site at the point of intersection of the Stretford and Oxford roads. St. George's, Hulme, perpendicular, built by Godwin, consecrated 9th December, 1826; is handsomely fitted up, and has a tower with clock and fine bell; contains organ by Reun, and three stained-glass windows by Warrington, of London. The principal Roman Catholic chapels are, St. John the Evangelist's, a very fine cruciform structure, decorated English, situated in Chapel-street, Salford; it consists of aisles and nave, transept, choir and aisles, and is surmounted by an elegant crocketted spire, said to be the loftiest in Lancashire; opened on the 9th August, 1848, by the late Cardinal Wiseman; contains windows by Hardman, of Birmingham, and three large pictures, copied from well-known originals at Malines. St. Augustine's, Granby-row, brick, with stone front; early Gothic; opened in 1820; window by Wailes, of Newcastle. St. Marie's, Mulberry-street, Norman. St. Patrick's, in Livesey-street. St. Anne's, Junction-street, Ancoats. St. Chad's, Cheetham Hill-road, near Ducie-bridge. St. Wilfred's, Bedford-street, Hulme. St. Joseph's, Guilden-street. St. Aloysius's, Ogden-street. Cavendish Street Independent Chapel has a handsome interior, a fine stained-glass window, and a tower terminating in a spire 171 feet high; its style is early English, and it was erected from the designs of Mr. Walters. The interior is handsomely fitted, and contains a gallery all round, and the building is computed to hold more than 1,500 persons. The Greek church in the Waterloo-road, Strangeways, is a small but elegant-looking edifice, copied from an Athenian model. The chief of the educational institutions and schools, in point of antiquity, is the Chetham Library and College, which is also called the Chetham Hospital, which was founded by Humphrey Chetham, the fourth son of Henry Chetham, of Crumpsal, who was baptised at the Collegiate Church of Manchester, July 10, 1580, and who died in the year 1653. Humphrey Chetham, though of good family, was a commercial factor or buyer, engaged in the fustian trade, but purchasing largely for the London market, and resided as a bachelor chiefly at Clayton Hall, near Manchester; by his will, bearing date the 10th December, 1651, he bequeathed £700 for the purchase of a fee simple estate, the profits of which were to be applied to the education and maintenance of forty poor boys; he had established the school during his lifetime, but had then restricted it to twenty-two scholars, fourteen from Manchester, six from Salford, and two from Droylsden. In his will six townships are allowed to nominate boys, and the number of recipients of his bounty was increased to forty; they are to be the children of poor but honest parents, not illegitimate, nor diseased, lame, or blind, when chosen; they are to be clothed, fed, and instructed, from the age of about six to fourteen, when they are to be bound out, at the expense of the institution, to some honest and useful trade. There was, in addition, a bequest of £1,000 for the purchase of books, and £100 for a building, as the foundation of a public library, for the augmentation and support of which there was a residuary devise of personalty, after the payment of legacies, such residue amounting to more than £2,000. The building stands on the most ancient historic site, adjoining the cathedral, and is approached by a gateway, surmounted by the arms and motto of the founder, and a courtyard, walled in, of some extent. Donations have been added from time to time to the original bequests, the first being in 1694, by the Rev. John Prestwich, Fellow of All Saints, Oxford; and the library now contains upwards of 20,000 volumes, and educates 100 boys, viz. 35 of Manchester, 15 of Salford, Droyldsden 8, Crumpsal 5, Bolton 25, Turton 12. The hospital is under the direction of twenty-five feoffees and a resident governor; the boys wear a distinctive dress, something like that of the Christ's Hospital boys in London; the library is absolutely free to all persons, resident or stranger. The Lancashire Independent College is a fine building, in the township of Withington, and is approachable either by the Chorlton-road, or the Stretford New-road; it is devoted to the education of Congregationalists or Independents, and is on the basis of the Church colleges of Oxford and Cambridge; the principal is the Rev. Robert Vaughan, D.D., who is assisted by professors, the whole being under the control of twenty trustees. Owen's College is situated in Quay-street, in a house formerly occupied by the late Richard Cobden; it is a college in connection with the University of London, and was endowed by Mr. Owen, whose name it bears, with a bequest of £100,000, in order that Dissenters might be taught as at Oxford and Cambridge; the principals and professors are empowered, by royal warrant of 1851, to grant certificates to candidates for degrees to be granted by the University of London. The Free Grammar School, founded by Hugh Oldham, Bishop of Exeter, in 1520, has an income of more than £1,000 per annum, and possesses several exhibitions to Oxford and Cambridge; the education provided is of a superior kind, but scarcely equals that which might be anticipated from so large a revenue. The Manchester Commercial Schools were erected in 1845 under the auspices of the Manchester Church Education Society, the foundation stone having been laid in June of the same year; the building has a good exterior, and will accommodate 200 boys; attached to the institution is the Manchester Evening College, for the instruction of persons engaged during the day. The Ladies' Public School was founded in 1806 for the purpose of educating the female children of the poor; it is situated on a plot of ground in Old Strangeways, and was erected to commemorate the completion of the fiftieth year of the reign of George III.; in 1832, it was enriched by a bequest of £10,000 from Mrs. Frances Hall; it educates forty girls.

The Wesleyan Theological Institute was opened in 1842, and is situated at Didsbury, about 5 miles from Manchester, for the education of young men intended for the Wesleyan ministry; it is a large edifice, standing on about ten acres of ground. The Catholic Collegiate Institution is situated in Grosvenor-square, Chorlton. There are in Manchester numerous literary and scientific institutions. The Manchester Royal Institution, Mosley-street, devoted to scientific, literary, and artistic purposes, contains a lecture room capable of holding nearly 1,000 persons, and a hall adorned by casts of antique statuary, including copies of the Elgin marbles, presented by George IV.; the entrance-hall is graced by a very noble portrait-statue of Dr. Dalton, by Chantrey, considered, justly, one of the finest productions of his studio, representing the chemist and philosopher seated in an attitude of graceful dignity; annual exhibitions of pictures are usually held in this building, and this portion of the edifice also contains one or two very fine paintings by Etty, the gift of D. Grant, Esq.; connected with the artistic department, there is a school for instruction in drawing, &c.; the building, designed by Barry, was originated at a meeting held at the Exchange in 1823, erected at a cost of £30,000, and opened in 1830. The Athenæum, also from designs by Barry, was erected in 1837, and cost £18,000, containing a library of 16,000 volumes, a lecture hall accommodating 1,000 persons, gymnastic club, chess club, essay and discussion society. Manchester School of Art, for promotion of art culture and instruction, also in Mosley-street, adjoining Royal Institution, opened in February, 1838, and supported by government aid, fees, and subscriptions; a Mechanics' Institute, first stone laid June 21, 1855, opened September 9, 1856, and cost £14,000, containing a library of 20,000 volumes, with lecture theatre, class rooms, organ, &c.; subscriptions, males, 5*s*., females, 3*s*. per quarter; Manchester Free Library, Byrnn-street, Camp-field, opened September 2, 1852; Salford Athenæum, Great George-street, Salford, opened November 14, 1853; Pendleton Mechanics' Institute; Ancoats Lyceum; Miles Platting Mechanics' Institute, Argyle-street, top of Oldham-road; Crumpsall Mechanics' Institute; Chorlton-on-Medlock Mechanics' Institute and Temperance Hall. The chief of the hospitals and benevolent institutions are—the Manchester Royal Infirmary and Dispensary, one of the finest and most conspicuous buildings in Manchester, situated at junction of Mosley and Market-streets, in Piccadilly; the building occupies three sides of a quadrangle, the centre of each being ornamented by fine Ionic portico pediments, supported by fluted pillars; originally founded in 1752 at a house in Garden-street, Shudehill, by Joseph Bancroft and Charles White, surgeons; in 1754, the present building was commenced on land purchased of Sir Oswald Mosley, and was opened in 1755; in 1766 a Lunatic Asylum was added to the foundation, and in 1792 a Dispensary was annexed; it was enlarged by a W. wing in 1851, and the Piccadilly front was completed in 1853, and a dome built to serve as a clock tower, which now possesses a clock with four illuminated dials; the height from the ground to the top of the cupola is 105 feet; the infirmary is fronted by three bronze statues of Dr. Dalton, Wellington, and Peel, which occupy a site of a dirty pool of water, once stagnant there; the Lunatic Asylum was removed from the Royal Infirmary in 1854, to Stockport Etchells. St. Mary's Hospital and Dispensary, the oldest charitable medical institution in Manchester, formerly in Quay-street, opened in the present building October 10, 1856, has a good library of obstetric works and a museum—architect, G. Pennington; Lock Hospital, 311, Deansgate; House of Recovery and Board of Health; Manchester Eye Infirmary; Salford and Pendleton Royal Hospital and Infirmary; Chorlton Dispensary; Ardwick and Ancoats Dispensary; Manchester Homœopathic Institution, Bloom-street; Manchester and Salford Homœopathic Dispensary, Dale-street, Lever-street; Chorlton-upon-Medlock Dispensary, Penitentiary; Greenheys District Provident Asylum; Blind Asylum, Stretford New-road, Deaf and Dumb School, same edifice; public baths and washhouses, Muller-street, founded in 1845, partly by subscription, partly on the profitable returns of a ball held for the purpose in the exchange—they are now self-supporting, and a great boon to the community, but are inferior to the corporation baths in Liverpool in appointment and style.—The courts of quarter sessions and of petty sessions for the city of Manchester were formerly held in court rooms over the post-office, in Brown-street, but are now held at the assize courts, in Ducie-street. There are six to eight borough sessions held during the year, the recorder being T. West, Esq. A stipendiary magistrate, T. Fowler, Esq., assisted by other magistrates in the city commission of the police, sits every morning at ten o'clock, Sundays excepted. The courts of quarter and petty sessions for the borough of Salford are held in a court-room behind the Salford townhall; the quarter and petty sessions for the hundred of Salford are held at the New Bailey prison, in Salford. The Manchester district courts of bankruptcy are held in the Manchester Athenæum. A chancery court of the county palatine is held at the assize courts in May and December—this court having concurrent jurisdiction with the High Court of Chancery. The Manchester county court is held in the county court-house at Nicholas Croft, High-street, Manchester. The Salford county court (townhall, Salford, and Manchester court of record) sits six times each year, for the trial of civil actions, one sitting in each alternate month. The court has authority to try personal actions within the city, where the debt or damage does not exceed £30. The Salford hundred court of record holds seven sittings yearly. The court has jurisdiction to the extent of £50 sterling, but may try debts involving larger sums by consent. Its district includes the pars. of Bolton, Bury, Dean, Radcliffe, Wigan, Flixtow, Manchester, Prestwich-cum-Oldham, Ashton-under-Lyne, Middleton, and Rochdale. A court-leet for the hundred of Salford is held twice a-year in the townhall, Salford. There are two barracks, for cavalry and infantry respectively, in Barrack-street, Hulme, near St. George's Church, and in Regent-road, Salford. The Manchester borough gaol is situated on the Hyde-road, and is a conspicuous and large building; it was commenced in June, 1847, and completed in December, 1849, and received prisoners the following March; it was enlarged in 1856; it is conducted on the separate system, and consists of wings radiating from a centre; a hospital, chapel, and schoolrooms are annexed, with workshops and sheds; it occupies about seven acres, is surrounded by a boundary wall, and will hold 700 or 800 prisoners. The New Bailey prison is situated in Salford, on the right bank of the Irwell, near Albert Bridge. The foundation-stone was laid in 1787 by Howard, the philanthropist, on unoccupied ground; but the place is now in the centre of a crowded and highly populous district. It has a reputation for being well managed, and for its healthy situation; it is surrounded by a high wall surmounted by an iron chevaux-de-frise, will hold 583 male and 214 female prisoners. Manchester old workhouse is on the right of the Bury New-road, Strangeways, behind the Victoria Station, and is a large plain building, built in 1792, holding about 1,000 inmates. Salford workhouse is in the Eccles New-road, occupies about 7 acres, cost about £18,000, accommodates 820 inmates, and was built in 1852. There is also a workhouse at Withington, for the parish of Chorlton-on-Medlock, completed in 1855, which will hold 1,576 poor. Manchester New Workhouse was commenced in 1855 and completed in 1857, on the Bongs estate, at Crumpsall, near Manchester, at a cost of upwards of £50,000. The space enclosed measures about 600 feet by 410, and will accommodate nearly 2,000 persons. The Night Asylum is in Henry-street, Oldham-road.—The bridges across the Irwell are—the Victoria, opened on the 20th June, 1839, an elliptical arch of 100 feet span, with a rise of 22 feet, and a roadway of 45 feet, occupies the site of Salford Bridge, of three Gothic arches, which was built in 1365; the Albert, or New Bailey Bridge, opened for general traffic 26th September, 1844, has one stone arch; Blackfriars, at St. Mary's Gate, near the Exchange, has three arches, and was opened August, 1820—formerly exacted a toll, but was made free in March, 1848; Strangeways Bridge, of a single iron arch, was built in 1817—a toll bridge; Hunts Bank Bridge, erected in 1864, close to Victoria Station and Cathedral, has one iron arch; Broughton Suspension-bridge unites Pendleton with Broughton, opened in 1826—toll bridge; Hunts Bank Bridge, over the Irk, erected in 1826; Broughton Bridge unites Salford with Lower Broughton, is of stone, and in three arches; Regent-road Bridge connects the township of Hulme with the borough of Salford, and is about 1 mile from the Exchange, opened in 1808, with toll—toll abolished 21st December, 1848; Springfield-lane Bridge connects Salford with Broughton and Bury New-road, constructed 1850.—Manchester has several cemeteries:—the Harpurhey Cemetery, on the Rochdale-road, about 2 miles from the Exchange, contains about 11 acres, first opened in 1837, enlarged in 1847. Ardwick Cemetery is situated in Hyde-road, Ardwick, contains about 8 acres of cultivated land; Dr. Dalton is buried here; in all it covers about 12 acres, but is in a populous neighbourhood, and is rather a graveyard than a cemetery. Rusholme-road Cemetery lies between Oxford-road and Downing-street, has about 5 acres, was originally laid out amid fields and is now amid crowded streets. New Barnes Cemetery, near Weaste-lane railway station, belongs to the borough of Salford; Joseph Brotherton, one of the first members of parliament for Salford, is buried here.—Manchester has now three theatres, and several parks and public pleasure-gardens, as well as a botanic and horticultural gardens, and the usual music-halls and singing-saloons which are common in the larger English towns. The Botanical and Horticultural Gardens, opened June, 1831, are extensive, covering 16 acres, and admirably laid out, and are adequate to the resources and wealth of the town. The principal parks are—Peel Park, a memorial park situated 1 mile W. of the Exchange, designed to commemorate the triumph of free trade, and which contains a statue of Sir Robert Peel, by Noble, and also of the Queen and the late Prince Albert, the latter in his robes as a Knight of the Garter, a museum of natural history, adorned with casts from the antique, and a gymnasium for the working classes; the Queen's Park is about 2 miles N.N.E. of the Exchange, is laid out similarly to Peel Park, but possesses superior advantages of site, and some very fine trees, together with a picturesque sheet of water; Philipp's Park, a place of recreation for the working classes, is situated in a very populous neighbourhood, about 2 miles E. of the Exchange, and near the residences of the class for whose benefit it was projected. These three parks were established in 1845, and cost about £33,000, £3,000 of this sum being contributed by Government. The Bellevue Zoological Gardens are a provincial Cremorne Gardens on a very rough scale, but are greatly attended by the populace from Manchester and the surrounding towns. They are situated in the Hyde-road, Ardwick, about 3 miles from the Exchange, and are accessible by omnibus and railroad. There are generally fête days, with fireworks, music, and dancing, on Saturdays and Mondays—the place containing a large hall for the latter amusement, and a shilling entrance money being charged. The Pomona Gardens, Cornbrook, a similar place of amusement, but containing grounds laid out with more taste and pretence, are accessible by water, road, or rail; there is a gymnasium, maze, bridge, and boats, but the place is less frequented than Bellevue. The Concert Hall, in Lower Mosley-street, is a place of entertainment in the hands of a proprietary limited to 600 persons. It was established and opened in 1830, for the promotion of the art of music, and a certain number of concerts are given annually, at which the wealthier classes attend; the concert-room is capable of seating about 1,200 persons. Of the kind used by the general public are the Philharmonic Hall, Fountain-street; the Victoria Musichall, Greengate, Salford; Hardy's Concert Hall, Deansgate; Trafford Arms, Victoria Bridge; the Old Boar's

Head, Lower King-street; the Polytechnic; the Divan, Oxford-road. Manchester contains three theatres—the Royal, Queen's, and Prince of Wales. The Royal is situated in Peter-street, and was opened in September, 1845; it is a brick building with an architectural front in the modern Italian style; the height of the building is about 70 feet; the interior is in the Italian style; the house was designed to hold 2,247 persons, but, when very crowded, has accommodated more than 3,000 spectators. The Queen's Theatre is a minor theatre standing at the junction of York-street and Spring Gardens, was fitted up in 1815 for melodramatic performances, and in 1839 was occupied as a place of equestrian entertainment by Ducrow. The Prince of Wales is a new and modern theatre, erected in 1864 by a limited company for the purpose of introducing comedies, burlesques, and lighter pieces of amusement, to temper the arbitrary dictatorship in theatricals of the lessee of the Theatre Royal; it is situated at the corner of Mosley-street and Peter-street.—Two fairs are held annually in Manchester, and two in Salford—those of Manchester in the Camp Field during Easter week and the first days of October; that held at Easter is known as the Knott Mill Fair, and is much frequented; the other is called Acres Fair, from having been formerly held in Acres Field, now called St. Ann's-square: the Salford fairs are held in Chapel-street, in Whitsun-week and on the 17th, 18th, and 19th November, this last being popularly known as Dirt Fair. Manchester boasts several learned societies—the literary and philosophic, established in 1781, has numbered several distinguished persons among its members; the council-room is adorned by portraits of Newton, Davy, and Dalton, and a marble bust of Dr. W. Henry, by Chantrey; this society periodically publishes its transactions. It has also numismatic, photographic, legal, medical, statistical, natural history, and geological societies, several of which publish their proceedings. There is a law library in Norfolk-street, established in 1820, containing about 4,000 volumes, and chiefly supported by attorneys and solicitors; a public library in Newall's-buildings, containing nearly 20,000 volumes, the property of a proprietary of subscribers, the value of the shares nominally £4 4*s.*; New Subscription Library, in Cross-street; Mudie's, also in Cross-street; the Portico, occupying a substantial and architectural building in Mosley-street, of the Ionic order, originally established in 1796, by 300 members, contains 14,000 volumes and admirable news-rooms, the reading-room being 66 feet by 42; the Free Library, Camp Field, one of the first, or the first, public libraries set on foot under Ewart's Act of 1850, established in 1851 by public subscription, amounting to £12,742, is free, and supported by a local rate of one halfpenny on the poor-rate assessment.—The clubs are—the Union, established April, 1825, occupying a large building in Mosley-street, near the Royal Institution, subscription 7 gs., entrance-money 40 gs., limited to 400 members, contains the usual club-house appointments on a handsome scale, in emulation of London clubs; the Albion, King-street, similar to the preceding on a more modest scale, established in 1837, subscription 5 guineas; Mosley-street Club, subscription 3 to 5 guineas. Besides these there are the Bridgewater, the Albert, and a railway club. In addition to these institutions and buildings Manchester possesses several societies, auxiliary and otherwise, of a religious or benevolent kind—a Distressed Foreigners' Society; a Church Institute; a Young Men's Christian Association; a model lodging-house, in London-road; ragged and industrial schools in Sharp-street, Rochdale-road, in Broughton-road, Salford, and in St. John's Parade, Byron-street; a Salford humane society; a glee and madrigal society; a society for the protection of trade; a commercial association; a Royal School of Medicine and Surgery; a temperance society; a Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge—local branch; a teetotal society, called the United Kingdom Alliance; Bible, Tract, Pastoral Aid, Church and Domestic Mission Societies, a madrigal society, museum of natural history; and several public statues—viz. to Peel, Wellington, Watt, Dalton, the Queen, and Prince Albert; but none of them, save that to Dalton, have any pretension to be considered works of art, or are in any wise entitled to critical notice. The railway stations are at Hunt's Bank, Bank Top, London-road, New Bailey, and Oxford-road.—The history of Manchester may be literally said, to adopt a phrase of Lord Macaulay, to be lost in the twilight of fable. The Rev. J. Whittaker, one of its most erudite and zealous historians, has attempted to claim for it an existence long anterior to the Roman occupation of the island, but the data on which his opinions are avowedly based are so purely conjectural as to give little more than the value of hypothesis to his romote history. A passage in Tacitus (Tacitus, Agri. Vit., 21), however, established an invasion of Lancashire by Agricola in the summer of 79, after wintering at Chester (Deva), and it appears probable that a military station was, during this expedition, established at the confluence of the Irk and Irwell, which was called Mancenion, or Mancunium, and which is in different copies of the Itinerary of Antoninus referred to as Manaurium, or Manutium, all of which names undoubtedly bore reference to the same spot, and to a military station then in existence of more or less importance. Camden has referred, in his Britannia, to some conjectural or probable origin of the name, which may be noted, and which were suggested by his visit to Manchester in 1607:—"In a neighbouring park, called Alparc, I saw the foundation of an old square fort which they called Mancastle, where the river Medlock joins the Irwell. I will not say that this was the ancient Mancunium—the compass of it is little—but rather that it was some Roman station." In a subsequent passage Camden has ventured, with what Hollingworth denominates "a light and frothy conceit," on a derivation that the town is called Manchester, because the inhabitants behaved bravely against the Danes; they would have "the city called Manchester, that is, as they explain it, a city of men, and of this notion they are strangely fond, as seeming to contribute much to their honour But I would rather," he continues, "derive it from the British word main, which signifies a stone, for it stands upon a stony hill, and beneath the town, at Colyhurst, there are noble and famous stone quarries." But whatever the origin of the name, or position of the settlement or station prior to its Roman occupation, it appears manifest that it became of entirely inconsiderable importance in subsequent history, and, like Chester, was either in part or wholly devastated by the Danes. On the testimony of Ingulfus of Croyland, Alfred, about the year 890, first divided England into counties, appointing certain custodes, or keepers, to suppress outrages in every county; and "he also divided the said counties into centuries or hundreds; and certain courts were by him, or some other after him, appointed to be kept in some town or place within the hundred, which some time was a place of good note, as Salford, near Manchester, now is, though I cannot find any ancient name of it, or other monument of its antiquity. Manchester certainly did not give name to the hundred; whether because as it was then a city, as the story of those times call it, and no cities I know of do give names to the hundreds, having probably government within themselves; or because it was so sore defaced and almost ruined; or because the town of Salford was then immediately in the king's hands, as also it hath continued till very lately, I leave to the judgment of the reader." In this condition of ruin it may be inferred it remained, from an incidental passage in Roger of Hovenden, that about the year 920, Edward, king first of the West Saxons, and afterwards of the Mercians, sent into the kingdom of the Northumbers an army of the Mercians, that they should fortify the city of Manchester, and place valiant soldiers in it. From this period it became a frontier town between the Mercians, who inhabited Cheshire, Derbyshire, &c., and the Northumbers, who inhabited Yorkshire, &c., and in their wars and mutual incursions was sometimes possessed by the Mercians, sometimes by the Northumbers. It was anciently a borough. Now, with the Saxons a borough was the same as a city, though afterwards those principal towns which were the seats of bishops did engross the name of cities, and the rest were called boroughs. William the Conqueror, after the Conquest, assigned to Roger of Poitiers all that land or province lying between the Ribble and Mersey described under Yorkshire and Cheshire, and not as Lancashire, in Domesday Book. But it soon after passed from his hands into those of Albert de Gredley, who was in the train of the Conqueror. In Domesday Book there is mention of a church called St. Marie's in Manchester, and a church called St. Michael's, which had unam Carucam quietam ab omni consuetudine praeter Geldam. Albertus de Gredly gave to the church of Manchester four bovates or oxgangs of lands in Frank Almoigne of his own demesne. Manchester seems to have possessed a rectory early in the 13th century. In 1299 Otto de Grandison was made rector by the presentation of the king. The manor lands joined to the rectory of Manchester, saving that a place called Bleu Orchard, or Wall Greens, was between them. The manor-house stood in or near the place where the college now stands, and was called Barons Court, or Barons Yard, and the place was called Barons Hall, as a neighbouring bank was called Hunts Hall, now Hunts Bank; and the parsonage-house was near to a field called the Parsonage, in or near the street called Deansgate. As has been already mentioned, Manchester passed from the hands of Hugh of Poitiers into those of Albert de Gredley, from whom it descended to Thomas de la Warr, the last heir male of the De la Warrs, and through his sister, Joan, to West, Lord de la Warr, about 1390. This Thomas de la Warr, who has been already referred to, was the founder of the college, to which was annexed the collegiate church, which is now the cathedral. The 32nd Henry VIII. (1540) confirmed Manchester as a place of privilege, having been anciently a sanctuary. But in 33rd Henry VIII. the privilege, being found prejudicial, was annulled. Leland passed through the country in the reign of Henry VIII., and he mentions Mancestre as "the fairest, best builded, quickest, and most populous town of Lancashire." He proceeds—"It has but one parish church, but that collegiate, and almost throughout double aisled, with very hard squared stone. There are several stone bridges in the town, but the best, of three arches, is over the Irwell, dividing Manchester from Salfourd, which is a large suburb to Manchester. On this bridge is a pretty little chapel. The next is the bridge over the Irk, on which the very fair builded college stands. On this river are divers fair mills that serve the town. In the town are two market-places." In the year 1519 Hugh Oldham (a native of Oldham), Bishop of Exeter, by will endowed a free grammar school in Manchester with lands, and a long lease of the water, flour, and dyeing mills in the neighbourhood; and in 1524 conveyance was made, under the trusts of the will, to trustees, for the purposes of carrying out this intention. It was free, and no male infant of any age was to be refused. The choice of the head-master and usher were vested in the president of Corpus Christi, Oxford; in default, in the warden of Manchester College. The College of Manchester was abolished by Act of Parliament of the 1st of Edward VI., and the land and revenues were given by the king to the Earl of Derby. Queen Mary, however, refounded the College, and restored some of the lands. Up to this period there are few evidences beyond the fact of dyers having settled on the river's bank, of Manchester having attained, or occupying any manufacturing position; but it is recorded rather as a tradition than as a fact, that in 1520 there were three famous clothiers living in the north country, viz. Cuthbert of Kendal, Hodgekins of Halifax, and Martin Brian, or Byrom, of Manchester. Each of these kept a great number of servants at work—spinners, carders, weavers, pillers, dyers, shearmen, &c. In 1552, the 5th and 6th of Edward VI., gives us, however, a large insight into the condition of the staple trade of the town at that time. This statute regulated the width and weight of Manchester, Lancashire, and Cheshire cottons, and ordains "that all the cottons called Manchester, Lancashire, and Cheshire cottons, shall be in length twenty-two yards, and contain in breadth three quarters of a yard on the water, and shall weigh thirty pounds in the piece at least." From the rest of this statute, as well as from other circumstances, it may be inferred that Manchester cottons at this time were made of wool. In 1557 another Act was passed to amend the preceding statute. In 1565 the plague visited Manchester. In 1567, the 8th of Queen Elizabeth, an aulnager was appointed to measure the cottons and fustians of Manchester, on account of the frauds practised in these towns. In 1578, Queen Elizabeth gave a new foundation to the College, and incorporated it as Christ's College, Manchester. In the preamble of the Act, the number of parishioners is alleged to be 10,000. The foundation is to consist of a warden, a bachelor of divinity, four fellows, who are, like the warden, to be priests and bachelors of art, two chaplains, a vicar, four singing men, and four children; the warden to be appointed by the crown, the fellows and others to be elected by the wardens and fellows. In 1595, John Dee, the celebrated astrologer, was appointed warden of the College. In 1605 the pestilence again visited the town. Camden travelled through Lancashire in 1607, and his description of Manchester, as it then existed, assumes great value. (Camden's Britannia; Nichols, vol. i. Ed. 1789.) "At the confluence of the Irwell and Irk, on the left bank, which is of reddish stone, scarce three miles from the Mersey, stands that ancient town called by Antoninus, according to the various readings, Mancunium and Manucium, and by us at present, with some traces of the old name, Manchester. This surpasses the neighbouring towns in elegance and populousness, and contains a woollen manufacture, market, church, and college, founded by Lord la Warr (summoned to parliament by the name of Magister Thomas de la Warr), who took orders, and was the last male heir of his family, 1 Henry V. He was descended from the Gredleys, who are said to have been the ancient lords of this town. In the last age it was much more famous for its manufacture of stuffs called Manchester Cottons, and the privilege of sanctuary, which the parliament of Henry VIII. transferred to Chester." Bishop Gibson, in his edition of Camden, 1772, adds,—"But the growth of this place, in this and the last age, having been so considerable, and what has set it above its neighbours in all respects, it may deservedly claim a particular account to be given of its present state, for, though it is neither a corporation, nor sends burgesses to parliament, yet, perhaps, as an inland town, it has the best trade of any in these northern parts. The fustian manufacture, called Manchester Cottons, still continues there, and is of late very much improved by some modern inventions of dying and printing, and this, with the great variety of other manufactures known by the name of Manchester Wares, renders not only the town itself, but also the parish about it, rich, populous, and industrious." From a poem in "Hackluyt's Voyages," published in 1430, it appears that, at that early period, cotton was imported into England by the Genoese; and, between 1511 and 1534, "divers tall ships are mentioned by Hackluyt, of London and Bristol, which had an unusual trade to Sicily, Candia, and Chios, and sometimes to Cyprus and Tripoli, and Baruth in Syria. They exported thither sundry sorts of woollen cloths, calf skins, &c., and imported from thence silks, camlets, rhubarb, malmsey, muscadel, and other wines, oils, cotton wool, Turkey carpets, galls, and Indian spices." (Baines's History of Lancaster, vol. ii. p. 404.) The first mention made of Manchester in connection with the cotton manufacture was in Lewis Roberts's "Treasure of Traffic," published in 1641, as a seat of linen and also of cotton manufacture:—"The town of Manchester, in Lancashire, must be also herein remembered, and, worthily for their encouragement, commended, who buy the yarn of the Irish in great quantity, and, weaving it, return the same again into Ireland to sell. Neither doth their industry rest here, for they buy cotton-wool in London, that comes first from Cyprus and Smyrna, and at home work the same, and perfect it, into fustians, vermillinos, dimities, and other rich stuffs, and then return it to London, where the same is vended and sold, and not seldom sent into foreign parts, who have means, at far easier terms, to provide themselves of the said first materials" (p. 32). From this it will be seen that Manchester had already become famous for its manufacture; and, doubtless, the employment of cotton had been induced by the use of linen, linen yarn being used as the warp in the making of fustians, and of nearly all other cottons in this country down to the year 1773. In 1650, a description of the towns of Manchester and Salford contains the following information:—"The trade is not inferior to that of many cities in the kingdom, chiefly consisting of woollen friezes, fustians, sackcloths, mingled stuffs, caps, inkles, tapes, points, &c., whereby not only the better sort of men are employed, but also the very children, by their own labour, can maintain themselves. There are, besides, all kinds of foreign merchandise brought and returned by the merchants of the town, amounting to the sum of many thousands of pounds weekly." (Aikin's History of Manchester, p. 154.) And at or about this time, Manchester consisted of ten streets, and Salford of three, the old bridge referred to by Camden, now represented by Victoria Bridge, being the only communication between the two towns. In 1651 the Chetham Library was established, and fourteen years after the Hospital was endowed, Manchester being described by a contemporary as being "one mile in length, with good streets and buildings, and the people more industrious than in any other part of the north of England." Towards the close of this century the general exports of the country rose considerably, and there can be little doubt from their character that Manchester mainly contributed to the progressive rise, and benefited by the increase. The beginning of the 18th century witnessed a still further development, the peace existing from 1740 for about twenty years enabling the trade of the entire Lancashire district to make great strides. In 1722, the first post-office was established in Manchester, and letters were despatched thence to London three times a week, the time required for transit being seven or eight days. Five years after, the author of "A Tour through the whole Island of Great Britain," published in 1727, referring to Manchester, remarks, "Within a very few years past, here, as at Liverpool, and also at Frome in Somersetshire, the town is extended in a surprising manner, being almost double to what it was a few years ago, so that now, taking in all its suburbs, it now (1727) contains at least 50,000 people. The grand manufacture, which has so much raised this town, is that of cotton in all its varieties, which, like all other manufactures, is very much increased within these thirty or forty years." A paragraph in the Daily Advertiser of September, 1739, copied into the Gentleman's Magazine, supports this view of the rapid rise of the town and the development of its manufacturing resources, thus:—"The manufacture of cotton, mixed and plain, is arrived at so great a perfection within these twenty years, that we not only make enough for our own consumption, but supply our colonies and many of the nations of Europe. The benefits arising from this branch are such as to enable the manufacturers of Manchester alone to lay out above £30,000 a year, for many years past, in additional buildings; and it is computed that 2,000 new houses have been built in that industrious town within these twenty years." This rise, however, must not be assumed to have been caused by any great increase in the cotton trade, but chiefly by the woollens and fustians, and general manufactures for which the place was noted. The entire value of all the cotton goods manufactured in 1760, according to the estimate of Dr. Percival, who might have been considered an authority on the subject, was not more than £200,000 a year, and, in 1705, the quantity of cotton-wool imported little exceeded 1,000,000 lbs. annually, and seventy years after was less than five times that amount; while, at the former period, the value of the woollen goods exported equalled two-fifths of the entire export trade of the kingdom, or about £3,000,000 per annum. In 1758, the Duke of Bridgewater, by the aid of Brindley, the celebrated engineer, commenced the famous Bridgewater Canal, which runs near Manchester, and which was destined to create a complete revolution in the mode of transit of goods; and in 1777 the first post coach was established, marking a further era in the progress of the rising town. The invention of the spinning mule in 1779 by Samuel Crompton effected a complete revolution in the manufacturing resources of Manchester, and gave to its staple trade an impetus which has never ceased. A contrast of the quantities of cotton imported and exported at the close of the last century, and in 1860, before the outbreak of the American war, would serve as an admirable index to the progressive advance of the manufacturing interest. At the period first suggested the supplies from all sources did not exceed 2,000,000 lbs.: in 1860 the returns of cotton imported were:—

United States	1,115,890,608
Brazil	17,286,864
Mediterranean	44,036,608
British possessions in India	204,141,168
British West Indies and British Guiana . . .	1,050,784
Other countries	8,532,720
Total . . .	1,390,938,752

Beyond the cotton manufacture in all its various branches, Manchester has of late years turned its attention to the manufacture of arms and hardware, chiefly through the indefatigable exertions and genius of Mr. Whitworth, and now boasts a small arm factory and a manufactory of general machinery, carried out under his auspices, each of the very largest magnitude. For this and nearly all other manufactures its site is of the most eligible kind. It stands close to one of the largest and most valuable coal fields in Britain, and in the immediate neighbourhood of the largest seaport and most convenient point of access with America in the British dominions. It is, moreover, by means of rivers and navigable canals, abundantly supplied with water power and the means of internal communication of the most economic kind. It is united with various adjacent towns in which branches of its staple manufacture have been carried on, by a perfect net-work of canals, of which Manchester may be deemed the centre. The railway communication, in consequence of the enormous traffic, has been greatly developed, and is as perfect as any in the kingdom. In addition to cotton and arms the manufacture of silk and woollen goods is carried on in the town and its immediate neighbourhood, as may be seen from the annexed returns, but as might be presumed, the cotton manufacture, with all its tributary branches of industry, bleaching, dyeing, printing, &c., is the chief industry. From the factory returns for the year ending 1862, it appears that the total number of factories in the kingdom was as follows:—

	Factories.	Spindles.	Steam power.	Water power.	Persons.
1856	5,117	33,503,580	137,711	23,724	682,497
1862	6,378	36,450,028	375,294	29,399	775,534
Of cotton alone,
1856	2,046	28,019,217	—	—	341,170
1862	2,715	30,387,467	—	—	407,598
Of these Lancashire and Cheshire contained
Lancashire:
1856	1,480	—	—	—	259,043
1862	1,979	21,530,532	—	—	315,627
Cheshire:
1856	—	—	—	—	—
1862	212	3,373,113	35,658	1,224	40,860

or of the cotton trade alone 45·7 per cent; of the gross number of factories 33·3 per cent.; of the spindles and the mechanical horse power, 72·6; and of number of persons 58·2 per cent.

SILK TRADE.

	Factories.	Persons.
1862, Cheshire .	175	13,604
1862, Lancashire	48	8,201

It is difficult to determine the precise number of mills, spindles, and persons employed in Manchester alone from the factory returns, but the annexed quotation from the returns of 1863 will suffice to show the position Manchester bears to the general manufactures of the kingdom as the centre of the cotton manufacture. "Lancashire employs 77·4 per cent. of the total number of persons employed in the cotton trade in England and Wales. In the counties of Lancashire, Cheshire, and York, the total increase of mills since 1839 is 59·6 per cent., and of persons employed 91·2 per cent. In addition to this the speed of the spindles has increased upon throstles 500, and upon mules 1,000 revolutions a minute, i.e., the speed of the throstle spindle, which in 1839 was 4,500 times a minute, is now 5,000, and of the mule spindle, that which was 5,000 is now 6,000 times a minute, amounting in the former case to a tenth, and in the latter to a sixth additional increase to that of the mills themselves."—The railways are—the branch of the London and North-Western, which has its terminus at Victoria station, and which runs between Liverpool and Manchester by way of Newton and Warrington, and which was the first opened in this country for general traffic purposes; the Lancashire and Yorkshire, with a terminus in the same station, and which communicates with Liverpool circuitously by Blackburn and Ormskirk, and which has branches to Oldham, Southport, Halifax, Bradford, Huddersfield, Wakefield, and Rochdale. At Bank Top, Market Street, near the infirmary, is the terminus of the main London and North-Western line, communicating with London, Birmingham, Crewe, and the chief arterial lines of the United Kingdom, of which this last-named place is the centre; also the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, leading E., and forming the more direct route to Sheffield, Hull, and Great Grimsby. These are the principal stations; the others are situated in New Bailey-street, Salford, the terminus of the lines communicating with Bury, Blackburn, &c., and the South Junction and Altringham, in Oxford Road, Hulme, the line which reaches Liverpool by way of Chester, and which communicates more directly with North and South Wales, and the towns passed by the Great Western and its tributary lines. The canals are those of the Duke of Bridgewater, which flows into the Mersey at Runcorn; the Ashton-under-Lyne, Stockport, and Macclesfield, which all join each other and have a common basin at the back of Piccadilly; the Rochdale and Halifax, communicating with the Bridgewater; and the Bolton and Bury, with a terminus in Salford.—The borough of Manchester was incorporated by royal charter in 1838, and the government of the town is vested in the town council, which includes the mayor, aldermen, and councillors, elected under the provisions of the Municipal Corporations Acts. Since the incorporation of the borough, a separate commission of the peace and court of quarter sessions has been obtained by grant from the crown, and an efficient constabulary force established for the borough, under the control of the watch committee. The municipal borough is divided into 15 wards, over each of which an alderman presides, the rest of the local governing body being 48 councillors and the recorder.—The town is supplied with water by the corporation, which has established large water-works in the neighbourhood of Moltram, in Longdendale, 10 miles E. of Manchester. These were completed at a cost estimated to exceed half a million sterling, and are on a strictly colossal scale. There are minor reservoirs at Woodhead, Torside, Rhodes Wood, Armfield, Hollingworth, and Godley, their total capacity being 567,859,797 cubic feet. The Moltram Tunnel is 2,772 yards in length, or more than 1¼ mile, is 6 feet wide, and as many high. The fire-engine establishment is exceedingly effective, and comprises some fifteen engines, with all necessary implements. The gas companies are also under the management of the corporation, the profits realised from the manufacture and sale of gas being devoted to the improvement of the streets, and in public expenditure for the advantage of the city. They were established originally in 1817, but the streets were not lit with gas till 1824.—The population, according to the census return of 1861, of the city of Manchester, is 357,979, and of the borough of Salford, 102,449. The further returns give the following analysis of this total:—

—	Number of persons of twenty and upwards.	Engaged in domestic pursuits.	Professional.	Commercial.	Agricultural.	Industrial.	Indefinite and non-productive.
Manchester	137,351	44,723	2,662	9,564	2,167	71,868	6,367
Salford	58,528	21,286	2,161	3,880	1,119	27,637	2,445

The town on the whole is moderately healthy, but the mortality in certain districts is very heavy among children. In the Manchester registration district proper, including the so-called townships, with its sub-districts of Ancoats, St. George's, Market-street, London-road, the population being, in 1841, 192,219, the number of births were 7,145, and of deaths 5,831; in 1851, population 228,435, births 9,118, deaths 7,020; in 1860, population 243,625, births 9,085, deaths 6,807. The total births in Manchester in 1862 were 4,635, against 3,828 deaths; in 1863, 4,555 births, 4,096 deaths. In Salford the births in 1862 were 2,196, against 1,337 deaths; in 1863 the births were 2,136, the deaths 1,451. But these returns would need to be slightly amended, the census and registrars' districts being slightly different. The annual average rate of mortality, from all causes, to 1,000 persons living, 1851-60, in Manchester, would be 31, and in Salford 26, showing, with the exception of Liverpool (33), the largest death-rate in the country, and more than that of Bolton (27), Wigan (27), and Oldham (25), the towns which surround it—the diseases operating most malifically being scarlatina and diseases of the respiratory organs; consumption, diarrhœa, and measles standing next in order. Against this the birth-rate for the entire counties of Lancaster and Chester was slightly above that of the average of the kingdom; and it is probable that the privations caused by what has been termed the "cotton famine" enhanced the mortality. The tables for the intermediate years show a considerable oscillation in the death rate, caused by deflections of temperature and those other causes which especially operate to the diminution of life in large towns. Manchester retains many of the characteristics of a manufacturing town which has risen from a very humble beginning, in the squalid and narrow character of the streets, and the comparative narrowness of some of the principal thoroughfares. Till within the past few years a large proportion, nearly 10 per cent., of the population lived in cellars and in places absolutely unfit for human occupation—the returns for 1849 showing something like 5,000 cellars used as habitations, and a population of 20,399 resident in these wretched and unwholesome abodes.—Till the commencement of the year 1860 and the outbreak of the American war, the city of Manchester showed a progressive, rapid, and continuous increase in its prosperity. The check to the supply of cotton, however, threw a large number of the labouring population out of employment, and necessitated an appeal to other sources of supply for the growth of the staple. But in spite of the depressing influences referred to, and the evils of non-employment and pauperism following in their train, the returns of mortality and sickness prove that the sanitary condition of the neighbourhood was not seriously impaired by the privations inflicted. A development of further supplies of cotton from other countries during the last three years, together with the happy conclusion of the American war, have again restored Manchester to something like its old prosperity; while the introduction of Indian, Surat, Egyptian, and Brazilian cottons has to some extent rendered the country independent of its former sources of supply. The report of the factory inspectors, to the date of April, 1863, speaks of a minute but sensible improvement; and the weekly returns of May, 1863, show how far the foreign varieties of cotton were superseding the exclusive supply hitherto derived from the United States:—

	American cotton.	Brazilian.	Egyptian.	Indian.
In 1860 . . .	41,000	2,150	1,280	3,330
May 29, 1863 .	1,160	2,930	3,520	21,160

Which shows that while America yielded less than 5 per cent. of its old supply, nearly seven times as much Indian cotton was consumed as before the American war. In consequence of the employment of children, as well also on account of the ignorance of parents and the impossibility of their supervision, the state of education is low in Manchester.

MANCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 1 mile N.E. of Hawarden. It is situated on the Holyhead railway and the river Dee, and contains the hmlt. of Little Mancott. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the iron and lead mines.

MANCROFT ST. PETER, a par. in the City of Norwich, co. Norfolk. See NORWICH.

MANEA, a chplry. in the par. of Coveney, hund. of South Witchford, co. Cambridge, 7 miles N.E. of Chatteris, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Ely. It is a station on the Ely and Peterborough railway. It is situated on the Old Bedford river, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Coveney, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is a small neat structure, once held by Conyers Middleton. There is an endowed National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Rokeby is lord of the manor.

MANERDIVY, or MANERDWY, a par. in the hund. of Kilgerran, co. Pembroke, 7 miles from Newcastle-in-Emlyn, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Cardigan. It is situated on the river Teify, and is chiefly agricultural. The chief seats are Pentre, the birth-place of Dr. Saunders, author of "Short Illustrations of the Bible," and Fynonau House, built by Nash and Clynview. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £222, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. David.

MANESTY, a fell in co. Cumberland, 4 miles S. of Keswick. It commands a view of Borrowdale, and the shores of Derwentwater.

MANEWDEN, or MANUDEN, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Essex, 4 miles N. of Bishop Stortford, and 3 W. of the Elsenham railway station. The village, which is small, is situated in a fertile valley on the banks of the river Stort, and near the Cambridge railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A considerable trade is done in malt, for which there are two malt-houses. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £650, and the vicarial for £215. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £171. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure with a stone tower, surmounted by a spire, and containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £49 per annum. There are National and village schools. The Independents have a place of worship. Manuden House, which is situated in the midst of the village, is the principal residence. R. Gosling, Esq., is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. An annual fair is held on Easter Monday, chiefly for toys and pedlery.

MANEY, a vil. in the par. of Sutton-Colefield, co. Warwick, 1 mile S. of Sutton-Colefield.

MANEYTHESNEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanvair-Waterdine, co. Salop, 9 miles S.W. of Bishop's Castle.

MANFIELD, a par. in the hund. of E. and W. Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Darlington, its post town, and 11 E. of Richmond. It is situated on the river Tees, and on the great road from Catterickbridge to Piercebridge. The land is divided between arable and meadow, with about 80 acres of woodland. The soil is a strong clay upon a gravelly and sandy subsoil. This place is a meet for the Raby hounds. The impropriation belongs to the landowners. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £466, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower, containing a clock and three bells. The interior of the church contains a white stone font and pulpit, also an east window of rich design. The church was thoroughly restored at great expense in 1855. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a Free school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £42, for which a new school-house was erected in 1857. R. B. Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MANGERSBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Stow-on-the-Wold, co. Gloucester, half a mile S.E. of Stow. Mangersbury House is the principal residence.

MANGERTON, a border tower in co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Castletown, formerly the property of the Armstrongs. Also, a mountain of this name, in co. Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Killarney, commanding a fine view.

MANGOTSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Barton Regis, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N. of Bristol, its post town. It is a station on the Bristol and Birmingham section of the Midland railway. The par. borders on the coal district of Kingsland, and includes Staple Hill and Downend. Here were the ruins of a nunnery in Leland's time. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the collieries and stone quarries. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. with the cur. of Downend annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, joint val. £195. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a neat structure, partly rebuilt in 1850. There is a chapel-of-ease at Downend, dedicated to Our Saviour. It is a modern edifice, built in 1831. There are National and infant schools. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists, have each a chapel.

MANGROVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lilley, co. Herts, 4 miles S.W. of Hitchin.

MANHOOD, a hund. in. co. Sussex, containing the pars. of Birdham, Earnley, W. Itchenor, Selsey, Sidlesham, and Wittering, comprising an area of 14,450 acres.

MAN, ISLE OF, one of the British Isles situated in the Irish Sea, nearly equi-distant from the English and Irish coasts, its chief port, Douglas, being from 60 to 70 miles distant from Liverpool, Belfast, and Dublin respectively. Its nearest points are 26 miles from St. Bee's light, 21 from the Mull of Galway, and 45 from Holyhead. Its length from Spanish Head to Ayr Point Light is 45 miles, and its greatest breadth 15, extending between 54° 2′ and 54° 26′ 3″ N. lat., and between 4° 14′ and 4° 47′ W. long. Its Manx name was Mannin, or Maen-in, the "stony island," from the rocky nature of the coast, and hence the Roman names Mona, Monœda or Moneitha, Monabia, Menavia, and the English Man. It is said to have been visited by St. Patrick in the middle of the fifth century, who first converted the inhabitants to Christianity, and established the see to which he appointed Germanus as the first bishop. The island fell successively under the dominion of the Scots, the Saxon kings of Northumbria, and the Northmen from Denmark and Norway, who held it with the Orcades and Hebrides, under the protection of the Crown of Norway as kings of the isles. The most celebrated of these independent princes was Guttred, who built the castle of Rushen, in repairing which in 1815 a beam was found inscribed with the date 947. His successors continued to govern the island as tributary to Norway till Edgar, King of England, compelled Macon to do homage to him for his crown, and made him admiral of the great fleet equipped by that monarch to protect the English coasts from the piratical descents of the Northmen, who then infested the British seas. Upon the conquest of England by William of Normandy Godred Crowan, son of Harold Harfager, King of Norway, who had been defeated by Harold II., turned his arms against the Isles, and obtained the sovereignty of Man with that of the Hebrides, or Western Islands, to which he afterwards added Dublin and a considerable part of the province of Leinster in Ireland. From this time the island became vested in the kings or lords of the isles, and was held by them till 1265, when Magnus, the last Northman, dying without issue, Alexander, King of Scotland, attacked the Isle of Man and subdued

it, as he had previously done the other possessions of the Kings of the Isles, viz. the Orkneys and the Hebrides. In token of his conquest he substituted for the ancient armorial ensign of the isle, which was a ship in full sail, the device of three legs joined at the thigh, armed and spurred, with the motto "Quocunque jeceris stabit," which it still retains. Under the Scottish kings the ancient regal government was abolished, and a military despotism by lieutenants established in its place. In 1289 the island was surrendered by the Scottish Commissioners to Edward I., who restored it the following year to John Baliol; but on the death of Edward I. in 1307, his successor, Edward II., seized it, and in one year bestowed it successively upon his favourites Piers de Gavestone, Gilbert de M. Gascall, and Henry de Bello Monte. In 1333 Edward III. gave the heiress of Reginald, the last of the Manx princes, in marriage to Sir William de Montacute, and confirmed to him the sovereignty of Man, to the great delight of the inhabitants, who saw the Scots once more expelled and the ancient government restored in the right line. In 1395 William de Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, having become indebted, sold his title to Sir William Scroope, afterwards Earl of Wiltshire, who was beheaded during the wars of the Roses, when the sovereignty successively passed to the Percys, earls of Northumberland, and Sir John Stanley, ancestor of the earls of Derby, under whom the title of King of Man was exchanged for that of "Lord of Man." This earl obtained a parliamentary title, in confirmation of the regal grant of James I. During the parliamentary war the island remained steadily attached to the interests of Charles I., for which James Earl of Derby was beheaded in 1651 at Bolton-le-Moors. His countess, the Charlotte Tremouille of Sir Walter Scott's "Peveril of the Peak," then undertook its defence, but was compelled, through the treachery of deputy-governor William Christian, who had the command of the garrison of Castle Rushen, to surrender it to Lord Fairfax, to whom it was granted. On the Restoration it was restored with their other estates to the earls of Derby, one of whom, James, the tenth earl, by the Act of Settlement, confirmed to the lessees of estates their lands in perpetuity, upon the payment of certain rents and fines to the lord. Upon the death of this nobleman without issue in 1735, the lordship of Man descended to James Murray, second duke of Athol, as heir-general of his great-grandfather, James Earl of Derby, who was beheaded at Bolton. In 1765 measures were introduced into parliament for the effectual suppression of smuggling, which had previously been carried on from this island to such an extent as to affect the revenue of the kingdom. It was further proposed to purchase the sovereignty and revenue of the island for £70,000; and, after some other payments, in 1829 the remaining interest of the Athol family was finally purchased by the Lords of the Treasury for £416,000, and the Isle of Man, with all its privileges and immunities, was thus entirely ceded to the British crown. Its affairs are now managed by a governor, or lieutenaut-governor, assisted by the estates or Court of Tynwald, composed of a council, or Upper House of Ten, in which the bishop, archdeacon, and two vicars-general have seats, and a House of Keys consisting of 24 life members, chosen from amongst the freeholders by the House with the approval of the governor, who selects one of two nominated on each vacancy. For purposes of local administration it is separated into two divisions, north and south, each comprising three sheadings, viz. Ayre, Garff, and Michael in the N., and Middle, Rushen, and Glanfaba in the S. These are further divided into 17 parishes, all beginning with Kirk (under which heading a more particular description will be found). In each of these parishes schools and libraries were established by Bishop Wilson, whose name is still revered throughout the island. These 17 pars., of which 14 are vics. and 3 rects., constitute a dioc. in the prov. of York, called Sodor and Man, from the circumstance of King Magnus in 1098 having united the Sodereys, or Southern Hebrides, with Man as one dioc. Besides the 17 civil pars. there are 14 district pars. or chplries. Service is performed alternately in the churches in Manx and English. The courts consist of chancery, exchequer, and common-law procedure, which sit four times a year at Castletown, Rushen, or Ramsey. The general gaol delivery takes place twice a year at Castletown; deemsters' courts weekly at Ramsey and Douglas; high bailiffs' at Castletown, Douglas, Peel, and Ramsey; also occasionally admiralty, seneschals', ecclesiastical rolls', and coroners', the last for each sheading.—The island is nearly 110 miles in circumference, and contains an area of about 200,000 acres, of which 30,000 are hill and common. The coast is for the most part rocky, the cliffs frequently rising perpendicularly from the level of the beach to the height of from 100 to 300 feet. At the southern extremity is the promontory of Spanish Head (where one of the ships of the Armada was wrecked in the reign of Elizabeth), consisting of bold precipices washed by a rocky channel. In this channel are the islands of Kitterland and the Calf of Man, the largest of the rocky islets which surround the coast. The other important points along the coast are Ramsey, Douglas, Peel, Port-le-Mary, and Castletown harbours, the Bahama and King William's banks, Laxey oyster bed and haven, Derby Haven, and Port-Erin, these three last being natural havens. Douglas harbour, which is dry at low water, is considered the best dry harbour in the Irish Sea, having from 15 to 20 feet depth at high water, when vessels of considerable burden can approach the quay. The pier is 520 feet in length, and 40 broad, to an extent of 450 feet from its commencement, when it expands to a breadth of 90 feet, with a lighthouse in the centre. All vessels having goods or merchandise for bonding are, by Act of Parliament, compelled to deliver their cargoes exclusively at this port, where is situated the custom-house, and of which Derby Haven, Peel, and Ramsay, are members. Although Castletown is the capital of the island, Douglas is by far the handsomest and most populous town, carrying on an extensive trade, and having recently become a favourite watering place, with good hotels, boarding houses, and every accommodation for visitors. Steamers run to Liverpool and Whitehaven. It publishes the Manx Guardian, Manx Sun, Manx Liberal, Mona Herald, National Reformer, and Odd Fellow's Chronicle. A few years ago it was almost consumed by fire, but has been restored. The other towns are Peel and Ramsey.—The island is divided into two unequal parts by a chain of heathy hills running N.E. and S.W., from North Barrule, which is 1,840 feet high at the northern extremity of the chain to Brada Head at the southern, and including Sneafell, or Snafield, Ben-e-phot, or Penypot, Garraghan, Mount Greeba, and South Barrule, ranging from 1,500 to 2,000 feet above the sea-level. The loftiest of these summits is Sneafell, which is 2,004 feet, and commands a noble view of the Irish Sea, and the coast of England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland, spread out in a circle around it. The prevailing rocks are mica, clay, and graywacke slates resting on granite, which shows itself at Foxdale, Laxey, and other points, occasionally intermixed with silvery mica, red and white felspar, and grey quartz, with some isolated portions of Old Red sandstone near Peel and Castletown, and mountain limestone at Poolvash. The principal minerals are lead, which contains from 60 to 150 ounces of silver per ton, copper, zinc, anthracite coal, roofing slate, slate for lintels. The chief mines are at Laxey, Foxdale, and Breda Head. Bones of the fossil elk are found in the shell marl, and agates and cornelians on the sands, also many rare fish and shells are met with on the shore, which abounds in curious caverns. The animal of most interest in the island is the tailless cat; there are also snipes, partridges, and quails; and sea-fowl and rabbits abound at the southern extremity of the island, and at the Calf. Many of the rivers are well stocked with trout, as the Laxey and Sulby, the latter of which has a cascade, as have also the Peel, Glenmeay, or Glen Moij, and the Dhoon. The Douglas, or Dufglas, rises in the mountains behind the town to which it gives name, and falls into the bay near Douglas Head. The climate is remarkably mild, but changeable. The soil is sandy on a substratum of clay or rock, with large tracts of peat, in which occur carbonised logs of fir and oak, chiefly in the hilly districts. The chief crops are oats, barley, and wheat, of which two last great quantities are exported, and, together with herrings, constitute the chief export trade of the island. Grasses, hemp, flax, and green crops are also cultivated, but the greater number of farmers are engaged in the rearing of pigs, poultry, and native cattle, which are a small white breed, for the home markets. The farms are in general of small extent, comprising from 15 to 150 acres, at rents varying from 5*s.* to £3 per acre. They are either held in perpetuity, paying certain fees and rents, or on lease, the estates, according to the Manx law, being the inheritance of the eldest child, whether son or daughter. The cottages of the peasantry are extremely primitive in construction, being built of sods and thatched. The people are for the most part allied in race to the Highland Scotch or Irish, and speak a dialect of the Gaelic language called Manx. The currency also differs in certain respects from that of the United Kingdom, there being 23*s.* 4*d.* Manx to £1 English, or 14d. in 1*s.*, and £1 notes are current, as in Scotland. Previously to the Act of Revestment in 1765 an extensive contraband trade was carried on to the extent of about half a million sterling, but since the introduction of the new code of revenue laws, under the Act of 6 George IV., the exportation is confined almost solely to goods that are the produce or manufacture of the island, on which no export duty is paid. The manufacture of sheeting, linen, towelling, and sailcloth was introduced about the beginning of the present century, when also the woollen manufacture was established, and these branches of industry are still carried on chiefly at the Union Mills near Douglas. Extensive paper mills are established at Laxey, and in various parts of the island are breweries, tanneries (chiefly for the Manx hides and skins), candle and soap works, &c. Distilleries are prohibited by the British government on account of the temptation to smuggling. The herring fisheries, which employ above 400 boats of from 15 to 35 tons each, produce nearly £100,000 per annum, the centre of the trade being Peel Harbour, which presents an animated appearance between July and October, the great fishing season. The imports include brandy, rum, geneva, wine, tea, coffee, and tobacco, which require a license, and are prohibited to be re-exported, besides which black cattle, horses, sheep, agricultural implements, seeds, linen, yarn, boards, bricks, cordage, and twine for nets, hemp, tackle for the fisheries, utensils for the cloth manufacture, salt, soap, lees, wood ashes, and various colonial and British productions, are imported duty free. The general character of the population is hospitable but superstitious. The peasantry are deficient in energy and frugality, like most of the Celtic races, but are docile and intelligent. Most of the children attend the schools, with which the island is well supplied, there being 50 Church schools for the 31 parishes and districts; of these 10 are free schools, 15 in connection with the National Society, receiving grants from government, and 3 Sunday-schools. All the schools have paid teachers, whose salaries in the aggregate amount to near £1,500 per annum. King William's new college is at Castletown, where a good classical education is obtainable by the sons of the gentry and wealthy farmers.—The main lines of road branching from Douglas are three, one in the direction of Sneafell, passing through Kirk-Onchan, Laxey, and Ballaglass, to Ramsey, thence in one direction to Kirk-Bride and Ayre Point, and in another direction to Bishop's Court and Castletown. Another line of road from Douglas passes by the Nunnery to Kirk-Marown and Peel; the third passes through Kirk St. Anne to Rushen Abbey, and Castletown, thence to Port le Murray and the Calf of Man, to which there is a ferry.—The island has always been governed by its own laws, which, like the common law of England, rested rather on immemorial custom and precedents than on any written code, and were formerly administered under the lord proprietor by the deemsters and keys. Its most ancient records are the laws and ordinances enacted by the court of Tynwald in 1417. The statute book commences in 1422, and contains a collection of statutes, ordinances, and customs "presented, reputed, and used for the laws of the island." These laws, though still retaining much of their ancient peculiarity of character, have been from time to time modified by the Acts of the Tynwald more in accordance with those of England. By an Act of Tynwald in 1777, and subsequently in the 57th of George III., the code now in general use was revised, since which very few alterations have been made. All new laws are published on the 5th July from the Tynwald hill. The institution of the grand jury forms an integral part of the judicial system as in England, but with this additional advantage, that it is capable of receiving evidence on the part of the accused, thereby enabling the court to find a bill with more certainty.

MANLESS-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Skelton, lib. of East Langbaurgh, North Riding of co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Guisborough. It is situated near the coast of the North Sea.

MANLETH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanidloes, co. Montgomery. It is situated near Llanidloes.

MANLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Frodsham, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 4 miles S.W. of Frodsham. It is situated near Delamere Forest. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. There is a school for both sexes, entirely supported by J. W. Fox, Esq., the lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MANLEY, a wap. in three divs., East, North, and West, situated in the parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln. The East wap. contains the pars. of Bottesford, Broughton, Frodingham, Hibaldstow, Messingham, Redbourne, Scawby, Waddingham, and part of Manton, comprising an area of 46,990 acres. The North wap. contains the pars. of Appleby, Aikborough, Burton-on-Stather, Flixborough, West Halton, Roxby-cum-Risby, Whitton, Winteringham, and Winterton, comprising an area of 33,980 acres. The West wap. contains the pars. of Althorpe, Belton, Crowle, Epworth, Haxey, Luddington, Owston, Wroot, and part of Misson, comprising an area of 50,590 acres.

MANLLWD, a tnshp. in the par. of Kerry, co. Montgomery. It is situated near Newtown.

MANMOEL. See MAMHOLE, co. Monmouth.

MANNIN, an islet off the coast of Cork, Ireland, opposite Kilcoe Castle.

MANNIN BAY, a harbour on the coast of Galway, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Clifden. It has good anchorage in 8 fathoms water, but is partially obstructed by rocks.

MANNINGFORD-ABBOTS, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Pewsey, its post town, and 8 S. of Marlborough. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the rivulet Avon. The village consists of a few straggling houses, and the inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The manor anciently belonged to Llanthony Abbey, and, after the Dissolution, was granted to the Duke of Somerset, lord protector. The surface is greatly undulating, and the soil a clayey loam alternating with sand. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £300. The church is a neat structure of ancient erection. There is a village school supported by subscription.

MANNINGFORD-BOHUN, a tythg. in the par. of Wilsford, hund. of Swansborough, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Pewsey. It adjoins the par. of Manningford-Abbots.

MANNINGFORD-BRUCE, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Pewsey, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Devizes. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the rivulet Avon, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is in general flat, but rises into gentle eminences towards the Downs. The soil is chiefly sandy, resting on a substratum of chalk, and, in other parts, peat, resting upon clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £310. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £310, in the patron. of trustees. The church is of great antiquity, and has a circular chancel at the E. end. It contains a memorial tablet of Mary Nicholas (or Mrs. Lane), who helped to rescue Charles II. after his defeat at the battle of Worcester. There is a National school for both sexes. John Grant, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MANNINGHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 1 mile N.W. of Bradford, its post town. It contains the hmlts. of Daisy Hill, Four Lane Ends, and Whetley, forming part of the north-western suburbs of Bradford. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the worsted and stuff manufactures. The soil of the arable land is fertile. The living is a perpet. cur.,* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150. The district church, dedicated to St. Paul, erected in 1842 from a design of Mr. Walker Rawstorne, is in the Norman style of architecture. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Manningham Hall, the principal residence, is a modern mansion, situate in the midst of a park. The other seats are Clock House, Wheatley Hill, and Bolton Royds.

MANNINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Gussage All Saints, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.W. of Cranborne.

MANNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Aylsham, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Bure. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. Mannington Hall is an ancient, castellated mansion, surrounded by a moat. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Itteringham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church has long been in a state of decay, and forms a ruin. The Earl of Orford is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MANNINGTREE, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 8¾ miles N.E. of Colchester, 10 S. of Ipswich, and 59 from London by the Great Eastern railway, which has a junction station here for Harwich. It is situated on the southern bank of the river Stour, and comprises parts of the vils. of Lawford and Mistley. It was anciently called Scidinghoo, and is mentioned in Domesday-book as Sciddinchon, at which time it was held by the Conqueror's half-sister. The manor was afterwards given by the Clares to Canon-Leigh nunnery, and, at the Dissolution, came to the Rainsworths. The town, which stands on the road from London to Harwich, is irregularly built, but the streets are paved and lighted. It does a brisk trade in corn, coals, timber, and malt, for the latter of which there are some very extensive establishments; also, a long established brewery. There are two banks, savings-bank, and mechanics' literary institution. At spring tides, vessels drawing 6 feet of water come up to the quay. The Stour was made navigable from the town to Sudbury by Act of Parliament, in the 4th and 5th of the reign of Anne. The village of Mistley, about half a mile from the town, consists of several handsome houses. It was formerly a petty session town, and a court-baron is held annually by the lords of the manor of Mistley and Manningtree. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £130, in the patron. of the Rector of Mistley. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was erected in 1616, and, since that period, has been twice enlarged. The N. and S. aisles are separated by ranges of massive pillars. The interior has a monument to the memory of Thomas Osmond, who was martyred in the town in 1515. There are National schools for both sexes, and places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. Thomas Glover Kensit, Esq., is lord of the manor. Tuesday is market day. A fair is held on the Thursday in Whitsun-week.

MAN-OF-WAR, a vil. in the bar. of East Balrothery, co. Dublin, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Lusk.

MAN-OF-WAR-ROAD, an anchorage in Dublin Bay, coast of Ireland, having about 6-fathom water, but exposed to the east winds.

MANOR, or MANNER, a par. in the co. Peebles, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of the town of Peebles. It contains a post-office vil. of its own name. Its length from N. to S. is 9 miles, and its breadth from 1 mile to 6 miles. It consists of mountainous sheepwalks. Dollar-law rises 2,840 feet above the level of the sea; Scrape (on the boundary), 2,800 feet; and nearly all the remaining summits rise between 1,600 and 1,900 feet. The parish is watered by the Tweed and Manor water and their tributaries. The par. is in the presb. of Peebles, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £175. The parish formerly belonged to the Rector of Peebles, and is supposed to derive its name from being the manor of that churchman. The parish church was erected about the year 1650; not far from which is the font stone of Manor chapel. The parish formerly contained a chapel dedicated to St. Gordian, who was martyred by Julian the Apostate. The greatest attraction in the parish is perhaps the cottage built by David Ritchie, a deformed and eccentric dwarf, from whom Sir Walter Scott drew the fictitious character of the Black Dwarf, in his novel of that name. He was buried in the parish churchyard, where a monument was erected to his memory in 1845 by Messrs. W. and R. Chambers. Here is a British or Danish camp, long supposed to have been of Roman origin, in the neighbourhood of which coins have been discovered. From the castles, peel houses, and towers that formerly existed here, the place is supposed to have been one of the arenas of the border forays and feuds. The Thief Road, so called from its having formerly been the path of bandits or mosstroopers, passes over the Dollar-law and Scrape, on the boundary of Drummelzier and this parish.

MANOR AND RAKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 1 mile E. of Hawarden. It is situated on the river Dee.

MANORBEAR, or MANORBIER, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 5 miles S.E. of Pembroke, its post town. It is a station on the Pembroke and Tenby railway. The village is situated on the coast near Manorbear Bay. The par. includes the hmlts. of Jameston and Newton, and has the ruins of the castle of William-de-Barri, which came through the Windsors, &c., to Phillipps of Picton. Some portions of the ruins are in excellent preservation. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, and in the patron. of Christ's College, Cambridge, val. £125. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a slender spire, and an effigy of Giraldus Sylvester, who was born in this parish.

MANOR-CONYNGHAM, or CUNNINGHAM, a post-office vil. in the par. of Raymoghy, in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Letterkenny. It is situated near the head of Lough Swilly, and contains a church, Presbyterian meeting-house, and dispensary within the Letterkenny Poor-law Union. Fairs are held on the 6th January, March, May, July, September, and November.

MANORDEILO, UPPER and LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Llandilofawr, co. Carmarthen, near Llandilofawr. It is situated on the river Towey.

MANORFABON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilofawr, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles N.E. of Llandilofawr. It is situated on the river Towey.

MANOR-HAMILTON, a small post and market town within the pars. of Killasnet and Cloonclare, in the bars. of Drumahaire and Rosclogher, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 27 miles N.N.W. of Carrick-on-Shannon, and 129 from Dublin. It is situated on a small stream falling into the river Bonnet, and on the road from Enniskillen to Sligo. It is almost entirely screened by the surrounding rocky hills, and possesses in its outskirts some most imposing views. Here are Killasnet church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and Methodist meeting-house, also the court-house, bridewell, school of the Church Education Society, James Masterson's school, National school, dispensary, and poorhouse. It has a police station, and general sessions are held four times a year, and petty sessions once a fortnight. Manor-Hamilton was founded by Sir Frederick Hamilton immediately after the rebellion of 1641, when the castle was built, which stands near the town. Though now partially a ruin, it was formerly a stronghold of great strength. It now belongs to Earl Leitrim. Manor-Hamilton Poor-law Union has 10 electoral divisions in the co. Leitrim. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 18th May, 1st July, first Thursdays in August and November, and 7th October, and a great cattle market on the 12th of every alternate month.

MANOROWEN, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 1 mile W. of Fishguard, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the bay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £86, in the patron. of Subchanter and Vicars-Choral of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Manorowen House, situated near the old seat of Lewis, the antiquary, is the principal residence.

MANSELFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Nicholaston, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles S.W. of Castell Llwchur. It is situated near Oxwich Bay.

MANSELL-GAMAGE, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 8½ miles from Hereford, its post town, and 4½ S. of Weobley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Hereford and Hay turnpike road, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of stiff loam and gravel. There are lime and freestone quarries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a stone structure with a square tower containing three bells. Gartons is the principal residence.

MANSELL-LACY, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 7 miles W. of Hereford, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Weobley. It is a small agricultural village situated in a sheltered valley between the woody heights belonging to the Foxley estates. The parish extends along the Hereford and Kington turnpike road. The soil is of a loamy and gravelly nature. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with about 70 acres of woodland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £162. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone structure of great antiquity, with a square tower containing a clock and four bells. There is a large school for the children of Mansell-Lacy, Bishopstone, and Yazor. Mansell House, adjoining the church, is the principal residence. Sir R. Price is lord of the manor.

MANSERGH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, ward of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 3½ miles N. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, its post town and railway station, and 7 E. of the Burton and Holme railway station. It is situated on the river Lune, and is wholly agricultural. An Act was passed in 1837 for enclosing 5,000 acres of waste land, of which 16 were appropriated for the recreation of the inhabitants. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £85, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkby-Lonsdale. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure containing one bell. Rigmaden Park, the principal residence, is situated near the road from Kirkby-Lonsdale to Sedbergh. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

MANSFIELD, a par., post and market town, in the N. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, co. Nottingham, 12 miles N.W. of Southwell, 9 N.E. of Alfreton, and 14 N.W. of Nottingham. It is a station on the Mansfield line of railway. It is situated on the N. bank of the small river Maun, or Mann, from which it takes its name, and which rises about 3 miles to the westward. The town, which is of great antiquity, is supposed to have been of British or Roman origin, and was the occasional residence of the Mercian kings, who had a lodge for the convenience of hunting in the Royal Forest of Sherwood. Until the year 1715, the courts for the Forest of Sherwood, celebrated in ballad story as the scene of the exploits of Robin Hood and his company, were held at Mansfield. The par. is intersected by the ancient Ryknield Street, or Leeming Lane, and contains the hmlt. Pleasley Hill. In the Saxon and Norman times, it was a royal demesne, and so continued till the time of Elizabeth, when it was ultimately granted away by letters-patent, and came through the earls of Chester, Hastings, &c., to the dukes of Newcastle.—The town, which stands in a deep vale near the centre of the forest, has considerably improved of late years. It is well paved and lighted with gas, and consists of three principal streets, besides others branching from them, which are narrow and irregular. The houses are principally built of grey stone, and are of handsome elevation. The shops are well supplied and large. The town contains three banks, a savings-bank, mechanics' institution, gas works, theatre, townhall, and a market place, this last being a square in connection with five of the principal streets. In the centre is a monument to the late Lord George Bentinck, erected in 1850, at a cost of £1,000, defrayed by the inhabitants of the neighbourhood. Petty sessions are held every alternate Thursday in the townhall, which is a stone building with an illuminated clock in the centre. It was erected in 1836 by a company of shareholders. Mansfield is the centre of the hosiery and lace trade, and the cotton mills give employment to the greater part of the inhabitants. There are numerous corn mills, iron foundries, brush manufactory, tanyard, and a mustard mill. An extensive trade is also done in malting, and in cutting and working into architectural ornaments the freestone obtained from the adjacent quarries. There are cavalry barracks situated at High Oakham. The forest land has recently been enclosed under the General Enclosure Act. The par. is watered by the flood-dykes and the rivers Maun and Meden. The soil consists of a rich sand, and is very fertile. Water communication is obtained by means of the Cromford Canal, which was connected with the town by a double line of railway, constructed under an Act of Parliament in 1817, at a cost of £33,000. The town is the place of election, and a polling-place for the northern division of the county.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £360, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower, containing eight bells, and a quarter-chime clock. The interior of the church contains several ancient monuments and brasses, also an organ, erected in 1795 at a cost of £1,000. In 1304 the church was partly destroyed by fire. There is also the district church of St. John's, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100. A new church has been erected at the upper end of Westgate, at an outlay of £7,000, mainly owing to the generosity of the late Henry Gally Knight, Esq. The charities are numerous. Among them is the endowment of Mr. Samuel Brunt, consisting of houses and land, which realise £1,000 per annum, and supplies upwards of 200 persons with an annuity of £4. In addition to the above charity, Mr. Charles Thompson left £600, and £400 3 per cent. Consols for providing 10 poor men and women with coats and petticoats. In the will of this eccentric gentleman was a request that he should be buried in Sherwood Forest. In the churchyard is the Free Grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth in 1561. Also, other endowed schools for both sexes. There are places of worship for the Independents, Baptists, Society of Friends, Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, and Unitarians.—The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor. Market day is Thursday for corn and provisions, and the 2nd Thursday in every month for fat cattle, sheep, and pigs. Fairs are held on the 2nd Thursday in April, July 10th, and the 2nd Thursday in October, for cattle, horses, sheep, and pigs; also an extensive cheese fair. The second Thursday in November is a statute fair for the hiring of servants. Races are held on the 11th and 12th July in Sherwood Forest.

MANSFIELD, a vil. in the par. of New Cumnock, co. Ayr, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of New Cumnock town.

MANSFIELDSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Louth, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Castle-Bellingham, its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is mostly of good quality. The road from Castle-Bellingham to Tallonstown traverses the parish, and the river Glyde flows along its southern boundary. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £215, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands in the village, is an old structure. There is a day school.

MANSFIELD-WOODHOUSE, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Broxton, co. Nottingham, 1¼ mile N. of Mansfield, its post town. It is situated near the river Mann, and has several handsome dwellings. The village, which anciently formed part of the adjoining parish of Mansfield, was destroyed by fire in 1304, when the church was partially damaged. There are lime-kilns and malt-houses, and a portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. Limestone is quarried here. The land has recently undergone much improvement, and many hundred acres formerly a barren waste have been converted into rich arable land, chiefly through the enterprise of the Duke of Portland, who caused a canal to be cut from the river Mann for its irrigation. There are still about 1,000 acres of common, being the only portion of the ancient forest of Sherwood unenclosed. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is an ancient edifice with an octagonal spired tower 104 feet high, containing a clock and four bells. The interior of the church contains some old mosaic work and a "sanctus" bell. There is a National school for both sexes, founded and endowed by Richard Radford; also a blue-coat school, for clothing and educating 50 boys, founded and endowed by Mrs. Faith Clarkson. There are chapels for the Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. At Winny Hill is a small double ditched Roman camp. Debdale House is the principal residence. Dr. Mason, Bishop of Sodor and Man, was born in this parish. The Digbys and Major Rooke, the antiquary, who described the two Roman villas, containing hypocausts and part of a mosaic pavement, found in 1786, had seats here. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor and chief landowner. A fair is held on the third Wednesday in October.

MANSHEAD, a hund. in co. Bedford, contains the pars. of Aspley-Guise, Battlesden, Chalgrave, Dunstable, Eaton-Bray, Eversholt, Harlington, Hockliffe, Holcutt, Houghton-Regis, Husborn-Crawley, Leighton-Buzzard, Milton-Bryant, Potsgrove, Salford, Tilsworth, Tingrith, Toddington, Totternhoe, Westoning, Whipsnade, Woburn, and part of Studham, comprising an area of 52,045 acres.

MANSON, GREAT and LITTLE, hmlts. in the par. and co. of Monmouth, hund. of Lower Skenfreth, 2 miles N. by E. of Monmouth.

MANSRIGGS, a tnshp. in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N. of Ulverstone. It is a small irregular village, and is wholly agricultural.

MANSTON, a par. in the hund. of Redlane, Sturminster div. of co. Dorset, 6½ miles N.W. of Blandford, its post town, the same S.W. of Shaftesbury, and 2 N.E. of Sturminster Newton. It is a small agricultural village situated on the banks of the river Stour, which forms the boundary between this parish and that of Fiddleford. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £315. The land is chiefly pasture and meadow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice with a square tower. The church has recently been thoroughly restored. There is a parochial school, chiefly supported by the rector.

MANSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles W. of Ramsgate. It was formerly the seat of the Manstons, but is now a farmhouse with the ruined chapel.

MANSTON, GREAT and LITTLE, hmlts. in the tnshp. of Ansthorpe, West Riding co. York, 4 miles E. of Leeds. It is a station on the Leeds and Milford Junction branch of the North-Eastern railway.

MANSWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Critchill-More, co. Dorset, 5 miles N.W. of Wimborne.

MANTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Witham-on-the-Hill, wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Bourne.

MANTHORPE-WITH-LITTLE-GONERBY, a tnshp. in the par., soke, and borough of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N.E. of Grantham, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the road to Lincoln, and is wholly agricultural. The waste lands have been enclosed under several Acts of Enclosure. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to that of Londonthorpe, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £170. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a spired tower. The interior of the church is handsomely fitted up, and has several rich stained windows. The church was erected at the expense of the Hon. and Rev. Richard Cust, Rector of Belton, and brother of the late Lord Brownlow, the same lord having given the site for the church and endowed it. The poor allotments, producing £25 per annum, are appropriated in aid of the poor-rates.

MANTON, a par. in the waps. of Corringham and Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N. of Kirton-in-Lindsey, its railway station and post town, and 6 S.W. of Glanford-Brigg. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The par. includes the tnshps. of Cleatham and Twigmoor. The soil consists of light sand and black peat. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1805. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £252. The church, dedicated to St. Hibald, is a modern structure with an open belfry containing one bell. There is a village school of recent erection. There are ruins of an ancient encampment between Manton and Scawby, where coins and other relics have been found. William Dallison, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MANTON, a par. in the hund. of Martinsley, co. Rutland, 3½ miles S.E. of Oakham, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Uppingham. It is a station on the Syston and Peterborough branch of the Midland railway. The parish, which is of ancient date, is situated between the rivers Gwash and Chater, and formerly belonged to Clugny Abbey. It had a chantry, founded by William Wade in Edward III.'s time, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was valued at £22 18*s.* 6*d.* The land is chiefly in pasture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £73. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient edifice with a turret containing two bells. It stands on rising ground in the centre of the village, and was restored in 1854. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. Edward Watson Smyth, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MANTON, a tythg. in the par. of Preshute, hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts, 1 mile S.W. of Marlborough. It is situated on the river Kennet.

MANUELS, hmlts. in the tnshp. of Wilsden and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Bingley, and 5 N.W. of Bradford. It is situated near the river Aire. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in weaving and in the collieries.

MANULLA, or MINOLA, a par. in the bar. of Carra, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Castlebar. It is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The soil is mostly good. Several lakes touch the boundary, and one is within the limits. The interior is traversed by the road from Castlebar to Ballagh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Ballagh, £324, in the patron. of the bishop. There are three day schools.

MANUTTON. See MENUPTON, Salop.

MANYFOLD, a branch of the Dove, rising near Hollins Clough, in North Staffordshire.

MAPASTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.E. of Ardee. The par. is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface lies along the banks of the river Glyde. It consists of good land, and is traversed by the road from Ardee to Dundalk. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Charlestown, £365, in the patron. of the primate. Dowdstown is the chief seat.

MAPERTON, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, co. Somerset, 3½ miles W. of Wincanton, its post town, and 4 N. of the Templecombe station. The parish, which is small, is situated on the high road between London and Exeter. The land is chiefly agricultural. Freestone is quarried, and there are brick and tile kilns. The soil is clayey, with a rocky subsoil. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £330. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £438, in the patron. of Wadham College, Oxon. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1556. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held, mainly supported by Mrs. Fitz Gerald. Henry Fitz Gerald is lord of the manor.

MAPLEBECK, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 8 miles N.W. of Newark, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Southwell. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated in a vale, and is wholly agricultural. The stone quarries formerly supplied stone for the erection of the bridge at Newark. The ancient mansion, which stood near the church, has been taken down. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £68. The church is an ancient structure, with a short spired tower, containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, realised from 2 acres of land. There is a school adjoining the church.

MAPLEBOROUGH, a vil. in the par. of Studley, co. Warwick, 3 miles N. of Alcester.

MAPLEDERWELL, a par. in the hund. of Basingstoke, co. Hants, 3 miles S.E. of Basingstoke, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Loddon and the Basingstoke canal. It is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Newnham, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £8 16*s.* per annum. Lord Dorchester is lord of the manor.

MAPLE-DURHAM, a par. in the hund. of Langtree, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Reading, its post town. It is a small, secluded village, situated on the river Thames, and sheltered by a ridge of hills on the N. The par. contains the hmlts. of Chawsey and Gurney. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £59 14*s.* 3*d.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £878, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with a square tower, containing a clock bearing the royal arms, the gift of William IV. In the chancel is a remarkable stained window. The charities consist of Lyster's almshouses, £23. There is a free school, founded by Lord Fitzclarence. Maple-Durham House is the principal residence. It contains an extensive collection of paintings, and has a Roman Catholic chapel, built by the late Michael Blount, Esq.

MAPLESCOMB, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingsdown, hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 6 miles S. of Dartford, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Sevenoaks. It was formerly a parish. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Kingsdown, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church is in ruins.

MAPLESTEAD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 3 miles N.W. of Halstead, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the river Colne, which intersects the parish. It is supposed to have taken its name from the number of maple trees that formerly grew there. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey, at which time it was held by the Gernons. The land is rich and well wooded, and is partly in hops. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £335, and the vicarial for £175. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £210. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a neat, ancient edifice, with a square tower, containing three bells. The interior of the church contains effigies of the Deanes, formerly of Dynes Hall. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school, chiefly supported by Mrs. Gee, of Earls Colne. Dynes Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a beautifully-wooded park. Henry John Sperling, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MAPLESTEAD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 2½ miles N. of Halstead, its post town, and 3 E. of Hedingham. It is a small village of ancient date, and wholly agricultural. Little Maplestead was given by Juliana-Fitz-Aldhelm, in the reign of Henry I., to the Knights Hospitallers, who had a preceptory here. It subsequently came to the Wisemans, Guyons, and others. The surface is embellished with wood and plantations, and the land is luxuriantly rich. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £205. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £54. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a structure of great antiquity, and remarkable as one of the few remaining models of the Holy Sepulchre. It is 70 feet long, with a circular body 30 feet in diameter, and circular E. end, and has a timbered roof. It is said formerly to have had the privilege of sanctuary. The Independents have a place of worship. The proprietors of the Hall Farm are lords of the manor.

MAPLIN SANDS, a bank near the mouth of the Thames on the Essex shore, extending from near Southend to Shoeburyness. It is marked by a fixed light put up in 1841.

MAPPERCOMBE, a tythg. with Nettlecombe, in the par. of Poorstock, co. Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Bridport.

MAPPERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Hallam, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 7 miles N.E. of Derby, its post town, and 2 N.W. of the Ilkeston railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Erewash canal. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries. There is a Sunday-school with an endowment of £6 per annum, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

MAPPERLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Basford, co. Notts, 1 mile N. of Nottingham.

MAPPERTON, or SOUTH MAPPERTON, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster Forum, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 2 miles S.E. of Beaminster, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £193. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £170. The church, dedicated to All Saints, or, according to other authorities, to St. Mary, is a neat edifice, rebuilt in 1704. Mapperton House, which is of great antiquity, is the principal residence. It is at present the seat of H. C. Compton, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

MAPPERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Almer, hund. of Loosebarrow, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.E. of Blandford-Forum.

MAPPLETON, a par. in the hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 1¾ mile N.W. of Ashborne, its post town and railway station. The village, which is small, is situated at the bridge on the river Dove, and is a favourite fishing station. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture, and in the dairy business. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic.* of Ashborne, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice with a dome, surmounted by an urn. The charities consist of about £195 per annum, the rental of lands, left by Rowland Okeover, in 1727, for the endowment of almshouses for three widows of clergymen. Mr. James Hawksworth is lord of the manor.

MAPPLETON, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 13 miles N.E. of Beverley, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Hornsea. The village, which is situated on the coast, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Rowlston and Great Cowden, and part of the tnshps. of Great Hatfield and Little Cowden. The soil consists of clay and marl. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £87. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat structure with a spired tower, containing one bell. The church has two stained windows. There are a few small charities and a Church school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Judge Brough, who presided as Judge of the Court of Admiralty on the trial of Admiral Byng, was interred here.

MAPPLEWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Barrow-upon-Soar, hund. of West-Goscote, co. Leicester, 2 miles S. of Loughborough.

MAPPLEWELL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Darton, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Barnsley. The inhabitants are principally employed in the coal mines. The Dearne and Dove canal passes in the vicinity.

MAPPOWDER, a par. in the hund. of Buckland-Newton, Cerne div. of co. Dorset, 6 miles N.E. of Cerne Abbas, and the same distance S.W. of Sturminster, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural, and is a meet for the Blackmoor Vale harriers. The greater part of the village has recently been rebuilt. Stone is quarried. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £330. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £390. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a small structure with a tower containing five bells. The interior contains monuments of the Coker family, whose old seat is now a farm, and a Norman font of Purbeck marble. John Coker, the author of "Survey of Dorset," died here in 1635. There is a small free school, erected by the Earl of Beauchamp and the rector. The custom of ringing the curfew bell from October to Lady Day, is still retained.

MAPRATH, a vil. in the par. of Dulane, in the bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath; prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Kells. Maprath House is the only residence.

MAR, or MARR, an ancient district of co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It lies for the most part between the rivers Don and Dee, and was divided into Bra Mar, or Highland Mar (both now forming the Kincardine O'Neil district), and Cromar, or Lower Mar, now the Aberdeen district, after that city, the prison of which is called the "Mids o' Mar." It gives the title of earl to the ancient family of Erskine, although no part of it belongs to that family. Mar Lodge is a spacious hunting-seat of the Earl of Fife.

MARDYKE, a vil. in the par. of Graystown, in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Cashel.

MARAZION, or MARKET-JEW, a chplry., post and market town, in the par. of St. Hilary, hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.E. of Penzance, and 9 S.W. of Helston. It is situated on the eastern side of Mount's Bay, and has a station at Marazion Road, on the Cornwall and West Cornwall railway. From the mildness of its atmosphere it is much frequented by invalids. A greater quantity of rain falls here during the year than in any other part of the county. The houses are chiefly built at the foot of a hill, by which it is sheltered from the N. winds. It was a place of importance in the reign of Henry VIII., and was fired by the French fleet, then cruising in the Channel. It again suffered by conflagration in the reign of Edward VI. It was the headquarters of pilgrims to St. Michael's Mount, to which priory belonged the profits of the markets and fairs. Under a charter of Queen Elizabeth it is governed by a mayor, eight aldermen, and twelve burgesses, with the name of "Marghasjewe. On the common seal it is spelled Marghasion, and is still called Market-jew by the common people. The town is connected with St. Michael's Mount by a causeway formed of rocks and pebbles 120 feet in width, which, as the tide recedes, becomes passable for three or four hours. St. Michael's Mount, which is the chief attraction of this place, is 250 feet above sea-level, and 1 mile in circumference at the base, resembling in form a vast pyramid. It has a castle and a small Saxon chapel on its summit: the latter, built by Edward the Confessor, is of great beauty. The castle contains many relics of great antiquity, and was visited by Queen Victoria and Prince Albert in 1846. Over the chapel is the tower containing in one of the angles an ancient lantern, better known as St. Michael's chair. There are numerous traditions concerning this mount. The part of the island towards Marazion has several houses, also a shipping harbour. The chief trade of Marazion is in coal, iron, and timber, the pilchard fishery, formerly so remunerative, being now almost extinct. The only manufacture is that of ropes. Several mines were formerly worked, and asbestos, iron ore, and actynolite are found in considerable abundance. A large tract of marshland adjoining the Chapel Rock off the beach has been recently reclaimed by Dr. Moyle, who found many hundred coins of the Roman emperors. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £105, and the vicarial for £147. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £66, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Hilary. The church is a modern stone structure, with a small spire, dedicated to St. Catherine, and is situated about 2 miles distant from the town, in the par. of St. Hilary. The charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, erected at the expense of Lady Mary Cole, which is supported by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans, Independents, and the Society of Friends have each a place of worship. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on 20th March and 29th September, chiefly for cattle.

MARBURY, a par. in the hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 3 miles N.E. of Whitchurch, its post town, and 10 S. of the Beeston railway station. It is situated at the extremity of the county, bordering upon Shropshire, and is intersected by a branch of the Ellesmere canal. It contains the tnshps. of Norbury and Marbury with Quoisley. The property formerly belonged to the Breretons, from whom it passed to the Tattons, and subsequently to the Pooles. The village, which is considerable, is reckoned extremely healthy. Courts-leet are held for the manors of Marbury and Norbury. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £327. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Whitchurch, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells, and a chancel, rebuilt by the late Earl of Bridgewater. It has a memorial E. window to the late Captain William Poole, who was killed in the Crimean war during the attack on the "Redán." The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. There is a parochial school endowed with an annuity of £17. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor.

MARBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 1½ mile N. of Northwich, its post town, and 7 miles S.W. of Nantwich. It is situated on the Grand Trunk canal, near the river Weaver. The township is of small extent, and in the reign of Henry III. was in the possession of the Marbury family, which became extinct in 1684. It was purchased by Richard Earl Rivers under a decree of the Court of Chancery in 1708, whose daughter, in marriage, brought it to the Barrymore family. Marbury Hall is the principal residence, and has latterly been much improved. It contains a rare collection of painting and antique sculpture. Near the Hall is an extensive sheet of water well stocked with all kinds of fish.

MARCH, a chplry., post and small market town, in the par. of Doddington, hund. of North Witchford, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 9 miles S.W. of Wisbeach, and 29 N. by W. of Cambridge. It has a station on the Great Eastern line of railway. It is a prosperous and improving town, situated on the banks of the navigable river Nen, which is crossed by a bridge at the N. end of the town. March has derived considerable advantage from the draining of the fen lands, in connection with which excellent roads passable at all seasons of the year have been formed. The surrounding country is flat but very fertile, producing excellent crops. The town is well paved and lighted with gas. It contains several good houses and commodious inns, with a good market place, three banks, savings-bank, and a guildhall situated in High-street. This last is a modern building, in which are held the manorial courts, also the county courts. A brisk trade is done in corn, coal, and timber. Urns and coins of Antoninus, and other of the Roman emperors, were found here in 1730. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Doddington, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to St. Wendreda, is a very ancient structure, with a spired tower at the W. end. It is said to have been erected in 1343 by an indulgence granted by the Pope to all who should contribute to it. In the interior of the church are some tombs of great antiquity. The register dates from 1655. The charities produce upwards of £600 per annum, appropriated in various ways by an order of the Court of Chancery decreed in 1851. There are National and infant schools. Neale's grammar school, founded in 1696, is endowed with 33 acres of land in White's Fen. The almshouses situated near the church are of recent erection. The Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship. Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on the Monday prior to Whit-Sunday and the third Tuesday in October, each continuing for three days.

MARCHALAD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangerniew, co. Denbigh, 7 miles N.E. of Llanrwst. The village contains the two old seats of Havodunos and Pennant. It is joined with Branar to form a tnshp.

MARCHAM, a par. in the hund. of Ock, co. Berks, 2¾ miles W. of Abingdon, its post town. It is situated on the river Ock, near the Berks and Wilts canal, and comprises the tnshps. of Cothill, Frilford, and Garford. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. It is a meet for the old Berkshire hounds. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1815. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £455, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower. It was rebuilt in 1837, with the exception of the tower. At Garford is a chapel-of-ease. The parochial charities produce about £73 8s. 6d. per annum. There is a free school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists at Frilford and Cothill have each a chapel. Sheepstead House and Marcham Park are the principal residences. The latter was formerly the seat of the rich miser Elwes. Henry Elwes, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MARCHAMLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hodnet, co. Salop, 5 miles E. of Wem.

MARCHES, the border districts between England and Wales, and England and Scotland. They were formerly administered by a lord president or warden, and council, who governed with a kind of military jurisdiction. The Welsh Marches comprehended the greater portion of Gloucester, Hereford, Salop, and Worcester, the central court being held at Ludlow Castle, by the Mortimers of Wigmore Castle, who took hence the title of Earl of March, now borne by the Richmond family. The Scotch Marches were divided into three sections, viz. West Middle, and East; the West extending from the Irish Sea to Tindale, the Middle thence to Redesdale, and the East to Tweed mouth. The Percies, earls of Northumberland, being the most influential family in those parts for many generations, filled the office of lords warden.

MARCHFARM, a vil. in the par. of Kirkinner, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Wigtown.

MARCHINGTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Hanbury, N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 3½ miles S.E. of Uttoxeter, its post town. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. The village is situated on the river Dove, and is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a brick structure, with a low square tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a monument to Sir Walter Vernon and wife. The parochial charities produce about £45 per annum. There is an endowed National school for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists. Courts leet and baron are held by James Cudden, Esq., of Norwich, who is lord of the manor.

MARCHINGTON-WOODLANDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Hanbury, N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Marchington, and 3 S.E. of Uttoxeter. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £60. The tnshp. includes the manors of Houndhill and Smallwood.

MARCHMONT, a hmlt. in co. Berwick, Scotland, near Polwarth. It is a station on the Berwickshire branch of the North British railway.

MARCHWIEL, a par. in the hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.E. of Wrexham, its post town. It is situated near the river Dee, and contains the tnshps. of Marchwiel and Sontley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £708, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which was restored in 1788, has a tomb to Miss Yorke of Erddig, and a stained window. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum. Marchwiel Hall, formerly the seat of the Broughtons, is now a farm.

MARCHWOOD, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, co. Hants, 2 miles S.W. of Southampton. It is a small fishing village on the coast, containing a coastguard station and Decoy Pond. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester. The church is a small modern structure, dedicated to St. John. The principal seat is Marchwood Lodge.

MARCLE, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 2 miles S.W. of Ledbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural, and the surface is boldly undulating. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £225. A glebe house has recently been erected by the rector. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £230, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a small ivy-covered tower containing two bells. The chancel has been thoroughly restored and a new eastern window inserted at the expense of the rector. There is a charity consisting in an annuity of £4 bequeathed by the late Thomas Hanbury, Esq. The Earl of Somers is lord of the manor.

MARCLE, MUCH, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 5½ miles S.W. of Ledbury, its post town. It is situated on the high road to Ross, and contains the chplry. of Yatton. It formerly belonged to the Lacies and Mortimers, who had a castle here. At Marclay Hill is a spot called the Wonder, where a singular landslip occurred in 1575. The hill finally placed itself in a higher position, sweeping everything away in its progress. The original site is now a chasm 40 feet in depth and 30 in length. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop grounds. The tithes, belonging to the Bishop of Hereford, have been commuted for £430, and the vicarial tithes for a rent-charge of £333, besides a portion of land set apart on the enclosure of the parish in 1795. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Yatton annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £841. The church, which is situated on rising ground, is dedicated to St. Bartholomew, a large stone structure, with a square castellated tower containing six bells. The church has tombs and effigies of the Mortimers. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, of which £6 goes to the National school. W. M. Kyrle, Esq., of Whetham, a descendant of the "Man of Ross," is lord of the manor.

MARCLIFF, a hmlt. in the par. of Bidford, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.E. of Alcester. It is situated on the river Avon.

MARCROSS, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles S. of Bridgend, its post town. It is situated on the Bristol Channel, near Nash Point, and has the ruins of an ancient castle, also a monastic grange with a cromlech, called the "old church." There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £196, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The tithes were commuted in 1840.

MARDALE, a chplry. in the pars. of Shap and Bampton, West Ward, co. Westmoreland, 15 miles S. of Penrith, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Shap. It is situated under the Fells, near Mardale Water, which runs into Hawes-Water. This last is a lake 3 miles in length, by half a mile wide, having on the E. a range of steep and woody hills, and on the western bank is a good roadway with several farmhouses. The land is very fertile and well cultivated. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £132, in the patron. of the Vicar of Shap. The church is a small stone structure, with a low square tower containing one bell. A pleasure fair is held on Whit-Monday.

MARDEN, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 5½ miles N. of Hereford, its post town, and 1½ mile N. of the Moreton railway station. The village, which is considerable and of irregular form, is situated on the river Lug, noted for its grayling and trout. It is about 1½ mile E. of the turnpike road leading from Hereford to Leominster, and includes the tnshps. of Amberley and Wisterstone. Grove Hill, situated about 3 miles distant, commands an extensive view of seven counties. Sutton Walls, celebrated for being the site of the camp of Caractacus, and afterwards of the palace of King Offa, has also views over the whole vale. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is loamy and clayey upon a subsoil of gravel and stone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £247, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, or, according to others, to St. Ethelbert, is a stone structure of great antiquity, with a square tower surmounted by four pinnacles and a spire, and containing six bells. It stands near a holy well said to have sprung up on the interment of the body of King Ethelbert prior to its removal to Hereford Cathedral. There is also a brass to Lady Chute, who was a resident of this parish. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, of which £20 goes to Shelley's school. In the chapel-of-ease at Wisterstone has been recently inserted a stained window to the memory of William Chute Gwinnett, Esq. The Amberley chapel is in ruins. Marden Court and Wisterstone Court are the principal residences. Thomas Evans, Esq., of Sufton Court, is lord of the manor.

MARDEN, a hund. in the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Goudhurst, Marden, and Staplehurst, comprising an area of 23,530 acres.

MARDEN, a par. in the above hund., lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles N.W. of Staplehurst, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Maidstone. It is a station on the South-Eastern railway. It is an extensive agricultural village, and was formerly a market town. The land is partly in hop grounds. The impropriation belongs to the Archbishop of Canterbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £828, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is of great antiquity, with a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a very antique font bearing date 1652. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce about £55 per annum, exclusive of the endowment of Sir C. Booth's school. There are parochial schools for both sexes, also infant schools erected in 1859 by voluntary contributions. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. Richard Springett, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARDEN, or MERTON, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 6½ miles S.E. of Devizes, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon. There is a tumulus 40 feet in height and 240 in circumference, within a camp of 30 acres, where Etheldred was defeated by the Danes in 871. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190, and the vicarial for £175. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £168, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church, as well as the exterior, is finely ornamented. The National school was erected in 1844. Stephen Richmond Neate, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARDEN, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 6 miles S.W. of Midhurst, and 8 N.W. of Chichester. This parish, which comprises only 910 acres, is spoken of in Domesday Book as one of the four Meredens held by allodial tenure of Edward the Confessor. The manor after the Conquest was given to Roger Earl of Montgomery. Since the reign of Edward I. it has been annexed to the prebend of East Marden in Chichester Cathedral. The village, which consists of a few farmhouses, is built in a valley on the downs. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £106, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has recently been put in thorough repair. The register commences in 1691. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

MARDEN, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 7 miles S.E. of Petersfield, and 1 mile N. of East Marden. The parish is situated on the road from Petersfield to Chichester. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. Above half the land is down pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £68. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £70. The church is an ancient structure with a circular E. end, and was restored in 1836.

MARDEN UP AND WEST, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 8 miles N.W. of Chichester. The par. includes the tythg. of West Marden. The village is small and wholly agricultural. On the downs was formerly a telegraph communicating with others on the line between Portsmouth and London. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Compton. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Michael. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at West Marden.

MARDINS, a vil. in the par. of Kirkoswald, co. Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Maybole.

MARDOCK, a station on the Buntingford branch line of the Great Eastern railway.

MAREE, a loch in co. Ross, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Gairloch. It is a considerable sheet of water 12 miles long by 3 miles in the broadest part, and is connected with Loch Ewe by a narrow stream. At the bottom are three small islands, and on its bank the majestic Ben Lair, which towers to the height of 3,045 feet above the sea-level, and is haunted by the grey eagle, now rarely seen in other places.

MAREFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Tilton, hund. of Gartree, co. Lincoln (formerly Leicester), 7 miles S. of Melton-Mowbray.

MAREHAM-LE-FEN, a par. in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 13 miles N. of Boston, its post town, and 5 N.E. of the Tattershall railway station. The village is small. The lands adjoining the Wildmore Fen have been much improved by drainage. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of loam upon a subsoil of chalk. There is a navigation to New Bolingbroke and Boston. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1805. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £355, in the patron. of the Bishop of Manchester. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a square tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1561. The charities consist of Revesby almshouses. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. J. B. Stanhope, M.P., is lord of the manor.

MAREHAM-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.E. of Horncastle, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is stony and flinty, with a subsoil of white clay. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of High-Toynton, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £160, in the patron. of the Bishop of Manchester. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a turret containing one bell. In 1804, during the restoration of the church, two angels of Henry VII., two nobles of Edward IV., with several silver coins of later date, in a leather purse, were discovered within the wall. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Christopher Turnor, Esq., of Stoke Rochford, is lord of the manor.

MARESFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Rushmonden, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 2 miles N. of Uckfield, its nearest railway station and post town, and 8 N.E. of Lewes. It is situated in Ashdown Forest, and contains the hmlt. of Nutley. Petty sessions are held in the village. There are corn mills, brick kilns, a gunpowder mill, and extensive nursery and flower gardens, specially celebrated for the cultivation of rose-trees. The land is partly in hop-grounds and orchards, and a large extent of unenclosed common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £615. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £645. The parish church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a stone edifice with a square embattled tower, containing six bells. In the chancel are traces of a much older church. The interior was entirely restored in 1838. The register dates from 1538. There is a district church at Nutley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a National school, and a chapel for the Wesleyans. Maresfield Park, the principal residence, is an ancient brick building situated about half a mile N. Viscount Gage is lord of the manor.

MARESTONE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Aberlemno and Rescobie, co. Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Forfar.

MARFLEET, a par. in the Middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 2¼ miles E. of Hull, its post town. It is a station on the Hull and Holderness railway. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Humber, and is wholly agricultural. About a third of the land is arable, and the remainder, which is used for grazing, is in fine condition. There is a coastguard station. The tithes were commuted for a money payment under a private Act in 1763. The living is a discharged perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £61. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The charities produce about £1 per annum.

MARFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Wheathampstead, co. Herts, 5 miles N.W. of Hatfield.

MARGAM, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles from Taibach, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Neath. It is situated on the coast and the Roman road Via Julia Montana, under Margam Hill, or Pendâr, which rises 800 feet in height. The parish, which is of large extent, comprising 11,200 acres, is partly within the borough of Aberavon, near Margam-Burrows. It contains the hmlts. of Brombill, Havod-y-Porth, High-Kenfigg, and Trissient. There are remains of a Cistercian Abbey founded in 1147 by Morgan Arglwydd, or Robert Earl of Gloucester, where King John was entertained on his way to Ireland. At the Dissolution it was sold to Sir Rice Mansell, an ancestor of the present owner About one mile distant from the village of Margam are the Taibach copper and tin works. The hamlet has been removed since 1841, but the population of this parish has recently greatly increased. Port Talbot, which is in the vicinity, has every facility for the import and export of iron, coal, &c., to and from the neighbouring works, especially to the busy district of Cwm Avon, where are the extensive works of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England. The surface, which is hilly, abounds with limestone, coal, iron, and copper, the greater part at present remaining untouched. The living is a perpet. cur. with the cur. of Taibach annexed, in the dioc. of Llandaff, joint val. £121. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, formerly belonged to the above-mentioned abbey. It was restored in 1810, and contains monuments of the Bussy, Talbot, and Mansell families. In the churchyard is an inscribed stone and a wheel cross. Near the church are remains of a twelve-sided chapter-house 50 feet in diameter, the roof of which was beautifully groined, but fell in about 1799. There are also remains of a S. door of a Lady chapel, and part of the cloisters. The principal residence is the modern mansion of C. R. M. Talbot, Esq., M.P., and lord-lieutenant of the county. It is a handsome structure chiefly designed by its owner, and consists of two façades and a tower situated on rising ground, but sheltered behind by Margam Hill. The mansion contains several antique statues, ancient furniture, and paintings by the old masters—among the last may be mentioned "St. Augustine with the Virgin and Child," by P. Veronese, a Vandyke, &c. Within the grounds is an orangery 327 feet in length by 81 in breadth, with a palladium front, containing the produce of a cargo from Holland designed for Queen Mary, with pomegranates, lemons, citrons, and other exotics. In the grounds is a bay-tree 60 feet in height and 45 feet in diameter. From the mildness of the climate the trees and plants attain an immense size, presenting a rich and luxurious appearance.

MARGARET-MARSH, a par. in the hund. of Sturminster-Newton-Castle, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.W. of Shaftesbury, its post town. The parish is of very small extent, comprising only 540 acres. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Iwerne-Minster, in the dioc. of Sarum.

MARGARET-ROOTHING. See ROOTHING, MARGARET, co. Essex.

MARGARET'S, ST., the seat of the Marquis of Ailsa, at Twickenham, co. Surrey.

MARGARET'S, ST., a par. in the hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, co. Hereford, 12 miles W. by S. of Hereford. It is situated on the river Dore, and is intersected by numerous brooks. The surface is hilly and well-wooded. The village is wholly agricultural. From the higher grounds extensive views are obtained. The limestone formation, which intersects the country, is here only one mile wide, and rests upon a bed of marl of great depth. Stone is quarried for various purposes. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. with the perpet. cur. of Michael-Church-Eskley annexed, £170. The church is an ancient structure with pointed windows, and contains at the east end a rood-loft. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum.

MARGARET'S, ST. See STANSTEAD, St. MARGARET'S, co. Hertford.

MARGARET'S, ST., a vil. in the borough of Marlborough, co. Wilts, opposite Marlborough. It is situated on the river Kennet, and had formerly a Gilbertine priory, founded in the reign of King John, and given at the Dissolution to the Stringers.

MARGARET'S, ST., HOPE, a vil. in the island and par. of South Ronaldshay, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland, 11 miles S. of Kirkwall. The village, which is chiefly inhabited by fishermen, is situated at Water Sound Ferry, 1 mile across to Burray, and has a good fishing harbour.

MARGARET'S, ST., HOPE, a bay or creek on the coast of Fife, Scotland, near Rosyth Castle, where Queen Margaret, wife of Malcolm Canmore, was wrecked when flying from England.

MARGARET, ST., a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Killinick. It is 1 mile long and barely as much broad. The surface lies along the sea-coast, and consists chiefly of good soil. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Tacumshin, £789, in the patron. of the bishop. Ruins of the church are seen.

MARGARET, ST., a par. in the bars. of Ballaghkeen and East Shelmaliere, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Wexford, which is its post town. It is 3 miles long and its extreme breadth is 2 miles. The surface lies along the coast of Wexford Harbour, and comprises a considerable proportion of waste land. Part of the parish consists of a sandy peninsula of 2 miles length, at the extremity of which is Raven Point. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Ardcolme, £509, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Skreen and Castlebridge. There is a day school. Two or three residences are seated in this parish.

MARGARET, ST., a par. in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Swords. The par. is 2 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of a middling soil. It is touched on the W. by the road from Dublin to Drogheda. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Finglass, £283, in the patron. of the archbishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Finglass. Several seats surround the village. St. Margaret's Well is enclosed, and affords a soft and pleasant bath. Here are ruins of Dunsaghly Castle and of St. Margaret's Church.

MARGARET, ST., or STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Ivinghoe, co. Bucks, near Ivinghoe. It is situated on the Roman way, Icknield Street, and formerly had a Benedictine nunnery, founded by Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester, in 1160. The revenue of the nunnery at the Dissolution was returned at £22 6*s*. There is neither church nor village, only a few farmhouses.

MARGARET, ST., AT-CLIFFE, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3 miles N.E. of Dover. This place received the adjunct to its name from its high situation on the chalk cliffs overlooking the English Channel. It contains St. Margaret's Bay, where is a small wooden pier or jetty, chiefly used by the fishing craft. The village, which is small but neatly-built, commands a sea-view, and is noted for its lobsters, which are said to be the finest-flavoured in England. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380, and the vicarial for £105. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £160, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is an old Norman edifice. The charities produce about £7 per annum, of which £1 is for ringing the curfew bell.

MARGARET, ST., ISLAND, an ext. par. place in the par. of Tenby, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S. of Tenby.

MARGARETTING, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 2 miles E. of Ingatestone, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Chelmsford. It is situated on the river Wid. The Roman and modern road from London to Colchester, and the Great Eastern railway, traverse the parish. It contains the hmlt. of Margaretting Street. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £430, and the vicarial for £189 15*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £168. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a neat edifice with a wooden belfry, surmounted by a shingled spire, and containing four bells. The charities produce about £9 per annum, and a house for the poor. There is a National school for both sexes. A moated house, called Killigrew's Farm, was formerly a favourite resort of Henry VIII., and, until recently, was approached by a drawbridge, with two watch towers.

MARGATE, a seaport, market town, municipal boro' and watering-place, in the par. of St. John's, hund. of Ringslow and Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 15 miles N.E. by E. of Canterbury, and 72 S.E. of London. It has stations on the South-Eastern, and London, Chatham, and Dover railways; also, a branch line to Ramsgate. Steamboats run to London, Gravesend, Herne-Bay, Ramsgate, and Tilbury. Its name was originally Mer-gate, or Meregate, signifying an opening or gate into the sea, the town being built in a hollow or break in the cliffs. In Leland's time it had a pier, and was the landing-place of William III., George I., George II., Marlborough, and Duncan after the battle of Camperdown. It was, however, an inconsiderable fishing town, till towards the close of the last century, when it came into vogue as a favourite watering-place. The first steamer ran from here to London in 1815, from which date the town rapidly increased, till 1841, when its population was above 11,000, or 40,000 at the height of the season. In 1861 it had declined to 10,152. After the formation of railways to the watering-places on the south coast, the popularity of Margate somewhat declined, but it is now gradually recovering its position, and many houses have recently been erected at Westbrook, known as the Royal Crescent. The shore is well adapted to sea-bathing, and the air remarkably salubrious, as the motto of the borough arms implies,—"Porta maris portus salutis."—The town is situated on the N. coast of Kent, in 51° 24′ N. lat. and 1° 22′ E. long, about 3 miles W. of the North Foreland, and opposite the Margate Sands, which extend 4 miles in length by 2 broad, and are dry at low water, dividing Margate Roads from the Queen's Channel. It is a member of Dover Cinque Port, and a subport to Ramsgate, and has a harbour between the Nayland and Fulsam chalk reefs. The pier, constructed in 1815 by Messrs. Rennie and Jessup, at the cost of £100,000, is of Whitby stone, 900 feet long, and 60 feet wide, having at the head the Jarvis pillar, Droit Office, &c., with a lighthouse on it, from which a fine view is obtained. At the foot of the pier is a new landing-place, constructed in 1854, and supported by iron pillars, to enable passengers to land at all times of the tide. The Marine Parade fronting the terrace has recently been widened, and is protected from the action of the sea by a stone wall. It extends about 2,500 feet in length, including the new-made portion in front of the Royal Crescent. The Esplanade, which is parallel to the Parade, is a quarter of a mile in length. The town is irregularly laid out, but many of the streets are wide and well paved. That portion of it to the W. of the harbour is called Buenos Ayres. It is abundantly supplied with good water by the Margate and Broadstairs Waterworks, situated at Tivoli, and completed in 1859. The principal buildings are—the townhall, containing several portraits, where the town commissioners hold their meetings, and petty sessions are held weekly; the market, enclosed by Tuscan porticoes and iron railings; the Droit Office at the end of the pier, with an illuminated clock and waiting-room; the theatre, built in 1787; the custom-house in Fort-place; the post-office in Cecil-square; the Royal National Hospital, or Sea-Bathing Infirmary, at Westbrook, founded in 1796 for 250 patients, but since considerably enlarged; the literary and scientific institution in Hawley-square, to which are attached a library of near 3,000 volumes, and a museum, containing specimens of many rare British birds and plants, and news-rooms; a sailors' room and observatory on the Fort; the assembly rooms, with a colonnade of coupled Doric columns, the principal room of which is 87 feet long by 43 wide, and is open daily during the season for concerts and balls. There are, besides, a bank, savings-bank, circulating libraries, bazaars, and several bathing establishments, of which the principal are the Clifton Baths, excavated out of the chalk cliff, with billiard and news-rooms attached; bathing-rooms in the High-street, and at the Lower Marine-terrace. In the vicinity are the Tivoli, Shallows, and Chapel Hill public gardens. Near the pier is a patent slip for the repair of ships; there are also a brewery for Cobb's ale, a ropery, and several flour-mills, one called Hooper's Mill, famed for its horizontal sails.—The chief trade consists in corn, timber, and coal, and some little trade with the Netherlands. There is still a rather considerable fishery for skate, haddock, soles, and flat fish, and the fishermen add to their earnings by assisting vessels in distress. For municipal purposes, the borough, which was constituted in 1857, is divided into four wards, and is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. It is the seat of a county court, which is held once a month.—The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. about £500, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a very ancient structure, having been begun in 1050, but has suffered greatly from the many alterations made in it. It is built of rough flint and rubble, and has a square tower containing a peal of eight bells. It contains several interesting monuments and six brasses, two of priests, the earliest bearing date 1431. There is also the district church of the Holy Trinity, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £221. It is a modern edifice, with a lofty tower 135 feet high, which serves as a sea-mark, and for this purpose the Trinity House contributed largely towards its erection. The Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, Calvinistic Methodists, Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion, and Roman Catholics have places of worship. There are National, British, and denominational schools; also, a dispensary for the poor. The charities produce about £800 per annum, including £591, the income from endowment of Yoakley's Drapers' almshouses, built in 1709. These originally consisted of 8 almshouses and a house for the overseer; but they have since been increased to 22, and are under the superintendence of the Society of Friends. In 1791, several Roman coins and an urn were found imbedded in the cliff; and at Dentdelion, or Dent-de-Lion, are the remains of an ancient mansion, with a well-prison and castellated gateway. In the vicinity are many drives and walks, and the whole coast abounds with objects of geological and antiquarian interest. The markets are held on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and are well supplied with meat, poultry, fish, vegetables, fruit, &c.

MARHAM-CHERRY, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N.E. of Downham-Market, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Narborough railway station. It is a straggling village, situated near the river Nar, which flows through the north-western part of the parish. Here was formerly a Cistercian nunnery, founded by Isabella-de-Albini in 1251, which was given to the Hares at the Dissolution. This place was anciently celebrated for its cherries, and subsequently for its walnut-trees. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 200 acres of fen. There are some chalk pits, in which various fossils are found. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £645 15*s., and the vicarial for £371. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £434, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a noble structure, with a lofty embattled tower, containing six bells. The church contains recumbent effigies of Sir John Steward and his lady. The parochial charities consist of 200 acres of allotment fen for the poor. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Sir Thomas Hare is lord of the manor of New Hall and Shouldham, and Henry Villebois, Esq., of Old Hall and Westacre.

MARHAMCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Stratton, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Stratton, its post town, and 8 from Holsworthy. The village, which is small, is situated on the Bude canal, near Bude Bay. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Maromcerch, and was held by Robert Earl of Mortaigne, from whom it passed to the Pynes, Rolles, Trefusis, &c. There is an inclined plane on the Bude canal, which is worked by a water-wheel, 50 feet in diameter. It is used for raising laden boats, and is distant from the village about 1½ mile. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. There is a small foundry. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £344. The church, dedicated to St. Marvenne, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. It has tombs of ancient date. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, of which £6 go to a school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Wesleyan Association Methodists, and Bible Christians, have each a place of worship. Fairs are held on the Wednesday after the 25th April, and on the 12th August.

MARHIN, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Dingle, which is its post town. It is 2 miles long and 1 mile broad. The surface partakes of the mountainous and boggy character of the barony, and is traversed by the road from Dingle to Dunmore Head. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with another, £56. Divine service is held in the waterguard station at Donquin. Here are two day-schools. Here are ruins of the old church; likewise the remains of the castle of the Desmonds, near which are some Druidical remains.

MARHOLM, a par. in the lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 4¾ miles N.W. of Peterborough, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. In this parish is Abbey Milton, a large but irregularly-built Elizabethan structure belonging to the Earls Fitzwilliam. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £311. The church, dedicated to St. Guthlac, is an ancient structure with a square tower, and is in good preservation. The interior contains monuments of the Fitzwilliam family. There are almshouses for 4 poor persons, who receive an annuity of £1 19*s.* each, the endowment of the Earls Fitzwilliam.

MARIENSLEIGH, or MARIANSLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 3 miles S.E. of South Molton, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated near the river Mole. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £165. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £120, in the patron. of the trustees of Davey's Charity. The church is a neat edifice, dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school.

MARIE, ST., a par. in the Isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 5 miles N.W. of St. Heliers. It is situated in the northern portion of the island, and the surface is varied by hill and dale, including the valley of Greve de Lecq. There are several corn-mills and a paper-mill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £120, in the patron. of the governor. The church was built in the 14th century. There is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists, and several schools.

MARISHES, a tnshp. in the par. of Pickering, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of Pickering. It is situated on the river Derwent, near the Whitby branch line of the North-Eastern railway, which has a station at Marishes Road.

MARK, or MARK WATER, a feeder of the North Esk, co. Forfar, Scotland. It rises in the Grampians, and joins the North Esk at Invermark Castle, near Lochlee.

MARK, a par. in the hund. of Bempstone, co. Somerset, 10 miles from Bridgwater, its post town, 5 S.W. of Axbridge, and 4 from Highbridge railway station. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated near Mark Yeo, and on the turnpike road from Highbridge to Wells. It is divided into two districts, called East and West Mark. A great portion of the land is in pasture, and much cheese is made. The soil is clayey and the subsoil lias. The impropriation belongs to the Earl of Harrowby, whose tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £295. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £175. The church, dedicated to St. Mark, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. The church has recently been restored. The register dates from the 16th century. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school held in the National schoolroom. The Bible Christians and Wesleyans have each a place of worship, and the latter a Sunday-school. John F. Fraser, Esq., is lord of the manor. Annual fairs are held on the Tuesday prior to Whit-Sunday, and on the Mondays before the 20th August and 20th September for horses and cattle.

MARKBY, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Alford, its post town. The village, which is very small, is situated near the coast. Prior to the reign of King John a priory was founded here by Ralph Fitz-Gilbert for Black Canons, of which no traces now remain. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £72. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient thatched structure, with a small turret containing one bell. The register dates from 1576. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists. The Massingberds are lords of the manor.

MARKEATON, a tnshp. in the par. of Mackworth, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 1¼ mile N.W. of Derby, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river

Derwent. It anciently belonged to the earls of Chester, and came through the Touchets to the Munday family. The Hall, which is the principal residence, is a brick mansion, situated in an extensive and well-wooded park. W. Mundy, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARKET-BOSWORTH. See BOSWORTH MARKET, in co. Leicester, and so for other places in Market, which will be found under the proper name.

MARKETHILL, a small post and market town in the pars. of Mullaghbrack and Kilclooney, in the bar. of Lower Fews, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Armagh, and 76 from Dublin. It is a station on the Newry and Armagh railway. The town is situated on the road from Armagh to Newry. It contains a police station, bridewell, and court-house, and petty sessions are held at intervals. There are three chapels and a school. The dispensary is within the Armagh Poor-law Union. In the vicinity is Draper's Hill, spoken of in Dean Swift's works, also Gosford Castle, the seat of Lord Gosford.

MARKET-STREET, a chplry. in the pars. of Caddington, Flamstead, and Studham, partly in the hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, and partly in that of Manshead, co. Beds, 3 miles S.E. of Luton. This place was anciently called Merkgate, and comprises three hmlts. On a hill where now stands an ancient mansion called "The Priory" was formerly a Benedictine nunnery founded in 1145 by Geoffrey, Abbot of St. Albans, on land given by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. Its revenue at the Dissolution was £143 13*s.* 8*d., when the site was given to G. Ferrers. In the village, which consists of one long street facing the road from London to Birmingham, several industries are carried on, as the manufacture of hats, bonnets, and straw plait. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £227. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is situated in the Priory Park, and was erected about the middle of the last century. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Baptists. The charities consist of £138 per annum, belonging to the grammar school. There is a National school.

MARKET-STREET, a tnshp. in the par. of Wymondham, within the incorporation and hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 8 miles S.W. of Norwich. It is a populous district, situated near the river Yare.

MARKFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 8 miles N.W. of Leicester, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Bagworth railway station. It is a large but irregularly built village. The chief portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £500, in the patron. of the Marquis of Hastings. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing three bells. The church has recently been repaired and enlarged. The parochial charities produce about £9 10*s.* per annum. There is a Sunday-school in connection with the church, and one for the Primitive Methodists, who have also a chapel. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The charities consist of land left by Mrs. Avery in 1723 for the poor, now producing £12 per annum. The Earl of Stamford and Warrington is lord of the manor.

MARKHAM, EAST, a par. in the South Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 1½ mile N. of Tuxford, its post town and railway station on the Great Northern line, which passes through the parish. It contains the tnshp. of Markham Moor, formerly a wide tract of moorland, but enclosed in 1811. A portion of the parish is devoted to the cultivation of hops. The soil is generally a fertile clay. The village, situated on an acclivity, is large and well built. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1810. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the rect. of West Drayton annexed, £334. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a spacious Gothic structure, with a lofty embattled tower, and contains some ancient monuments; one of Chief Justice Sir John Markham, who died in 1409. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, distributed to the poor in bread. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There are both day and Sunday schools. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of the manor.

MARKHAM, WEST, or MARKHAM-CLINTON, a par. in the hund. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 1½ mile N.W. of Tuxford, its post town, and 4 miles W. of Tuxford railway station. The par., which is of small extent, is situated between the Great Northern road and the river Idle, and contains the hmlt. of Milton, where Chief Justice Markham was born. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1808. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Bevercoates, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £254. The old church, dedicated to All Saints, is disused. The new church, which is situated on rising ground, has an octagonal tower, erected in 1832 at the expense of the Duke of Newcastle, whose family vault is here. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of the manor.

MARKIE WATER, one of the sources of the river Spey, rises in Badenoch, co. Inverness, Scotland.

MARKINCH, a par. in the Kirkcaldy district of the co. Fife, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Balcurrie, Balgonie, Burns, Haughmill, Inverleven, Markinch, Thornton, Woodside, Windygates, and part of the vil. of Star. It is bounded by the par. of Kennoway on the E.; on the W. by Dysart, Kinglassie, and Leslie; on the N. by Falkland and Kettle; and on the S. by Wemyss. It extends from N. to S. 5½ miles, by a mean breadth of 2 miles, its southern end being considerably wider. The parish has a general slope towards the S.; it is under the best state of cultivation, enclosure and plantation, and is traversed by the streams of the Leven and the Orr, and the great road of the county. Coal was worked here before 1517, and the district around now furnishes abundance of that mineral as well as ironstone. The par. is in the presb. of Kirkcaldy and synod. of Fife, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £284. The parish church, an ancient structure, once belonging to St. Andrew's Priory, was enlarged and partly rebuilt in 1806; its steeple is 104 feet high. There is a chapel-of-ease at Thornton, and another at Milton; United Presbyterian churches at Inverleven and Markinch, and at the latter place there is also a Free church. Throughout the parish there are nine non-parochial schools. The par. contains Balgonie Castle, one of the seats of the Earl of Leven, and from whence his eldest son takes his title of baron. The castle is an edifice of great antiquity and strength, and is situated on the S. bank of the Leven. About half a mile to the E. is the castle of Balfour. Balbirnie House is a substantial mansion. N. of the village of Markinch is a stone cross about 7 feet in height, near which is Markinch Hill, which has some artificial terraces cut on it. Remains of Kirkforther chapel still exist, and coins have been found at Maiden Castle camp. The manufactures are extensive and various. There are paper and flax spinning mills, a woollen factory, a distillery, bleach-fields, and the weaving of linens is also an extensive employment. The village of Markinch, which is 10 miles S. of Cupar, is a railway station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line. It occupies an open situation on a piece of irregular rising ground. It is lighted with gas, and there is a branch office of the Commercial Bank. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday of February, on the last Tuesday of March, on the second Tuesday of May, on the second Friday of October, and on the third Tuesday of December.

MARKINGFIELD, an ext. par. place, in the lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Ripon.

MARKINGTON WITH WALLERTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Ripon, its post town, and 1 mile W. of Wormal Green station on the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river

Nidd. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Agricultural machines are manufactured in this township, and lime-burning is carried on. The soil is clay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £169, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael the Archangel, is a neat stone structure, with a belfry containing two bells. The charities produce about £7 per annum. There is an endowed Church school for both sexes, and a place of worship for the Wesleyans. William Wilberforce, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARKSBURY, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, co. Somerset, 7 miles S.W. of Bath, its post town, and 4 S. of the Keynsham railway station. The par., which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural, and includes the hmlt. of Houndstreet. The soil consists of loam and stone brash, with a subsoil of marl. Coal is found. The surface is hilly, and the lower grounds are watered by several rivulets. On Wingsbury Hill are remains of an ancient chapel, probably belonging to a monastery, which formerly existed here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £240. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

MARKSHALL, a par. in the Witham div. of the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 2 miles N.W. of Coggeshall, its post town, and 5 N. of the Kelvedon railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Blackwater, and is wholly agricultural. At the Conquest it was held by Nigel under the Montforts, and was called Marcheshald. The situation is low, and the soil generally a strong loam, resting on a substratum of clay. The land is chiefly in pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £176. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £158. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a modern brick building of neat appearance. It contains an altar-piece figuring the Descent from the Cross. Adjoining the church is Markshall, the principal residence. The hall contains a portrait of Mrs. M. Honeywood, who, dying at the age of 93, left 16 children, and 351 grandchildren to the fourth generation.

MARKSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk. See MATTISHALL.

MARKS-TEY, a par. in the Witham div. of the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 5 miles W. of Colchester, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Coggeshall. It is situated near the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a station. There are traces of the moat which formerly surrounded Marks-Tey Hall, now a farmhouse. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £234, in the patron. of Balliol College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure.

MARLAND-PETERS, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 5½ miles S.W. of Great Torrington, its post town, and 12½ S. of Bideford. The village, which is small, is situated on the high road from Torrington to Hatherleigh, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is various, with a subsoil of clay and rock. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £195. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains several brasses and monuments. There is a school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school held in the school-room. Winscott House is the principal residence.

MARLBOROUGH, a par., post and market town, and municipal and parliamentary borough, locally in the hund. of Silkley, but exercising separate jurisdiction, co. Wilts, 10 miles W. of Hungerford, and 14 E. of Devizes. It lies about 6 miles off the Berks and Hants line of railway, with which it is connected by a branch line, starting from Savernake station. This town is supposed by Camden to have been the Cunetio of Antoninus, and subsequently took the name of Marlbridge, or Marleberg, from the marl or chalk hills by which it is surrounded. At the time of the Domesday Survey it was held in royal demesne, and had a church, but the castle was not built till the subsequent reign. In the baronial war of John, the castle was alternately held by the king and the barons, and seems to have been an occasional residence of subsequent sovereigns till the time of Henry VII., and to have formed part of the dowries of several queens. There was also a royal residence at Ogbourne, about a mile and a half from the town. Henry III. held a parliament here, which enacted the laws relative to the police of the kingdom, commonly called the "statutes of Marlebridge," and from that time till the reign of Charles I., the assizes were held here. In the civil war of the 17th century, it was garrisoned by the parliamentarians under the Earl of Essex, but was surprised by General Wilmot, who, in December, 1642, captured here above 1,000 prisoners and a great quantity of military stores. The castle and borough were granted by Henry VIII. to Edward Duke of Somerset, and have descended by intermarriage to the Marquis of Ailesbury. The castle having fallen into decay, the Dukes of Somerset, of the Seymour family, erected a large house on its site, subsequently converted into the Castle Inn, which has recently given place to the Marlborough College, which forms a considerable mass of buildings at the western extremity of the High-street. This institution, originally founded with the object of giving a liberal education to the sons of clergymen on economical terms, was incorporated by letters patent in 1845, and received a second charter in 1849, by which latter half of the pupils may be sons of laymen. It has a chapel, dedicated to St. Michael, built in 1847 by Blore, and subsequently decorated by Butterfield, designed solely for the use of the pupils, who average about 500. The Archbishop of Canterbury is perpetual visitor, the Bishop of Salisbury is president of the council. A modern school has recently been attached to the college for the education of youths not intended for the Universities.—The town, which stands on the Bath road near the banks of the river Kennett, consists chiefly of one spacious street, running from E. to W., which is paved, and lighted with gas. On the N. side of the principal street, chiefly shops, is a penthouse projecting in front of the houses, and serving for a promenade in wet weather. The houses are for the most part large and well-built, the more modern of stone and brick, and the older of wood, ornamented in front by curious carved work. It contains a market-house, erected by the corporation in 1790 on the site of a former one, over which is the town-hall. There are also assembly rooms, a council room, and court-house, the county bridewell, four commercial banks, and a savings-bank. The public reading-room, situated in High-street, was opened in 1854, and has a library attached, belonging to the Marlborough Reading and Mutual Improvement Society, established in 1844. The town derives considerable advantages from the establishment of Marlborough College, which has considerably added to the business.—The trade is principally in corn, meal, coal, malt, bacon, butter, and cheese, of which two last vast quantities are sent every week to London. The chief industries carried on are malting, brewing, rope and sacking making, tanning, and wool-stapling.—The population of the municipal borough in 1851 was 3,908, and, in 1861, 3,684; that of the parliamentary borough, which includes the parish of Preshute, in 1851, was 5,135, and, in 1861, 4,893. It returns two members to parliament, and is a borough by prescription, first chartered by John in 1205. Under the Municipal Reform Act it is governed by a mayor, who is also returning officer, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of "mayor and burgesses of the borough and town of Marlborough." The new borough has an area of 3,983 acres, and a revenue of about £1,000, chiefly arising from rents. The franchise is enjoyed by all £10 householders, but the chief influence is with the Marquis of Ailesbury, of Tottenham Park. Marlborough is the headquarters of the county militia, and the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing 13 parishes. The union workhouse, which is situsituated in the parish of Preshute about half a mile N.W. of the town, is a building of white Bath stone. Marlborough is also the seat of New County Court and superintendent registry districts. To the S. of the town is the ancient Forest of Savernake, and on the N. of it are the open downs, about 500 feet high.—The livings are St. Mary's, a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop, and St. Peter's with St. Paul's, a discharged rect., val. £130, also in the patron. of the bishop. The church of St. Mary is a neat stone edifice, with an ancient tower and Norman doorway, but considerably damaged during the civil war in 1641. The church of St. Peter, which stands at the western extremity of the High-street, is a commodious structure with a lofty square tower, surmounted by battlements and pinnacles. The interior was completely restored in 1863. The Independents, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and Baptists, have places of worship. Edward VI.'s free grammar school, founded in 1551, has a revenue from endowment of £205, with exhibitions at both Universities. Judge Foster and Walter Harte, the poet and historian, who wrote the life of "Gustavus Adolphus," were pupils of this school. There are also National schools for boys and girls. The monastic institutions, of which no remains now exist, were a Gilbertine priory, founded in the reign of John, and dedicated to St. Margaret, the revenue of which, at the Dissolution, was returned at £38 19*s.* 2*d.*, and was then given to the Stringers. A convent of Whitefriars, established in 1316 by the merchants of the town; a Trinitarian Friary, founded in the reign of Henry III.; St. John's Hospital, founded in the reign of Henry II., and St. Thomas's in that of Henry III., and annexed to the Priory of St. Margaret in the time of Richard II.—The Churchill family take from this place the titles of duke and earl, as representatives of the great soldier, the first duke. It also gave the title of earl to Chief Justice Ley. Among the distinguished natives of the town were Henry of Marlborough, a monk and English historian of the 14th century, and Dr. Henry Sacheverell, of political celebrity, whose father was rector of St. Peter and St. Paul.—Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, of which the former is only for vegetables, but the latter has long been celebrated for its abundant supply of grain, cheese, meat, &c. Fairs are held on the 11th July for horses and wool, 22nd August for lambs, horses, and cows, and 23rd November for horses, sheep, and cattle; also, two statute fairs for hiring servants, one on the Saturday before Old Michaelmas, and one after. Races take place in July.

MARLBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Aubourn, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.W. of Lincoln. It is situated on the river Witham.

MARLBOROUGH, an ext. par. place in the borough of Droitwich, co. Worcester.

MARLCLIFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Bidford, hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 5 miles S. of Alcester.

MARLDON, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Totnes, and 3 N.E. of Torquay. The village, which is small, is situated midway between Newton Abbott, Paington, and Torquay on the old turnpike road. The par., which is situated in a long and well-wooded vale, contains the hmlt. of Compton. The surface is undulating, and the soil fertile. Above half the land is in meadow and pasture, the remainder arable and woodland. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £215, and the vicarial for £235. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Paington, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. The church is said to have been built by the Gilberts, of whose family there are monuments; also of the De-la-Poles, Comptons, Templars, Bishops, &c. There are several windows, on which are the arms of the Comptons; also, a carved screen of great beauty. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. At the village of Compton in this parish are the ruins of a castle, which was once of great importance. In the Confessor's time it was in the possession of Osolf, and, in Henry VIII.'s time, belonged to Maurice-de-la-Pole, from whom it passed to the Comptons, thence to Sir Humphrey Gilbert, the great circumnavigator and mathematician. After remaining in this distinguished family for a long period, it finally became the property of Francis Garratt, Esq., of Parkfield House.

MARLESFORD, a par. in the hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.E. of Wickham-Market, its post town, 5½ miles S.W. of Saxmundham. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated on the river Alde, and is wholly agricuitural. The Framlingham branch of the Great Eastern railway passes through the par., and has a station in the village. There are ozier beds and sandpits. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £362. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a low structure, with a flint tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a monument to the Alston family, bearing date 1641. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Marlesford Hall is the principal residence.

MARLESTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Drogheda. Dunleer is its post town. It is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. A considerable portion of the surface is occupied by Rokeby Hall, the demesne of Sir R. Robinson. The remaining parts consist of good land. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Dunany, £116. There is a hedge-school.

MARLEY, a hmlt. in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 4 miles W. by S. of Sidmouth. The principal residence is Marley Lodge. The Lynham hounds meet here.

MARLIE, a small loch in co. Perth, Scotland, near Kinloch.

MARLINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 6 miles W. of Norwich, its post town, and 5½ N. of Wymondham railway station. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The parish is bounded on the S. and W. by a stream falling into the Yare. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and meadow, and about 40 acres of common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £157 2*s.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £185. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is a thatched structure, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. On the S. side is a Norman doorway. The register dates from 1558. There is a parochial school. Thomas L'Estrange Ewen, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARLOES, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 8 miles from Milford, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Haverfordwest. It is situated near St. Bride's Bay and Marloes-Mere, where leeches are found. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £80. The church is a neat structure, dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

MARLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Leintwardine, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 7 miles N.W. of Ludlow. It is situated on the river Clun.

MARLOW, GREAT, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 33 miles S. by E. of Buckingham, and 31 miles W. by N. of London by road, or 28¾ by the Oxford and Maidenhead branch of the Great Western railway, which has a station at Marlow Road. It is situated in a hollow near the bank of the Thames, from which circumstance it is supposed to derive its name, mere in Saxon signifying a marsh, and law or low, a hill. It is called Merlawe in Domesday Survey, and at that time was taken from the Saxon earl, Algar, by the Conqueror, and given to his queen, Matilda. It subsequently came to the Clares, Despencers, Beauchamps, Neville, Earl of Warwick, and latterly to the Pagets and Claytons of Marlow Cottage. The river is here crossed by a suspension bridge 225 feet span, erected in 1835 at a cost of £20,000, in place of the old wooden bridge. The military college, originally established here, was removed to Sandhurst in 1812. The town consists chiefly of two principal streets, which cross in the market-place. It contains the market-house, a spacious building, Borlase's workhouse, and good news-room. There are two paper mills, copper works at Temple, a ropery, and covered wire manufactory; there is likewise a good trade in corn, timber, malt, butter, and hops. The borough first sent two representatives to parliament in the 28th of Edward I., and continued so to do till the 2nd of Edward II., when the privilege was in abeyance for upwards of 300 years, but was restored upon petition to the House of Commons in the 21st of James I., and has since been exercised without intermission. The new bounds, as fixed by the Reform Bill, include the parishes of Great and Little Marlow, and Medmenham in the county of Buckingham, and Bisham in Berks, containing 12,348 acres. The population of the borough in 1851 was 6,523, and in 1861 6,496. It is governed without a charter by a high constable, who is returning officer. The right of election is with the £10 householders, but the chief influence with Williams of Marlow Place. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a modern structure, erected in 1835 at an expense of £10,000, and has a tower surmounted by a spire. There is also a district church at Lane End, built principally at the expense of the late Mrs. Elwes. The Independents and Wesleyans have places of worship. There are National schools and almshouses for six widows, the latter endowed by John Brinkhurst with an income of £90 per annum. The charities, including the estates bequeathed by Sir William Borlase in 1628, for purposes of education and maintenance of a house of correction, and the bequests of William Lotton for the poor, produce above £360 per annum. In the vicinity of the town is Westhorpe, the seat of Sir G. Nugent, Bart. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the 1st May and two following days for horses and cattle, and on the 29th October for cheese, butter, and hops.

MARLOW, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Great Marlow. It belonged to Editha, queen of Edward the Confessor, and at the Conquest was given to the Bishop of Baieux, from whom it subsequently came to the Marshalls, Clares, and Borlases. There was a small convent of Benedictine nuns founded by Geoffrey, Lord Spencer, in the reign of Henry II., the revenue of which at the Dissolution was returned at £37 6*s.* 11*d.* The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The principal residence is Little Marlow House, an old seat now inhabited by General Piggott. The impropriation belongs to Sir G. Nugent, Bart., who is lord of the manor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford. val. £155. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum.

MARLSTON-CUM-LEACH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary-on-the-Hill, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Chester. It is situated on the line of the Wrexham railway.

MARLSTONE, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Bucklebury, hund. of Reading, co. Berks, 4 miles N.E. of Newbury. The village is inconsiderable, and chiefly agricultural. The chapel-of-ease is an ancient edifice. The principal residence is Marlstone House.

MARMULLANE, a par. in the bar. of Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Cork, containing the greater part of its post town, West Passage. The par. is about 1 mile in length and breadth. The surface lies near Cork Harbour, and is washed on two sides by the mouth of the river Lee. The soil is for the most part good. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £109, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church was built chiefly by the aid of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Carrigaline. There are likewise a Wesleyan Methodist meeting-house, and several day schools in the parish. Pembroke Hall is the chief seat.

MARNHAM, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 4 miles N. of Calton-on-Trent, its post town and nearest railway station, and 4 S.E. of Tuxford. The village, which is long and irregularly built, is situated near the ferry on the W. bank of the river Trent. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Grassthorpe, Ferry Marnham, Church Marnham, and the hmlt. of Skegby. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a rich alluvial clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £392. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is a small structure, with a tower containing three bells. It formerly belonged to the Knight Templars, and has lately been thoroughly restored. The charities consist in lands producing about £40 10*s.* per annum. There is a free school, erected by the late Earl Brownlow. This was the birthplace of Major Cartwright the Reformer. The Hon. C. H. Cust is lord of the manor of Marnham, and John Evelyn Denison, Esq., M.P., of the manor of Grassthorpe. A fair for cattle, horses, and general merchandise is held on the 12th September.

MARNHULL, a par. in the hund. of Sturminster-Newton-Castle, co. Dorset, 3 miles N. of Sturminster-Newton, its nearest money-order office, 6 W. by S. of Shaftesbury, and 3 E. of Stalbridge. The village, which is large but of irregular form, is situated on the river Stour. The par. includes the hmlts. of Burton, Kentisford, and Thornton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. About one-third of the land is arable and the remainder pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,024. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £800. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, is a large structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1559. There is a parochial school. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have chapels, and the latter a school in connection. Nash Court, the principal residence, is a mansion situated about 1 mile N. of the village; it has been in the possession of the Hussey family since the reign of Charles II., and contains several choice paintings by the ancient masters. Hussey the painter, who drew by the musical scale, was born at this mansion. John Hussey, Esq., is the present owner, lord of the manor.

MARNOCH, or MALLOCH, a par. in co. Banff, Scotland, 8 miles S.S.E. of Banff. The par. measures about 8 miles in length, by 5 in breadth. The surface is flat but fertile, with good plantations. The rent of the arable land is from 18*s.* to £1 2*s.* per acre. The southern and south-eastern boundaries of the parish are traced by the river Doveran. There are extensive granite quarries, and limestone occurs, but is not worked. The par. is in the presb. of Strathbogie and synod of Moray. The minister's stipend is £243. The parish church is a modern and commodious structure. There is also a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, Baptist chapel, an Episcopalian chapel, and likewise a Roman Catholic chapel. There are nine non-parochial schools. Ardmellic, Auchentoul, Cluny, and Netherdale are the principal mansions. The antiquities are Kinardy Castle, belonging to the Earl of Fife, the chief heritor, and the ancient castle of Crombie, the property of the Earl of Seafield. Gordon of Auchentoul, who distinguished himself in the service of Peter the Great, was a native of this place. Fairs are held on the first and third Tuesdays of March (old style), the day after Wartle, and the first Wednesday in September.

MAROWN. See KIRK MAROWN, Isle of Man.

MARPLE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Stockport, its post town, and 12 S. of Macclesfield. Its ancient name was Murpull, in allusion to an expansion of the waters of the river in the vale below. It is situated on the Peak Forest canal and the river Gort, which here separates the counties of Chester and Derby. The Manchester and Marple section of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway has its terminus here. The village stands on the road from London to Manchester through Buxton. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive cotton mills, and in the manufacture of hats. Building stone is extensively quarried. The banks of the river are precipitous and well wooded, and from the churchyard a view is obtained, over the Peak on one side and the Welsh hills on the other. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Stockport. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1812. It has the tomb of Samuel Oldnow, who designed the Peak Forest canal. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, with almshouses for five aged females endowed by Mrs. Bridge. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school held in the schoolroom. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Marple Hall is the seat of Thomas Isherwood, Esq., a descendant of Henry Bradshaw, a brother to John Bradshaw the regicide, who was born here, and bequeathed £700 for a free school at Marple, but the Restoration prevented his bequest becoming available. This chapelry belongs to the manor of Macclesfield.

MARR. See MAR, co. Aberdeen.

MARR, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Doncaster, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the old Doncaster and Barnsley turnpike road. The houses, which were formerly built of clay and thatch, have been re-constructed in the modern style. Each of them has a garden attached. The soil is principally limestone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £128. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font and monuments to the Lewis family. The register dates from 1680. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Charles Sabine Augustine Thellusson, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MARRICK, a par. in the wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 7 miles W. of Richmond, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Swale, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hurst, where there are lead mines at present worked with considerable advantage. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £98. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The church stands partly on the site of a Benedictine nunnery founded by Roger de Aske in 1165. The parochial charities produce about £5 18*s.* per annum, with the Duke of Bolton's annuity of £5 12*s.* for two poor widows not receiving parochial relief. Marrick Park and Marrick Lodge are the principal residences. Francis Morley, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MARRINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Bishops Castle.

MARRISH, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. and lythe of Pickering, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles S.E. of Pickering.

MARROS, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 10 miles from Narberth, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Laugharne. It is situated on Carmarthen Bay, and is a barren place. The production of ironstone gives employment to some of the inhabitants. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £73, in the patron. of the Vicar of Laugharne. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

MARR'S BANK, a shallow in the North Sea off the E. coast of Scotland, about 35 miles E. of Fifeness.

MARSBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Woodnesborough, hund. of Eastry, co. Kent, 1½ mile S.W. of Sandwich. It has the appearance of having formerly been a Roman village. Many ancient remains have been found near this spot, chiefly at Woodesborough Hill. The Independents have a place of worship here.

MARSDEN, a tnshp. and chplry. partly in the par. of Almondbury and partly in that of Huddersfield, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.W. of Huddersfield, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Saddleworth. It is a station on the N.E. branch of the London and North Western railway, which passes through a tunnel from Dingle above three miles in length, being the longest tunnel in England. The Manchester and Huddersfield canal passes through an adjoining tunnel under the Stannish mountain, which was commenced by James Brindley, and was 20 years in formation. The village, which is of large extent, is situated in the vale of the river Colne, and of late years has been greatly improved. In 1860 the Local Government Act was put in force, so that the village is now governed by a local board of health. It is well lighted with gas, and contains a mechanics' institution and mechanics' hall; the latter was erected in 1861 at an expense of £2,500. There are numerous woollen mills, cotton and silk factories, a corn-mill, and an extensive iron foundry. A great portion of the land is moorland. The small river Messenden here joins the Colne. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £174, in the patron. of the Vicar of Almondbury. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient stone structure with a belfry. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held, besides a town school. The Independents and the Wesleyan Methodists have each a chapel. Sir Joseph Radcliffe, Bart., of Rudding Park, is lord of the manor. Fairs are held for general merchandise on 25th April, 10th July, and 25th September.

MARSDEN, GREAT AND LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Burnley. Whalley is its post town. It has a station on the East Lancashire line of railway, and there is also one at Nelson. Little Marsden is the most populous township, and is situated on the turnpike road leading from Burnley to Colne, and near the river Calder. The township of Great Marsden was formed into a district parish under Sir Robert Peel's Act. A large trade is done in cotton spinning and manufacturing. There are extensive collieries and stone quarries. The soil is of various quality, resting on a subsoil of carboniferous limestone and slate. The land is almost wholly in pasture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a neat stone structure erected in 1848 at an expense of £2,050, the greater part of the sum being defrayed by Mrs. Walton and Mrs. Moore. An endowed school for both sexes was founded by the above-named ladies. The living of Little Marsden is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the patron. of Hulme's trustees. The church is a neat stone structure. There are two National schools, and places of worship for the Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Society of Friends. In the vicinity is Castor Cliff camp, surrounded by a double ditch.

MARSH, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Kemble, co. Bucks, 3 miles S. of Aylesbury.

MARSH, or MARCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Westbury, co. Salop, 10 miles W. of Shrewsbury.

MARSH, a div. of the waps. of Calceworth, Candleshoe, and Louth Esk, co. Lincoln, which see.

MARSH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Huddersfield, West Riding co. York, near Huddersfield.

MARSHALL, RED. See REDMARSHALL, co. Durham.

MARSHALLSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Mitchelstown, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 3 broad. The surface is mountainous and boggy, and is traversed by the river Funchion, and the road from Mitchelstown to Doneraile. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was the gift of the late Board of First Fruits in 1830. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that in Brigown. There are two hedge-schools. Killer Castle is the chief residence.

MARSHAM, a par. in the hund. of South Erping-nam, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S. of Aylsham, its post town, and 10 N. of Norwich. It is situated on the river Bure, and is an inconsiderable village. It gives title of viscount to Earl Romney, to whose family it has belonged since 1100. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the worsted and bombazine manufactures. The land is chiefly arable, with about 187 acres of heath and waste, which were enclosed in 1801, and given to the poor. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £30, payable to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, and £330 to the rector. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £281. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat structure, with a low square tower, containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient carved oak screen, and a fine carved font; also tombs of the Norris family, &c. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, besides 187 acres of fuel allotment. There is a school supported by the rector. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Marsham Hall is the principal residence.

MARSH-BROOK, a station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford section of the London and North-Western railway.

MARSHCHAPEL, a par. in the hund. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10½ miles S.E. of Grimsby, its post town, 9 N.E. of Louth, and 4 N.E. of the Ludborough railway station. The village, which is large, is situated near the Louth Navigation, which joins the Humber, and is wholly agricultural. The small hmlt. of Fire Beacon lies to the W. of the par. There is a wharf at Thoresby Bridge. The principal residence is Rock Tower, a baronial mansion, containing some good specimens of ancient armour. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £222. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a spired tower surmounted by seven pinnacles. The interior of the church is handsomely fitted up, and the chancel divided from the nave by an oak screen. The nave was reroofed in 1845, at an outlay of £300, chiefly by the Rev. Dr. Parkinson; in 1848 the chancel was rebuilt, and a new oak roof added to the north aisle. It contains a small monument with effigies of Walter Harpham, his wife and daughter, in kneeling posture, bearing date 1617. The register dates from 1592. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, besides £5 for poors' cottages. There are National schools for both sexes, erected in 1838, but improved and enlarged in 1857. James Bankes Stanhope, and Charles Allex, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

MARSHFIELD, a par. and market town in the upper div. of the hund. of Thornbury, co. Gloucester, 9½ miles W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 11 E. of Bristol. It is situated under the Cotswold hills, and on the London and Bristol road. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Becks, Rocks, and Weston Town. The town consists chiefly of one street nearly a mile in length, with many old houses. It is governed by a bailiff and serjeant-at-mace, annually elected at the manorial court. There are numerous maltings and a brewery. Several barrows exist in the neighbourhood. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £680, with 118 acres of glebe, valued at £140, and the vicarial for £321 14*s., with a glebe valued at £20. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £409, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure of stone, with a square tower at the W., and containing six bells. The interior of the church contains several tablets and monuments. There are numerous charities, producing about £280 per annum, distributed in various ways. There are almshouses for 8 persons, endowed by N. Crispe in 1625, also endowed free schools for both sexes, founded in 1722. The Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, and Independents have each a chapel, and an infant school is attached to the latter. Ashwick House and the Rocks are the principal residences. Robert Hume, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is Tuesday, and fairs are held on the 24th May and 24th October—the former for cattle and sheep, and the latter for horses, sheep, and cheese.

MARSHFIELD, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 5 miles S.W. of Newport, its post town, and 7 from Cardiff. It has a station on the Great Western line of railway. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £175, and the vicarial for one of £48. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £52, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church is a large and ancient structure with stone stalls.

MARSHFIELD, an ext. par. place adjoining the par. of Kirkby Ireleth, co. Lancaster, near Broughton.

MARSH-GIBBON, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 4½ miles N.E. of Bicester, its post town, and 3½ miles from the Launton station, on the London and North-Western line of railway. The parish is wholly agricultural. An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1841. There are quarries of good building stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £456, in the patron. of the Bishop of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing a clock and four bells. The church has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a chapel of recent erection for the Independents. There are vestiges of earthworks thrown up by the parliamentarians in 1625.

MARSHSIDE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of North Meols, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N.W. of Ormskirk.

MARSHTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Condons, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles E. of Fermoy. It is situated on the river Blackwater. Marshtown House is the principal residence.

MARSHWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Beaminster. Thorncombe is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Char. It takes its name from the marshy and woody character of the vale in which it is situated. It was anciently an honour and head of a barony. The living is a cur.* annexed to the vic. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is a modern structure dedicated to St. Mary. There is a village school for both sexes.

MARSIDE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bainbridge, in the par. of Aysgarth, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Askrigg. It is situated in Wensleydale, near the river Bainbridge, which has its source in Raydale side.

MARSKE, a par. in the wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5½ miles W. of Richmond, its post town, and 3 E. of Reeth. It is situated on the river Swale, which rises in Hope Moor, and contains the hmlts. of Feldon and Skelton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. There are some brick kilns. A great portion of the land is in wood and moor, the remainder is pasture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £91. The parish church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is an ancient stone edifice, with an open belfry containing two bells. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity. The register dates from 1622. There is also a district church at Redcar, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £50. The parochial charities produce about £89 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. Marske Hall is the principal residence. In the grounds a short distance from the village stands an obelisk, 60 feet high, to Captain Matthew Hutton, bearing the date of his death, 1813. Timothy Hutton, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MARSKE, a par. in the E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 3 miles from Redcar, its nearest money-order office, and 6 N. of Guisborough. It is a station on the Stockton and Darlington section of the North-Eastern railway. The par. is situated on the coast, and contains the tnshp. of Redcar.

The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £376. The church, dedicated to St. Germain, stands near the edge of the cliff, and is a neat edifice with a spired tower. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Marske Hall is the principal residence. The Earl of Zetland is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MARSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles N.E. of Northwich, its post town, and 1 mile S.E. of Great Budworth. It is a thriving village situated on the Grand Trunk canal, and is celebrated for its extensive salt mine, which has a shaft upwards of 250 feet. The interior extends over 33 acres, supported by pillars of salt 15 feet in height and 60 feet square. This interesting mine was visited by the late Emperor of Russia in 1844, when it was most brilliantly illuminated, and a splendid banquet provided. It was again visited in 1854 by several members of the British Association. There are numerous large salt manufactories and extensive boiler and salt-pan works, giving employment to the chief portion of the inhabitants. In consequence of the long distance this village is from the parish church and schools, a handsome Church of England school-room, with master's residence, was erected in 1855 by voluntary contributions, the site being presented by Lord de Tabley. Divine service is performed every Sunday evening in the above school-room.

MARSTON, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Grantham, its post town, and 1 mile from the Hougham railway station. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the banks of the river Witham. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Hougham, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a spired tower. The charities are various. Among them may be mentioned Sir William and Lady Ann Thorold's annuity of £40, produced from land in Gelston and Bassingham, £2 of which is paid to the poor of the latter place, and £2 10*s.* to the poor of Cranwell, the surplus to this parish, with an additional £11 from the Poor's-Close by an unknown donor. This parish has also a share in Lady Margaret Thorold's Charity, which consists in £105, of which £65 goes to the school, and £40 for the apprenticing two poor boys of the parish. The hall, formerly the seat of the Thorold family, is now a farmhouse. Sir J. C. Thorold, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MARSTON, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 1¾ mile N.E. of Oxford, its post town. It is situated on the river Cherwell, which forms part of the boundary of the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The ancient seat of the Crokes is in this parish, where the treaty for the surrender of Oxford to the Parliamentarians in the reign of Charles I. was negotiated. It is now a farmhouse. The meadows on the banks of the river Cherwell are luxuriantly rich. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £195. The church is a neat structure dedicated to St. Nicholas. The interior contains two broken crosses. The parochial charities produce about £39 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

MARSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Church-Eaton, co. Stafford, 5 miles W. of Penkridge. It is situated near the Junction canal.

MARSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Lea Marston, co. Warwick, 4 miles N. of Coleshill. It is situated on the banks of the river Tame.

MARSTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of SS. Mary and Chad, S. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 4 miles N. of Stafford, its post town. It is situated near the North-Western railway, and belongs in part to Giffard of Chillington. The village is small, and is within the jurisdiction of the county court of Stafford. The lands are in excellent cultivation, and the soil a rich loam. In 1800 a considerable extent of common was enclosed, when 125 acres were given to the parishioners in lieu of common-right. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £242, and the small tithes for £100. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Whitgreave, in the dioc. of Lichfield, joint val. £180. The chapel is a small stone edifice, with a campanile turret. The parochial charities produce about £1 16*s.* per annum, which is divided among six poor parishioners on St. Thomas's Day.

MARSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolston, Rugby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 5 miles W. of Rugby. It is situated on the river Avon, and on the North-Western railway.

MARSTON, a quarter in the par. of Bickenhill, co. Warwick, 3 miles S.W. of Coleshill. It is situated on the banks of the river Cole.

MARSTON, a chplry. in the par. of Yardley, co. Worcester, 4 miles S.E. of Birmingham, and 8 from Sutton Coldfield. It is situated near the Warwick canal and the river Cole. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive tile-works. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £120, in the patron. of trustees. The church is an unpretending structure. The charities consist of £251, arising from estates left for the support of Hall Green chapel and schools.

MARSTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Potterne, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Devizes, its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The church at Worton, which is situated close on the borders of this tything, is used by the inhabitants. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The Bishop of Salisbury is lord of the manor.

MARSTON-BIGOTT, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 3 miles S. of Frome, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural. The parish comprises about 2,000 acres of land, not in a very forward state of cultivation, the chief part of the land being in pasture. There are brick and tile kilns. A chain of hills extends through the parish from E. to W., on each side of which are woods. The lower grounds are watered by two small rivulets. The manor anciently belonged to the Bigott family, from whom the parish takes the suffix to its name. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a small stone structure, with a tower containing a peal of six bells. The church was built on the site of an older one by the late Earl of Cork, and was opened to the public in 1789. The register dates from 1680. There is a National school for both sexes. Marston House is the seat of the Earl of Cork and Orrery, who takes from this place the title of baron, and who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The site of the old seat of the Bigotts still goes by the name of Marston Moat, although not the slightest traces are visible. Within a short distance of this spot is a field called the "Conqueror's Mead," in which is a barrow, supposed to be the place where the slain were interred.

MARSTON, BROAD a hmlt. in the par. of Pebworth, upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.W. of Chipping Campden.

MARSTON, BUTLERS, a par. in the Kington div. of the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 1½ mile S.W. of Kington. The surface is hilly, and the greater part of the land arable. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. Upon an artificial mount on the green was a large elm tree, the decayed trunk of which resembled a grotto, and could contain twelve persons. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £169, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, chiefly Norman. There is a village school.

MARSTON-FLEET, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.W. of Aylesbury. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated in the vale of Aylesbury. The land is chiefly pasture, with a small proportion of arable. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £220. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Mary.

MARSTON-JABBETT, a hmlt. in the par. of Bulkington, co. Warwick, 2 miles S.E. of Nuneaton. It is situated on the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal.

MARSTON, LEA. See LEA-MARSTON, co. Warwick.

MARSTON, LONG. See MARSTON SICCA, co. Gloucester.

MARSTON, LONG, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Tring, hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, 3 miles N.W. of Tring. It is situated near the Aylesbury line of railway. The chapel-of-ease is an ancient edifice dedicated to All Saints.

MARSTON, LONG, a par. in the W. div. of York Ainsty, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Tadcaster, 7 W. of York, and 3 from Moor Monkton railway station. The par. includes the tnshps. of Angram, Hutton Wandesley, and Long Marston. The village is situated on the York and Wetherby road, near the line of the Knaresborough and York railway. Marston Moor in this parish is celebrated in history as the scene of an obstinately contested battle fought on the 2nd of July, 1644, in which the Parliamentarians under Fairfax defeated Prince Rupert. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil clay, alternating with sand. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1766. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £865. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient Norman edifice, with a tower containing three bells and a clock. The earliest legible entry in the register bears date 1648. The Wesleyans have a chapel erected in 1850, and there is a National school. Andrew Montague, Esq., is lord of the manor of Long Marston, and Lord Wenlock is lord of the manors of Hutton Wandesley and Angram.

MARSTON MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, co. Somerset, 5 miles from Sherborne, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Yeovil. It is a station on the Wilts and Somerset line of railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. A streams flows through the village, which rises at Sandford Orcas and works several mills in its course. The soil consists of rich loam and clay upon a subsoil of gravel. In the hills are several stone quarries abounding in Ammonites, Nautili, Belemnites, and other fossils. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300. This par. gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Wells. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £324. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with an embattled tower containing a clock and four bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font. The register dates from 1566. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school held in the schoolroom. The above school has an endowment for teaching five children of Marston, and the same number of Ashington. There are Williams's almshouses for aged persons. The charities consist of the interest of £100 bequeathed by Mrs. Cox, to be distributed to the poor in coals. There are ruins of an ancient building called Court Garden, with moat and fish-ponds. James Parsons, Esq., of Drayton, is lord of the manor. An annual fair is held in Advent week.

MARSTON-MAISEY, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.E. of Cricklade, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the Thames and Severn canal, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £76. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is a National school for both sexes, with a small endowment.

MARSTON-MONTGOMERY, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles N.W. of Uttoxeter, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Ashbourne. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated near the river Dove, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £140. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Cubley, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is situated on an eminence, and is a small structure, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There are parochial and Sunday schools, also a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists.

MARSTON-MORETAINE, a par. in the hund. of Redbornestoke, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.W. of Ampthill, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Bedford. It is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, and was formerly a market town. The Bedford and Bletchley branch of the London and Birmingham railway passes through the parish, and has a station at Marston-Pillage. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and some few females in lace-making and straw-plait. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,120. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £797, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a detached tower containing five bells. The walls of the tower, which is of earlier date than the rest of the building, are six feet in thickness. The interior of the church is well fitted up, and contains many ancient brasses, two of which bear the dates 1420 and 1451. The church was restored in 1844. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. There is a large National school for both sexes. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. The Rev. John Alington, Rector of Little Barford, is lord of the manor.

MARSTON, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Winslow. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The surface is undulated, and the soil a dark loam resting upon a substratum of stiff clay. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £94. The church is a stone structure, with a chancel built by the offerings of those who frequented a chalybeate spring here. In the interior are three stone stalls and a piscina.

MARSTON-POTTERS, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwell, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.E. of Hinckley. It is situated on a branch of the river Soar.

MARSTON, PRIORS, a par. in the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 5 miles S.E. of Southam, and 4 N.E. of the Fenny Compton railway station. The Oxford canal passes through the parish, and on its banks is a spacious wharf. The village, which is considerable but chiefly agricultural, is situated near the border of the county. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £220. The charities produce about £40 per annum, bequeathed for educational purposes.

MARSTON SICCA, or LONG MARSTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N. of Chipping Campden, its post town, and 4 from the Honeybourne station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural, consisting of a long line of houses irregularly built. The parish takes the suffix to its name from the scarcity of water in the immediate neighbourhood. Charles II. is said to have disguised himself for a few days as a domestic here, after the battle of Worcester. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1773 for land and a money payment, which has subsequently been exchanged for a rent-charge of £420. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. The charities produce about £107 per annum, of which £101 goes to Cooper's free school. There is a National school. Fisher Tomes, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARSTON, SOUTH, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Highworth. The Great Western railway passes through the chplry. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The chapel-of-ease is a small ancient edifice. There is a school supported by subscription.

MARSTONE STANNETT, a chplry. in the par. of Pencombe, hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 6 miles N.W. of Bromyard. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £85, in the patron. of the Rector of Pencombe. The church is a small edifice.

MARSTON ST. LAWRENCE, a par. in the hund. of Kings Sutton, co. Northampton, 5¾ miles N.W. of Brackley, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Banbury. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Westrop, and is watered by several tributaries of the river Ouse. There are quarries of building stone, and some of the women are employed in making pillow lace. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1759. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Warkworth annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £316. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower, containing five bells and a clock. In the chancel are some monuments to the Blencowe family, and an altar of carved oak. There is an infant school built and supported by J. J. Blencowe, Esq., who, with Mr. Thomas Wyatt, are lords of the manor.

MARSTON-TRUSSELL, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 3 miles W. of Market Harborough, its post town, and 12 N.W. of Kettering. It is situated near the Union canal, and contains the hmlt. of Thorpe Lubbenham. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £429. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. Barwell Ewins Bennett, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARSTON-UPON-DOVE, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles N.W. of Burton-on-Trent, and 1 mile N.E. of Tutbury Junction railway station. The par., which is of small extent, is situated on the river Dove, near the North Staffordshire railway, and includes the hmlts. of Hatton, Hilton, and Hoon. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under Acts of Enclosure in 1780 and 1789. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £225. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a spired tower, containing four bells. The interior contains a very ancient font. The parochial charities produce about £53 per annum.

MARSTOW, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 5 miles S.W. of Ross, its post town and railway station, and the same distance N.E. of Monmouth. The par., which is of small extent, is situated on Garron Brook, a tributary of the river Wye. It includes the hmlt. of Pencraig, and is traversed by the Ross and Monmouth road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of sand and loam upon a subsoil of red sandstone and rock. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £202 10s. The living is a perpet. cur. with that of Pencoyd annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £269, in the patron. of the Vicar of Sellack. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient stone structure, with a small tower containing two bells. The churchyard is frequently inundated by the overflowing of the river. There is a school for both sexes.

MARSWORTH, or MASWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 2 miles N. of Tring, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Ivinghoe. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Roman way, Icknield, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Longmarstone. There is a large reservoir, covering several acres of land, which belongs to the Grand Junction canal, and is frequented by anglers during the season. The Grand Junction canal and the London and North-Western railway intersect the parish. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1809. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £136, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower, containing five bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments, and two brasses bearing date from 1586. Parts of the floor are of Roman brick. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There are National and Sunday-schools for both sexes; also a plaiting school. The Baptists have a place of worship. In cutting the canal numerous swords, urns, coins, and other relics of Roman antiquity were turned up.

MARTHALL, with LITTLE WARFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Rostherne, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3 miles E. of Knutsford, its post town, and 1 mile W. of Chelford railway station. The township is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £60. The church is modern. The parochial charities produce about £3 10s. per annum.

MARTHAM, a par. in the hund. of West Flegg, co. Norfolk, 10 miles N.W. of Yarmouth, its post town. The village, which is large, is situated on an eminence above the marshes. It contains several residences and good shops. The land is partly in common, and is enlivened by an extensive lake interspersed with islets. The river North, which is navigable from Thame to Somerton, bounds the parish on the N. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £247, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a lofty embattled tower surmounted by a small spire, containing six bells. The church has recently undergone extensive alterations at an expense of several thousand pounds, the greater part having been defrayed by Mrs. Dawson, of Rollesby Hall. The register dates from 1558. There are various charities, producing about £57 per annum, of which £17 goes to Amies' school; also 36 acres of land allotted to the poor, on the enclosure of the waste lands. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Thomas Fraser Grove, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARTHA-ON-THE-HILL, or MARTYR-HILL, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Blackheath, co. Surrey, 2½ miles S.E. of Guildford, its post town. At the village of Chilworth in this parish is a station on the Reading branch of the South-Eastern railway. At the time of the Domesday Survey it belonged to the Bishop of Bayeux, and was annexed to his manor of Bramley. The present proprietors are Lord Lovaine and Sir H. Austin, Bart. The village of Chilworth consists of about a dozen houses; but there are two paper mills, and a gunpowder-mill on a branch of the river Wye. The living is a don. cur., val. £25, and is exempt from any ecclesiastical jurisdiction. The church of St. Martha occupies a bleak situation on the summit of a hill. It was formerly an extensive cruciform structure, constructed of a rude composition of flints and unwrought stones, cemented with Roman mortar, but the nave is now in ruins. At Tyling are the remains of a religious house.

MARTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sedbergh, West Riding co. York, near Sedbergh.

MARTIN, a par. in the hund. of South Damerham, co. Wilts, 9½ miles S.W. of Salisbury, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Cranborne. It is situated on the borders of Hampshire and Dorsetshire, and contains the tythgs. of East and West Martin. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £80. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The church has recently been thoroughly restored. The register dates from 1590 The parochial charities produce about £142, which goes towards the church and poor. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. There is a National school.

MARTIN, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles S.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 5½ N.E. of the Kirkstead station on the Great Northern railway. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Horncastle canal, and is bounded on the W. by the Bain navigation. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. On the moor are the remains of an octagonal turret, 60 feet high, from the summit of which an extensive view is commanded of the surrounding country. This singular structure is supposed to have been built by Lord Treasurer Cromwell, as an appendage to the castle of Tattershall. In this parish is Woodhall Spa, recently discovered. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £144. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a thatched structure, with a wooden turret. Scott, the renowned Bible commentator, commenced his ministerial labours in this parish. William Gilliat, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARTIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Timberland, first div. of the wap. of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Tattershall. It is situated on Martin Drain, which flows to the river Witham. The village is considerable.

MARTIN, a hmlt. in the par. of East Langdon, co. Kent, 3 miles N.E. of Dover.

MARTIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Harworth, co. Notts, 1 mile N.W. of Bawtry.

MARTIN, a tythg. in the par. of Great Bedwin, co. Wilts, 6 miles S.E. of Marlborough. It is situated on the Kennet and Avon canal, near the line of the Great Western railway. The land is of a superior quality on a substratum of limestone. Near this spot Wulfhere, King of Mercia, was defeated by the men of Wessex.

MARTIN, a small island in the par. of Lochbroom, co. Cromarty, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Ullapool. It measures about 5 miles in circumference.

MARTIN, an ancient par. in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, now united with Cairnie, which see.

MARTINDALE, a chplry. in the par. of Barton, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 10 miles S.W. of Penrith, its nearest money-order office. It is situated on the western side of Ulleswater, and is encircled on the E. by a range of hills which afford excellent pasture for sheep. There is a large tract of common. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £87. The church is a small ancient structure, with a bell gable. It was thoroughly restored in 1833. There is an endowed National school for both sexes.

MARTINHOE, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, co. Devon, 3 miles W. of Lynton, and 12 N.E. of Barnstaple. Parrcombe is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the British channel, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £109. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing two bells. Sir R. G. Throckmorton is lord of the manor.

MARTIN HUSSINGTREE, a par. in the Upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 3 miles S.W. of Droitwich, 4 N.E. of Worcester, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Fearnall-Heath station, on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Birmingham to Bristol, and is wholly agricultural. The Droitwich canal passes through a portion of the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £248 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £248, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small structure. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, besides a share in Salwark school.

MARTINSCROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.E. of Warrington. It is a joint township with Woolston.

MARTINSLEY, a hund. in co. Rutland, contains the pars. of Ayston, Edith Weston, Hambleton, Layton, Manton, Martinsthorpe, Normanton, Preston, Ridlington, Wing, and part of Uppingham, comprising an area of 14,580 acres.

MARTINSLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Grindon, co. Stafford, 7 miles S.E. of Leek.

MARTIN'S, ST., a par. in the Strathmore district of co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Perth. It includes Cairnbeddie, Caroline Place, Guildtown, with Cambus-Michael old church, which belonged to Scone Abbey. Its length eastward is about 6 miles, and its breadth varies from 2 to 4½ miles. The surface of the parish is much diversified by hills and undulation. There are extensive freestone quarries, and rock, marl, and limestone occur. The river Tay traces part of the western boundary. The par. is in the presb. of Perth and synod of Perth and Stirling, in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £249. The church, a handsome structure, was erected in 1842. The present par. includes the ancient ones of St. Martin's and Cambus-Michael, which were united about the end of the 17th century. St. Martin's House is a fine modern seat. Traces of a Roman way from Bertha to Cargill still exist, and there are Druidical remains in the neighbourhood. A spot at Cairnbeddie is said to have been the site of a Castle of Macbeth.

MARTIN, ST., a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall. It includes the borough of East Looe, its post town. The parish is bounded on the W. by Looe Harbour, and on the S. by the English Channel. The land is almost wholly arable, except about 250 acres of wood land. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of East Looe annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £481. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient stone structure. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a National school.

MARTIN, ST., a par. in the Upper div. of the hund. of Oswestry, co. Salop, half a mile S.E. of Chirk. The Ellesmere canal passes through the parish, and is carried across the valley of the Ceiriog by means of an aqueduct, near Chirk, where it enters Wales. The village, which is situated on the road from London to Holyhead, is very considerable. There are collieries near the Welsh border. The living is a vic.,* val. £320, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient structure, with a carved figure in the roof, in allusion to the patron saint. There is a National school. Also several small bequests for the poor.

MARTIN, ST., or ST. MARTIN-IN-MENEAGE, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 7 miles E. of Helston. The village, which is small, is situated on the navigable river Hel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300. The church, with the exception of the tower, was rebuilt in 1830. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There is a National school. The principal residence is Tremayne, where Captain Wallis, the circumnavigator, once resided. At Carvallack and Gear are ancient encampments, the latter, surrounded by a very deep fosse, encloses an area of 14 acres.

MARTIN, ST., an ext. par. place, in the chplry. of Hipswell, North Riding co. York, 1 mile S.E. of Richmond. It had a Benedictine priory cell to York, founded in 1100 by Wyomar of Aske, chief steward to the Earl of Richmond. Its revenue at the Dissolution was estimated at £43 16*s*. 8*d*.

MARTIN, ST., or TEMPLEMARTIN, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, 2 miles E. by S. of Kilkenny. It is of small extent, but fertile, lying along the banks of the river Nore. The church is in ruins. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. A fair is held on the 22nd November.

MARTIN, ST., one of the Scilly Islands off the western coast of Cornwall, 3 miles N. of St. Mary's. It is chiefly used for sheep pasture, and is inhabited by fishermen. On the S.E. side of the island is a channel, or sound, and on the shore a landmark, 40 feet high.

MARTIN, ST., a par. in the Isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 2 miles S.W. of St. Peter's Port. It includes the vil. of Bellieuse; and on St. Martin's Point are the barracks and a signal post, occupying the site of Jerbourg Castle, given by Edward III. to Matthew de Saumarez. A Seignorial Court is held once a-year at Michaelmas. The crown and the Saumarez family are the chief proprietors of the soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Governor of Guernsey. The church was erected in 1198. The Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship. There are parochial schools, partly endowed and partly supported by funds raised by the States of the island. St. Martin's Point, where the castle formerly stood, but of which there are now no remains, is supposed to have been originally fortified by the Romans. It is defended on the N. and S. sides by deep parallel ditches.

MARTIN, ST., a par. in the Isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 3 miles N.E. of St. Helier's. It is a small but populous parish, many of the inhabitants being engaged in the oyster fishery at Goree. The surface is varied, and the uplands richly clothed with wood, principally oak timber. The soil is fertile, producing abundant crops of corn, potatoes, and apples. The land is divided between arable, pasture, and orchard, in nearly equal proportions. There are several corn mills. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the cur. of Goree united, £340, in the patron. of the Governor of Jersey. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a commodious structure of the early part of the 12th century. Besides the parish church, there is a chapel-of-ease erected by subscription in 1833; also a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists. There are parochial and National schools. At Le Couperon and Armeville in this parish are Druidical remains.

MARTIN, ST., IVY-CHURCH, or POUNTNEY, a hund. in the lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Ivy-Church and Midley, in Romney Marsh.

MARTIN-STAMFORD-BARON, a par. in the borough of Stamford, Soke of Peterborough, co. Northampton, half a mile S.E. of Stamford. It is situated on the navigable river Welland, and may be considered a suburb of Stamford. A Benedictine nunnery was founded here in the reign of Henry II. by the Abbot of Peterborough. The surface is varied and well wooded. Freestone is quarried. The old Elizabethan mansion, once the seat of the great Lord Burleigh, and still known as Burleigh House, is now the residence of the Marquis of Westminster. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1795. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £225. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is of the 15th century, and contains monuments to several of the Cecil family, including the great Lord-Treasurer Burleigh. There is a hospital for a warden and 12 poor brethren, founded by William Lord Burleigh in 1597, who endowed it with a rent-charge of £100, subsequently augmented by various gifts. The charities produce about £150 per annum, which is appropriated to the support of the schools and in assisting the poor.

MARTINSTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Martinsley, co. Rutland, 3 miles S. of Oakham, its post town, and 3½ N. of Uppingham. It is situated between the rivers Gwash and Chater. There is no village, and only one or two farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. in the king's books, £6 0*s.* 5*d.* The church, which was dedicated to St. Martin, is now in ruins.

MARTIN, STOWE, a chplry. in the par. of Tamerton, Foliatt, hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 7 miles N.W. of Plymouth.

MARTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Athelstaneford, co. Haddington, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Haddington.

MARTLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile S.W. of Woodbridge, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Ipswich. The village, which is small, is situated on the navigable river Deben, and is wholly agricultural. It is held in part by Brook of Ufford. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £420. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £370. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a tower. Frederic Goodwin Doughty, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARTLETWY, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 7 miles from Haverfordwest, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Narberth. It is situated at the confluence of the river Cleddy and Haven. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100. The church is dedicated to St. Marcellus. The tithes were commuted in 1840.

MARTLEY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 8 miles N.W. of Worcester, its post town. The parish, which is extensive, is situated in the fertile vale of Horsham, near the river Teme, which bounds it on the S. It includes the hmlt. of Hillhampton. The land is partly in hop-grounds, the produce of which is of the finest quality. The parish also abounds with luxuriant orchards of apple and pear trees. There is a quarry of good limestone, used for burning into lime, as well as for building purposes and repairing the roads. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £835. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing six bells. The church has recently been thoroughly restored, and contains 150 free sittings. The parochial charities produce about £89 per annum, of which £59 goes to the grammar school, and £15 to Shepherd's school. The union poorhouse is situated in this parish, which gives name to a union comprising 28 parishes or places.

MARTOCK, a par. and small post town in the hund. of the same name, co. Somerset, 3 miles E. of South Petherton, and 4 W. by S. of Ilchester, its post town. It is a station on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter line of railway. The name of this place is said to be derived from "mart" and "oak," a market having been formerly held under an oak tree near the centre of the town, where now stands a fluted column designed in imitation of the pillar of Trajan at Rome. The market has long been discontinued, but the town is still considerable, consisting principally of one street about a mile and a half in length. It is situated on a small stream, tributary to the river Parret. The par. includes the tythgs. of Long Load, Ash, Bower Hinton, Coat, Milton, Stapleton, and Witcombe. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in glove-making, and others in weaving sailcloth. A court-leet is held in October by the lord of the manor, anciently presented by James I. to Lord Konteagle, for his services in detecting the Gunpowder Plot. The surface is pleasingly varied, and the soil chiefly clay. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £182 12*s.*, and the vicarial for one of £316, also £779 15*s., are paid to the treasurer. The living is a vic. with the cur.* of Long Load annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £450, in the patron. of the Treasurer in Wells Cathedral. The parish church is a stone structure, with a lofty square embattled tower, containing a clock and five bells. The walls are surmounted by a perforated parapet, and the roof of the nave is richly groined. The church has been recently restored. There is also a district church at Ash, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £62. The register dates from 1558. There are two places of worship for Independents, and a chapel-of-ease at Load. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school held within the schoolroom. J. Goodden, Esq., is lord of the manor. An annual fair is held in the third week in August for cattle, &c. The old Roman Fosse Way skirts the south-eastern border of the parish. Near the parish church are remains of a monastery in good preservation. There were also several other religious houses in this parish.

MARTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 5 miles S.W. of Macclesfield, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Congleton. In the reign of Henry I., the manor was given by Venables, Baron of Kinderton, to his daughter, who brought it by marriage to an ancestor of the Davenport family. The grand serjeantry of Macclesfield forest, with the right to levy heriots over that hundred, was attached to it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £48. The church is a rude wooden structure, said to have been built in the reign of Edward III., by Sir J. Davenport. It has a chancel and spire of more recent date, and contains effigies of the Davenport family. It had once a chantry. There is a National school.

MARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitegate or New Church, first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 5 miles S.W. of Northwich. This tnshp., at the request of the king in 1305, was exchanged by the Merton family, who gave it to the Abbey of Vale Royal in return for Gayton-in-Wirral and Lach-on-Rudheath. For his ready submission to the above royal request, Randle-de-Merton received a grant by patent of the Earl's Eye in Chester, and the bailiwick of the hund. of Caldey. The manner of Merton continued in the possession of the monks of Vale Royal until the Dissolution, after which it passed through several hands, and finally became the property of Lord Delamere, of Vale Royal, the principal owner of the soil. There are schools supported by Lord and Lady Delamere.

MARTON, a par. in the wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5¾ miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town. It is a station on the Gainsborough and Lincoln railway. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Trent, near Marton Port, and Tilbridge Lane, the Roman way from Lincoln, past Littleborough. A considerable trade is carried on in the import and export of corn, timber, coal, lime, and other articles. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1770. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £115, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a neat structure, with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship. Colonel Amcotts is lord of the manor.

MARTON, a par. in the Southam div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 4½ miles N.W. of Southam, its post town, and 1 mile S. of the Marton station on the Rugby and Leamington branch of the London and North Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Ichene and Leam, on the road from Coventry to Oxford. It is a meet for the Warwickshire hounds. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1802. It gives name to a deanery in the dioc. of Worcester. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Esprit, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. There is a place of worship for Independents. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school. Sir Theophilus Biddulph is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 9 miles N.W. of Bishop's Castle. It is situated on the river Rea, near Marton Pool.

MARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bridlington, wap. of Dickening, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Bridlington. It is situated near the coast and Danes Dyke, an ancient ravine extending one mile and a quarter from the southern shore of Flamborough Head. In conjunction with Sewerby it forms a tnshp.

MARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Middle, co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Wem.

MARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Swine, middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 10 miles N.E. of Hull, its post town, and 4 N. of Hedon. In the village, which is small and irregularly built, are iron and brass foundries, a machine and plough manufactory, also a corn mill. On a site called Kirkgarth formerly stood the ancient chapel-of-ease, but its remains were used in constructing the bridge across the Lamworth stream. The font was removed to the private chapel at Burton Constable. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also a school erected and supported by Sir T. A. C. Constable, who is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MARTON, a par. in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4 miles from Middlesborough, its post town, 6 S.E. of Stockton-on-Tees, and 1 mile from the Ormesby station on the Stockton and Darlington railway. The par., which is wholly agricultural, comprises the hmlts. of Newham, Langlands, and Tolesby, also Barnby Moor tower. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £541 16s., and the vicarial for £137 15s. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £160, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is a fine stone structure, situated on an eminence at the W. end of the villages. It is of recent erection, and is dedicated to St. Cuthbert. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, the rent of lands in Skelton and Broughton. There is a National school for both sexes, which contains a tablet to the famed circumnavigator Captain Cook, who was born of humble parents in this parish on October 27th, 1728. The school has a good library, established by the vicar in 1855, and is open to all persons residing in the village. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The principal residence is the Hall, a fine old red-brick mansion, situated in a commanding position. It was built in place of the old hall, destroyed by fire in 1832. Henry William Ferdinand Bolckow, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sinnington, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 5 miles from Pickering railway station, and 4 from Kirby Moorside, on the river Rye, and is a meet for the Sinnington hounds. The soil consists of loam, alternating with clay and gravel. Divine service is performed every fortnight in the schoolroom. There is a school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school held in the chapel. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Rev. Godfrey Wright is lord of the manor.

MARTON, or MARTON-BOTH, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 5¾ miles S.W. of Skipton, its post town, 5 E. of Gisburne, and 2 from the Elslack station on the Midland railway. It is a small agricultural parish, situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and on the Clitheroe road. It contains the vils. of E. and W. Marton, and the hmlt. of Marton Scars. The land is chiefly in pasture and meadow. The surface is undulated. Limestone is extensively quarried, and sent by the Leeds and Liverpool canal to Leeds and Lancaster. There is a spring strongly impregnated with sulphur. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £160. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is situated in the village of East Marton. It is an ancient stone edifice, with a square embattled tower, containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, which goes to the support of the day-school for both sexes. Marton House and Gladstone House are the principal residences. The former is a modern building. Marton Hall, the ancient residence of the Heber family, where Bishop Heber was born, is now the property of the Roundell family. The Rev. Danson Richardson Roundell is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MARTON, GREAT and LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Poulton-le-Fylde, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.E. of the Blackpool railway station, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Kirkham. It is situated on the coast of the Irish Sea, and near Marton-Mere. The village, which is considerable, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of various character, but generally fertile. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a neat brick structure, erected in 1804. It has recently been enlarged, and a new tower added. There are numerous small charities. A free school for both sexes was founded in 1717 by James Baines, who endowed it with land, producing £100 a-year. It is now united with the National school, in which building a Sunday-school is also held. John Talbot Clifton is lord of the manor, and sole landowner of Little Marton.

MARTON-IN-THE-FOREST, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 5 miles E. by S. of Easingwold, its post town, and 12 from York. It is a small and irregularly built village, situated in the old Forest of Galtree, and on the E. side of the river Foss. There was formerly an Austin priory, founded here in the reign of Stephen, by Bertram of Bulmer. The revenue was valued at the Dissolution at £150, and granted to the Archbishop of York. It includes the hmlt. of Moxby, where was a nunnery, founded by Henry II., which, at the Dissolution, had a revenue of £32 6*s.* 2*d.* The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to that of Farlington, in the dioc. of York. The church is an ancient stone structure of small dimensions. The Archbishop of York is lord of the manor, and principal landowner.

MARTON-LE-MOOR, a tnshp. and chplry. in the pars. of Topcliffe and Kerby Hill, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N. of Ripon, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Boroughbridge. The soil is a rich loam. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £72. The church is a neat stone edifice. Earl de Grey is lord of the manor and sole landowner. There is a National school.

MARTON, LONG, a par. in the East Ward, co. Westmoreland, 3½ miles N. of Appleby, its post town and railway station. The par. is situated on a branch of the river Eden, near Marton Fell, and is divided into three tnshps., viz. Long Marton, Brampton, and Knock. The greater part of the houses are of modern erection, and a portion of the inhabitants are employed in the London Lead Company's works. The land is partly moor, and the soil various. A rich vein of iron ore was discovered in this parish, near Brampton, in 1864. The tithes were commuted for land under Enclosure Acts in 1804 and 1815. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £673. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a large ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font, an old register and chest, and the windows bear the arms of the Clifford, Greystoke, Dacre, Lancaster, and Wharton families. In the churchyard are several monuments of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £7 10*s.* per annum. There is an endowed parochial school; also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. The Earl of Lonsdale and Sir Richard Tufton, Bart., are lords of the manor.

MARTON, NEW, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 4 miles W. of Ellesmere.

MARTON, OLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Whittington, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Oswestry. It is situated near the river Perry and the Ellesmere canal.

MARTON WITH GRAFTON, a par. chiefly in the upper div. of the wap. of Claro, but partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Aldborough. Little Ouseburn is its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and loam on a substratum of gravel. The land is fertile, producing good crops of wheat, barley, and turnips, with a small proportion of meadow. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £288 14*s., and the vicarial for £28. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £199, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is a small ancient structure, containing one of the oldest bells in the kingdom. The National school is a fine building, and, from its commanding position, adds greatly to the appearance of the village. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists.

MARTORHAM, a loch in co. Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Ayr. It is near a mile in length by a quarter broad, and is one of the sources of the Ayr Water.

MARTRY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Navan, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Navan, its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and its extreme breadth is 2 miles. It contains part of the vil. of Bohermeen. The greater part of the surface consists of good land, with a small proportion of bog. The road from Navan to Kells traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ardbraccan £684, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Boyerstown and Courtown. Allanstown is the principal seat.

MARTYR-WORTHY, or WORTHY-MARTYR-CUM-CHILLAND, a par. in the hund. of Fawley, Winchester div. of the co. Hants, 4 miles E. of Winchester, its post town, and 4½ S.W. of Alresford. The village, which is small, is situated on the Winchester and Alresford road, near the river Itchen, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £343, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small structure, with a wooden tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1540. There is a free school, endowed with an annuity of £6 10*s.* 4*d.* Wortly Park, the principal residence, commands a view of the Itchen valley. G. E. Wall, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MARWELL, or MEREWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Carisbrooke, lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 1 mile S. of Newport. Here was anciently a college for priests, founded by Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester.

MARWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Barnstaple, its post town. The village, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the Ilfracombe road. The par. is of large extent, and includes a considerable tract of common and woodland. The soil is a light loam, resting on a substratum schist rock. Two small brooks irrigate the lower grounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £635, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a square embattled tower containing six bells. The interior of the church has a carved screen, inscribed with the name of Sir John Beapul. There were formerly two chapels-of-ease, one at Patsford, and the other at Whitefield, but they have long been ruins. The charities produce about £26 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, with an endowment of £8 per annum; also a school of industry for females. Judge Littleton is said to have been born at Middle Marwood.

MARWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.W. div. of Darlington Ward, co. Durham, 3 miles N. of Barnard Castle. The land is partly in common. On an eminence adjoining the town of Barnard Castle (which see), are vestiges of the ancient town of Marwood, once a considerable place. The tnshp. is bounded on the S. by the river Tees, which separates it from Yorkshire. There are remains of an old chapel.

MARYBOROUGH, a post and market town in the par. of Borris, in the bar. of East Maryborough, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 14 miles W. of Athy, and 50 W. of Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on a small affluent of the river Barrow, and on the Great Western road from Limerick. It is an ancient place, and the chief town of the county, consisting of one principal street, with a market-place, and several diverging thoroughfares. It contains the parish church, Roman Catholic chapel, Methodist chapel, convent, which maintains a large and excellent charity school, National school, court-house, bridewell, infantry barracks, district lunatic asylum, county gaol, dispensary, which is in the Mountmellick Poor-law Union, and two principal hotels, &c. The Leinster Express is published in the town once a week. Maryborough was formerly a borough, returning two members to the Irish parliament, and is yet an improving place, presenting a generally cheerful appearance. Its cotton trade has declined, but it enjoys a very fair share of miscellaneous traffic. It is an assize town and chief police station. This town was founded at the time Leix was constituted a shire, during the reign of Philip and Mary, and was named in honour of that sovereign Maryborough. In the vicinity are several cornmills. The neighbouring residences are Shane Castle, and Rathleague, 2 miles distant, the seat of Lord Congleton. Some remains of the ancient castle, which was captured in 1641 and 1650, also ruins of the old church, exist. About 3 miles from the town is the Dun Mall, or Dunnamare, a curious mass of rock, generally supposed to be the vestiges of an ancient and stupendous fortification. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on 1st January, 24th February, 25th March, 12th May, 5th July, 4th September, 23rd October, and 4th December.

MARYBOROUGH, EAST, a bar. in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is environed by Portnehinch, Stradbally, Cullinagh, and West Maryborough. It is nearly 6½ miles in length, and the same in breadth. This bar. contains the pars. of Borris, Straboe, and parts of Clonenagh, Dysartenos, Tossy, Kilcolmanbane, and Kilteale, with the town of Maryborough.

MARYBOROUGH, WEST, a bar. in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Tinnehinch, Portnehinch, East Maryborough, Cullinagh, and Upperwoods. It is 10 miles long by 6 broad. This bar. contains the par. of Mountrath, and parts of those of Abbeyleix and Clonenagh.

MARYBURGH, a town in the par. of Kilmalie, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated on the E. side of Loch Eil, in the immediate vicinity of Fort William. It was named after William III.'s queen, but is now better known as Fort William. It is built on the property of the Gordon family.

MARYBURGH, a vil. in the par. of Cleish, co. Kinross, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Kinross.

MARYCHURCH, ST., a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles E. by S. of Cowbridge. It is situated near the river Ddaw, which at a short distance falls into the sea at Aberthaw. The land is chiefly in pasture, with a limestone subsoil. Here are remains of a castle, built by Robert de St. Quentin in the 11th century, and on the hills to the W. are traces of the great military road. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The Cowbridge harriers have a meet here. The living is a rect. united with that of Llandough. The church is a small ancient edifice. The charities produce about £1 10*s.* per annum.

MARY-CHURCH, ST., a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Torquay. The parish is situated on the southern recess of Babbicombe Bay, where the great limestone formation terminates in bold and rocky cliffs. The village is large, and may be considered a suburb of Torquay. It has greatly increased in population during the last ten years, and now contains many mansions and marine villas, most of which overlook Babbicombe Bay, divided from Torbay by the bold promontory of Tor Point, or, as it is sometimes called, Hope Naze. There is a large ale brewery, the Palk Arms, the royal marble works of John Woodley, several comfortable inns, and a coast-guard station. For the enjoyment of the numerous summer visitors there are bathing-machines, and two pleasure yachts. The town stands on marble rock, of which it is chiefly built; and in the vicinity are several limestone quarries. In this parish is Bishopstowe, the palace of the Bishop of Exeter, built in 1842, from a design by Mr. Gribble. It is in the Italian style of architecture, and is surrounded by grounds which rise in front in three terraces, connected by flights of steps. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £305, and the vicarial for £205. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with the cur. of Coffinswell annexed, £450, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, who are the appropriators. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. It has recently been restored and the chancel rebuilt at a cost of £6,000. There is also a new church at Furrough Cross. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels. There are National schools for boys and girls; also schools at Furrough Cross. There are two manors, called Combe-Pafford and St. Mary-Church; of the former, Sir Lawrence Palk is lord, and of the latter, R. S. Carey, Esq. In the vicinity is a large bone cavern, called Kent's Hole, in which bones of the elephant, hyena, cave bear, and other extinct animals have been found.

MARYCULTER, a par. in the co. Kincardine, Scotland. It contains a post-office vil. of its own name, which is 7 miles N. of Stonehaven. The par. is 6 miles long, and measures 2¾ at its broadest point. The surface is for the most part uneven, and has an area of about 7,600 acres, of which about 4,000 acres are under tillage. The northern boundary of the parish is traced by the river Dee; and there are mineral springs in the neighbourhood. The par. is in the presb. and synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is £172. The parish church was erected in 1787. Here is a Free church. On the estate of Blairs, in this parish, is a Roman Catholic seminary, attached to which is a chapel for the district. There are two non-parochial schools. Auchlunies, Heathcote, Kingcaussie, and Maryculter are the principal seats. There are several cairns in the neighbourhood.

MARY-DE-FORE, ST., a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Castlepollard, and 53 from Dublin. It is of considerable extent, and includes part of Lough Bane. The living is a cur. united with Rathgraff. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and several schools.

MARYHILL, a quoad sacra par. in the quoad civilia barony par. of Glasgow, in the co. Lanark, Scotland. It has stations on the Glasgow and Milngavie branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, and on the Glasgow, Helensburgh, and Loch-Lomond railway. The village is situated on the road between Drymen and Glasgow, and is 3 miles from the latter. In the neighbourhood are print works, bleach-fields, a ship-builder's yard, an iron-foundry, and a spinning-mill. The village is lighted with gas, and was recently created a burgh. The par. was constituted in 1850, and is in the presb. of Glasgow, in the patron. of the Managers, &c. Besides the quoad sacra church, there is an United Presbyterian church, Free church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and also several schools.

MARY-HILL, ST., a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles E. of Bridgend. It is situated in a fertile district upon the banks of the river Ogmore, abounding in salmon. About 3 miles to the W. the river is crossed by two bridges. It contains the hmlt. of Rythin. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £100. The church is a small structure, dedicated to St. Mary. There are National and other schools. The charities produce about £5 per annum.

MARY-IN-ARDEN, ST., a par. partly in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, and partly in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 1 mile E. of Market Harborough. It is situated on the Union canal, near the bridge on the river Welland, and may be considered a suburb of Market Harborough. The living is a perpet. cur. in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. In 1613 the rites of baptism, marriage, &c., were transferred from the ancient church of St. Mary-in-Arden to the church of St. Dionysius, at Market Harborough, but the burial-ground is still used.

MARY-IN-THE-CASTLE, ST., a par. partly in the hund. of Baldslow, rape of Hastings, but chiefly within the cinque port of Hastings, co. Sussex. It comprises the north-western quarter of the town of Hastings, including St. George's-street, Pelham Parade, and Crescent, Wellington-square, &c. The living is a perpet. cur. [For further particulars see HASTINGS.]

MARY-IN-THE-MARSH, a chplry. in the par. of Newton, hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 3 miles S.W. of Wisbeach.

MARYKIRK, or ABERLUTHNOTT, a par. in the co. Kincardine, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Laurencekirk, by the Scottish North-Eastern railway, on which it is a station. It is situated on the N. bank of the North Esk, at the extremity of the How or Hollow of the Mearns, and includes the vils. of Luthermuir and Marykirk. It is bounded by Garvock and St. Cyrus on the E., Laurencekirk on the N., and Fettercairn on the W. It is 4 miles in length by between 3 and 4 in breadth, and has an area of 9,600 acres. The surface is level, and the soil, though various, is chiefly fertile, and well cultivated. Sandstone abounds and is extensively quarried, and in some parts various kinds of trap occur. The par. is in the presb. of Fordoun and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister's stipend is £246. The par. church is a modern structure. In the district there are the following places of worship:—a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, a Baptist chapel, and a Congregational chapel. There are five non-parochial schools. The ancient name of the parish was Aberluthnott, and it was given by Cardinal Beaton in 1540 to Barclay of Mathers. The parish contains several corn-mills, five saw-mills, a flax-mill, and a spinning-mill. Hand-loom linen-weaving employs a good number of the inhabitants. Balmachewan, Hatton, Inglismaldie, Kirktonhill, and Thornton Castle, are the principal seats. There are Druidical remains at Hospital, Balmakillie, &c. It is said that a battle was fought between the English and Scots at Inglisburn. The parish is intersected by the Aberdeen railway.

MARYLEBONE, ST., a par. and parliamentary borough in the Holborn div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, forming the north-western portion of the metropolis, about 2½ miles N.W. by W. of St. Paul's. It is intersected by the London and North-Western and Underground railways, which have several stations in the parish, and by the Regent's canal. It derives its name from the small burn, or bourne, which also gave name to Eyeburn, or Tyburn, and formerly filled reservoirs, whence London was partly supplied with water, and fell into the Thames near Vauxhall Bridge, but has its course now underground. It is bounded by Cleveland-street and the Regent's Park on the E., by the Edgware-road on the W., by Oxford-street on the S., and by Primrose-hill and the Queen's-road on the N., and includes the new suburbs of St. John's Wood, Portland Town, &c. Though now the richest and most populous metropolitan parish, it was at no very distant period an obscure village, separated from the metropolis by open fields, the haunt of foot-pads, and where Queen Elizabeth used to hunt. It contains some of the finest squares, crescents, and mansions in the metropolis, including Cavendish and Portman-squares, Park-crescent and square, Manchester-square, Portland-place, the finest street in London, 100 feet wide, &c., and is inhabited by many of the first families in the empire, and likewise the Langham Hotel. Here are also the Regent's Park, laid out in 1812-18 by Morgan, after the designs of Nash, who built most of the terraces around; Botanical and Zoological Gardens, Toxophilite Society's grounds, the Polytechnic, Colosseum, Portman Market, Lord's Cricket-ground, &c. But the necessity of a more particular description of this vicinity of the metropolis is precluded by the various information already given under article LONDON.—The manor originally came from the Hobson family to Henry VIII., and was given by James I. to E. Foster: it subsequently passed to the Austens, and through Holles, Duke of Newcastle, to the Harleys, earls of Oxford, then to William Bentinck, Duke of Portland, and, finally, reverted to the crown in 1813. Under the Reform Act it constitutes, with Paddington and St. Pancras parishes, a new borough, returning two members to parliament. In 1851 it contained 40,513 houses, inhabited by a population of 370,957, which in 1861 had increased to 47,896 houses, inhabited by 436,252 persons. The inhabitants are chiefly gentry and tradespeople, there being scarcely any manufactures.—The living is a rect. in the dioc. of London, val. £1,250, in the patron. of the crown. The parish church is a spacious structure on the S. side of St. Marylebone-road, directly opposite York Gate, Regent's Park, having in front a Corinthian portico, and surmounted by a tower and cupola. In addition to the parish church there are the following district churches and chapels-of-ease:—viz. St. John, Parish chapel; St. James's; St. Thomas's, Portman-square; Portman chapel, Baker-street; St. Mary's and St. Luke's, Bryanston-square; Brunswick chapel, Quebec chapel, All Souls', St. Andrew's, St. Peter's, St. Paul's, All Saints', Christ Church, Christ Chapel, St. John's Wood; St. Paul's, Lisson-grove; St. Mark's, Hamilton-terrace; All Saints', St. John's Wood; St. Stephen's, Portland Town; St. Matthew's; Trinity; the livings of which are rects., curs., and perpet. curs., varying in val. from £985 to £44. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, Calvinistic Methodists, Baptists, and various other sects of Dissenters. At St. John's Wood are the new Tudor colleges for the education of Dissenting ministers. In the parish are above 150 daily schools, including All Souls' grammar school, founded in 1832, besides infant and Sunday schools. Some of these are devoted to particular objects, as the "Parochial Charity School," which has an income of near £2,000, and educates young girls for domestic service. The Clergy Orphan School, for the maintenance and education of 140 children, supported by subscription; the Blind School, at St. John's Wood, for the maintenance of 50; the Bentinck School, Roman Catholic School, Philological School, founded in 1792, for the free education of the sons of reduced persons, &c.—The charities are extremely numerous, including the Middlesex Hospital, originally founded in 1745, and recently enlarged, with an income of £9,000. Queen Charlotte's Lying-in Hospital, founded in 1752, and removed from Bayswater in 1810; Charlotte-street General Lying-in Dispensary, founded in 1778; Provident Dispensary; Asylum for Recovery of Health, founded in 1821; General Dispensary in Lisson-grove, founded in 1785; and the Marylebone Almshouses for 63 aged or infirm persons. The cemetery near the church is closed, but there is a cemetery in the Harrow-road, where Hugh Little-John, Sir Walter Scott's grandson, is buried; and an extensive parochial cemetery at Finchley, opened in 1860, under the Extra Mural Interment Act.—Many places in this parish are connected with literature and the drama. In Great Portland-street Boswell resided when he wrote his "Life of Johnson." Gibbon wrote part of his, "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" in Bentinck-street. Sheridan wrote the "Rivals" in Orchard-street; Grattan and Mrs. Siddons died in Baker-street; Von Weber in Great Portland-street; Sir William Chambers, Opie, and Fuseli resided in Berners-street; Lady Mary Montague, Dr. Baillie, Romney and Shee, the painters, resided in Cavendish-square; besides numerous other celebrities.—Marylebone is the seat of a Superintendent Registry and a new County Court, but the part of the parish lying E. of Regent's Park belongs to Bloomsbury new County Court. The hay and straw mart was removed to Portman Market, in this parish, from Piccadilly in 1830, under authority of an Act of Parliament.

MARYPORT, a chplry., seaport, and market town in the par. of Cross-Canonby, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 5 miles E. of Workington, and 7 N.W. of Cockermouth. It is a station on the Maryport and Carlisle railway, which communicates between the eastern and western coasts and the North and Irish seas. Maryport is situated on an eminence at the river Ellen's mouth. Previous to 1750 it was but a poor fishing village called Ellen-foot, but is now an extensive and thriving coal port, and of late years has been rising into commercial importance. The streets are spacious but irregularly built, partly on the sea-shore and partly on the cliff. In 1838 it obtained the privilege of registering vessels, hitherto having been under the port of Whitehaven. The harbour has since been considerably enlarged and has easy access, the depth of water averaging 18 feet at spring tides and 12 feet at neap tides. There is a wooden pier extending between 700 and 800 feet into the sea, on which a lighthouse has been erected. In the vicinity are extensive coal mines and quarries of limestone and red freestone, giving employment to a large number of hands. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the herring fisheries, which are very productive. Shipbuilding is carried on to a large extent, there being several building yards and two patent slips, in which vessels of considerable burdens are constructed, chiefly for the coasting and foreign trades. In the town are also factories for cotton and linen checks, sail cloth, cables, anchors, iron and brass foundries, flour-mills, steam saw-mills, a brewery, tanneries, and coarse earthenware. A brisk import trade is carried on in timber and flax from America and the Baltic. The town is governed by twelve trustees, regulated by the Act of Parliament passed in the reign of William IV.

It contains many good shops and private residences, and is well paved, lighted with gas, and bountifully supplied with good water. There are a branch bank of the Cumberland Union Company, a savings-bank, market-house, gas-works, and a mechanics' institution: this latter was erected in 1857 at an expense of £2,500. Petty sessions are held by the magistrates every alternate Friday at the courthouse in Fleming-square. On an eminence at the S. end of Crosby-street is an observatory, erected in 1858. It stands 140 feet above sea-level, and commands a most extensive and varied view. The custom house and harbour office are situated on the quay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £162. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure with a square tower. It was founded in 1760, and was thoroughly restored and enlarged in 1845. There are National schools for both sexes. The Presbyterians, Scotch Church, Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends have places of worship. The cemetery is situated about 1 mile N. of the town. Near Ellenborough is a Roman camp where many relics of antiquity have been found. Joseph Pocklington Senhouse, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Market days are Tuesday and Friday. There are two statute fairs for hiring servants, viz. Friday in Whitsun week, and the Friday nearest to the 11th November.

MARYPORT, a vil. in the par. of Kirkmaiden, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 3 miles N. of the Mull of Galloway. It is situated on the coast, and has a small harbour.

MARY'S, ST., a loch in co. Selkirk, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Ettrick. It is situated near the sources of the river Yarrow, and is surrounded by charming scenery, including Dryhope Tower, where the "Flower of Yarrow" was born. The loch is about 3 miles in length by 1 mile broad, and is famous for its trout fishing and wild fowl.

MARY'S, ST., a rock at the entrance of Douglas Harbour, Isle of Man, on which the St. George steamer was wrecked in 1830.

MARY'S, ST. the principal of the Scilly Isles, coast of Cornwall, 25 miles W. by S. of the Land's End. It is about 2½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface of the island, which rises in some parts to a considerable elevation, is in general rocky and barren, but in the vales are some fertile spots. Minerals are found in the hills. It contains Heugh, or Hugh Town, the only town in Scilly, situated on the S.W. side of the island, at the foot of Garrison Hill, which is joined to it by an isthmus. The town, which was much damaged by inundation during the great storm in 1744, contains a town-hall, custom-house, and a prison, and is defended by the Star fort, originally built by Sir Francis Godolphin in 1593. Its harbour, which is defended by a pier, has from three to five fathoms water, where vessels of 150 tons may ride in safety, but it is difficult of access owing to the Woolpack, Bartholomew, and other ledges of rock. About a mile from Hugh Town is the Church Town, consisting of a few houses and the church, in the chancel of which were buried the bodies of several persons of distinction who were drowned with Sir Cloudesley Shovel in October, 1707, when the Association man-of-war was cast away upon the Gilston rock. To the N. of the island is Crow Sound, and a little to the eastward Pomellin or Porthmillin Bay, famous for its white sand, used as writing sand. There is also another small village called Old Town, formerly the most important place in the island, and on the W. side of the island are St. Mary's garrison, with the barracks and the remains of several batteries. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels. There are several schools, one of which is aided with £12 per annum by the Duchy of Cornwall. The Pilots' Fund Charity consists of the interest of £365 government stock, applied to the relief of the widows of pilots lost by drowning. Numerous Druidical and other British remains have been met with on the island, and on a promontory called the Giant's Castle are traces of an ancient fortress.

MARY'S, ST., ISLE, the seat of the Earl of Selkirk, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, near Kirkcudbright.

MARY, ST. There are many parishes of this name, which will be found described under the towns and places of which they form part, both in England and Ireland.

MARY, ST. See Marie, St., Isle of Jersey.

MARY, ST., a par. in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 2½ miles N. of New Romney. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.,* val. £309, in the dioc. of Canterbury, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is a small ancient edifice.

MARY, ST. a par. in the island of South Ronaldsay, Orkney Islands. See Ronaldshay.

MARY, ST. a hmlt. in the pars. of Holm and Paplay, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It is a small fishing village on the mainland of Pomona.

MARYSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 7 miles N.W. of Tavistock. Oakhampton is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, and irregularly built, is situated near the river Lyd. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are two mines from which manganese has been procured, and a large limestone quarry. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £87, and the vicarial for £148. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Thrushelton annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, joint val. £276. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains two stone stalls, an ancient font, and monuments to the Wyse family. The parochial charities produce about £219 per annum. Sydenham House, the ancient seat of the Wyse family, was erected in the early part of the 17th century, and was taken from the Royalists in 1645 by Colonel Holbourn.

MARYTAVY. See Tavy St. Mary, co. Devon.

MARYTOWN, or MARYTOUN, a par. in the district and co. of Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Montrose, its post town. It is situated where the South Esk river falls into the Montrose basin. The par. comprises the two separate districts of Old Montrose and Dysart. The former is the most extensive, and was formerly the seat of the Grahames. It extends about 2½ miles in length, with a breadth varying from 1½ mile to 2½ miles. It is bounded by Pow-water for three-quarters of a mile, and is intersected by Haugh-burn, which flows N.E. to the Montrose Basin. Marytown-Law, situated in the extreme S., is an artificial eminence on a base of rock from 300 to 400 feet above the sea-level, and commands a view of the German Ocean. The land is moderately even, with a good loamy soil, and is in an excellent state of cultivation. A portion of the coast has been secured from the encroachments of the sea by an embankment. There are traces of the ancient castle of Bonnyton, formerly the moated seat of the Woods. Dysart, the smaller district, is situated from 6 to 11 furlongs from Old Montrose [which see], and its boundary line is Buckyden Dell. It is 2½ miles long from E. to W., and about 1½ mile in breadth. It is bounded by the German Ocean, the Lunan, and Craig, and is traversed by the great coast road from Dundee to Aberdeen. The whole district lies at a much higher elevation than that of Old Montrose, with the exception of the latter's southern border. The soil is not rich, though the whole of it is under cultivation. Stone of a coarse nature is quarried. This par. is in the presb. of Brechin, and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £198. The parish church, which is situated at the S.E. corner of Old Montrose, was erected in 1791. There is a Free church, also a parochial library and several schools. It is within easy distance of the Farnell-road and Dunbridge stations on the Aberdeen railway.

MARYTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Forgan, co. Fife, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of St. Andrew's. It is situated near the bank of the river Tay, opposite Dundee.

MARYTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kirriemuir, co. Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Forfar.

MARYWELL, a vil. in the par. of St. Vigean's, co. Forfar, Scotland. It is situated near Arbroath, and has a station of the county police.

MARYWELL, a vil. in the par. of Birse, and district of Kincardine O'Neil, co. Aberdeen. It is a neat and improving village, situate on the great road which passes from E. to W. through the parish.

MASBROUGH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kimberworth and par. of Rotherham, West Riding co. York, 1 mile N.W. of Rotherham. It is a station on the North Midland railway, which has a branch from this place to Sheffield. It is a populous suburb of Rotherham, from which it is separated by the river Don, and is famed for its extensive iron-works, founded in 1746 by the late Walker of Clifton. Immense quantities of ordnance of the largest calibre were cast here during the French war, and subsequently various iron bridges, among which was that of Southwark, in London. A very ancient bridge of five pointed arches crosses the river Don. The hamlet has vastly increased of late years, and is now nearly equal in importance to Rotherham itself. Here are the extensive steel-works belonging to Messrs. Stubbs, who, in 1842, erected buildings at the cost of £20,000, the Phœnix forge and iron-foundry for engines and all kinds of machinery, the Holmes' engine foundry and works, also manufactories of stove grates, glass-works, chemical works, &c. The Independent College is situated here, as are also other public buildings, for which see ROTHERHAM.

MASHAM, or MASHAMSHIRE, a par. and market town in the wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Bedale, its post town, and 30 N.W. of York. The parish, which is extensive, is traversed by the river Ure and the Leeds and Thirsk railway. It comprises, besides the town of Masham, the tnshps. of Burton-upon-Ure, Ellingstring, High and Low Ellington, Fearby, Ilton-cum-Pott, Swinton-with-Warthermarske, Dallaghill, and Healey-with-Sutton. This place was anciently the residence of the baronial family of Scroop, to which belonged Lord-Treasurer Scroop and Archbishop Scroop, both beheaded in the reign of Henry IV. The manor subsequently came from the Scroops to the Danbys of Swinton. The town stands on the W. bank of the Ure, and the houses are in general well built. At Hackfall, 3 miles S.E. from the town, are some beautiful walks along the woody bank of the river Ure, which is famed for its fine salmon, trout, &c. The magistrates meet every alternate Tuesday at Bedale. A court-leet is held annually, at which a constable is chosen. There are breweries, malt-houses, and woollen and flax mills, but the town is chiefly supported by agriculture. A portion of the land consists of open moors and fells, which extends from 3 to 6 miles W. of the town. Masham prebend, the richest in the cathedral of York, being rated in the king's books at £136, was dissolved, and made a lay-fee by Archbishop Holgate in 1546. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £941, and the vicarial for £236. The living is a vic.* united with that of Kirkby-Malzeard, in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £384, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a lofty spired tower containing a clock and six bells. In the interior of the church are several monuments, one of which is to Sir Marmaduke Wyville, Bart., also a brass to Christopher Kay, bearing date 1689. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. Dallaghill, Grewelthorpe, Hartwith, Healey, Mickley, Middlesmoor, and Ramsgill, the livings of which are all perpet. curs. varying in val. from £152 to £80. The charities include six almshouses for aged persons, either male or female, erected in 1853 at the expense of Mrs. Danby Harcourt, of Swinton Park. A grammar school was founded in 1760 by William Danby, who endowed it with property now producing £100 per annum. There is a National school, in which a Sunday-school is held, also a girls' school, built and handsomely endowed at the expense of Mrs. Danby Harcourt. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each a place of worship. A mechanics' institute was erected in 1856 as a memorial of the late vicar. Admiral Harcourt is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Market day is Wednesday. A fair is held on the 17th and 18th September for live stock, and during the spring a fair is held on alternate Mondays for cattle and sheep.

MASHBURY, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 7 miles N.W. of Chelmsford, its post town. The village consists of a few farmhouses and cottages. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Chignall St. James, in the dioc. of Rochester.

MASHIE WATER, a feeder of the river Spey, co. Inverness, Scotland.

MASK, a lough, cos. Galway and Mayo, Ireland, near Ballinrobe. It is 12 miles in length by 4 broad, and contains numerous small islands. It is united with Lough Corrib by an underground stream, which has perforated the natural limestone rock.

MASKALLS-POUND, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Brenchley, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Tonbridge.

MASON, a tnshp. in the pars. of Dinnington and Pontiland, W. div. of Castle Ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles N.W. of Newcastle. It is situated near the rivers Pont and Blythe.

MASON, a small island off the coast of Galway, Ireland, 14 miles S.E. of Slyne Head.

MASONGILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Thornton-in-Lonsdale, wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Settle. It is situated at the river Greta's Head in Kingsdale.

MASSEREENE, a vil. in the par. of Muckamore Grange, in the bar. of Lower Massereene, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, not far from Antrim. It is situated on the bank of the Six-mile Water. Here stood a Priory, founded by the O'Nials in 1426, and given to the Chichester family by James I. It gives title of baron to the Fosters of Antrim Castle. Medicinal springs occur in the vicinity.

MASSEREENE, LOWER, a bar. in co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by Upper Antrim, Upper Belfast, Upper Massereene, and by Lough Neagh. It is 8 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 5 miles. It contains the pars. of Carmavy Grange, Muckamore Grange, and Killead.

MASSEREENE, UPPER, a bar. in co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by Lower Massereene and Upper Belfast, co. Down and Lough Neagh. Its length is 11 miles, and its greatest breadth 8. This bar. contains the pars. of Aghagallon, Aghalee, Ballinderry, Camlin, Glenavy, Magheragall, Maghcamesk, Tullyrusk, and parts of Blaris, Derryaghy, and Lambeg, with the towns of Lisburn and Crumlin.

MASSINGHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 9 miles N. of Swaffham, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Brougham. There was formerly an Austin priory here, founded by Nicholas-le-Syre in the 13th century, which subsequently became a cell to Westacre. After the Dissolution the site was given to Sir Thomas Gresham. The village, which is still considerable, was formerly a market town. The soil consists of a light loam, and the land is chiefly arable, with some common and sheep walks. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £875. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £864. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat stone structure with a square tower, containing a clock and three bells. On the south side of the chancel are three sedilia of stone, and a piscina. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum, of which £21 goes to Calthorpe's school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Marquis of Cholmondeley is lord of the manor. Pleasure fairs are held on Maundy Thursday and on November 8th.

MASSINGHAM, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Lynn, co. Norfolk, 1 mile N. of Great Massingham, 4 N.W. of Rougham, and 10 N. of Swaffham railway station, its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The land, which is chiefly arable, is in good cultivation; the remainder is pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £570. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £439. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a neat stone edifice with a square embattled tower, containing one bell. The interior of the church contains monument to Sir C. Mourdant, bearing date 1648. The register dates from 1539. The church has recently undergone a thorough restoration. The charities consist of £1 per annum for the clerk. Henry Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MASSYTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of West Muskerry, co. Cork, Ireland. It is situated on the banks of the Sullane, and forms a suburb of Macroon.

MASTERS-CLOSE, an ext. par. place in the ward of Tindale, co. Northumberland, 9 miles E. of Hexham.

MASTERTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland, 1½ mile N.N.W. of Inverkeithing. It is situated on rising ground, from which are views of the Frith of Forth and the surrounding country. A hospital was founded and endowed in 1676 by Sir Henry Wardlaw, of Pitreavie, for four poor widows.

MATCHING, a par. in the hund. of Harlow, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. of Harlow, its nearest railway station and post town, and 9 N.E. of Epping. It is a small village, watered by a stream of the Stort, the navigation of which is about 5 miles distant. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Matching Green is a meet for the Essex hounds. The surface is gently undulating, and the soil a stiff clay, alternated with gravel. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £440, and the vicarial for £240 10*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £159. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower, containing five bells. The south porch is of wood and in a dilapidated condition. There is a church, school, and a house bequeathed to the poor parishioners, in which their marriages take place.

MATEHY, a par. in the bar. of East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles E. of Cork, its post town. The par. is about 4 miles in length, and the same in breadth. The surface consists of a middling soil, and is traversed by the river Dripsey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Inniscarra £832, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Benring and Clohroe. There is a day school. Magnay's paper-mills are situated on the river bank.

MATFEN, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.W. of Stamfordham, and 8 N.E. of Hexham. It contains the hmlt. of Wall Houses, on the site of the Roman Wall. Large quantities of bricks and tiles are made here.

MATFEN, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, as above, 9 miles N.E. of Hexham. The village is considerable, and in the vicinity are traces of ancient foundations. Here was an upright stone pillar called the "Stob Stone," and near it a tumulus, supposed to have been a Druidical mausoleum in which four unhewn stone coffins containing human ashes were found.

MATFIELD GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Brenchley, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Tonbridge, and 1½ mile W. of Tonbridge Wells. There are many residences, also a Baptist chapel.

MATHAVARN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Machynlleth, co. Montgomery, 32 miles W. of Montgomery. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Dovey and Dulas, and is famous in history as the place where Henry VII. was entertained by David Llwyd, the bard, when on his way to Bosworth-field.

MATHEBRWYD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrwst, hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 2 miles from Llanrwst, and 17 W. by S. of Denbigh. It is situated on the river Conway.

MATHERNE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 2 miles S. of Chepstow, its post town, and 14 from Newport. It is situated on Matherne Pill, at which place the river Wye joins the Severn. A house called Monks Court is partly of the 15th century, and was inhabited by the bishops of Llandaff until 1706, but it is now converted into a farmhouse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £352, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Theodoric, is an ancient structure. The interior contains a tablet to the martyr Theodoric, on which is an inscription by Bishop Godwin. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum, of which £13 goes to Pratt's school.

MATHON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 2 miles W. of Great Malvern, and 7 N.E. of Ledbury. The village, which is small, is situated on Cradley Brook, near Malvern Hills. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A portion of the land is in hop grounds. Limestone is quarried for burning into lime. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, whose tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £528. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower. The interior of the church contains a pulpit of carved oak and two E. windows with a centre wheel light. There are several memorials of the Worcestershire families on the walls and pavement. There is also the district church of St. James at West Malvern, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100. The church of St. James is a modern structure. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. Many ancient silver coins were found in this parish in 1760.

MATHRAFEL, a hund. in co. Montgomery, contains the pars. of Garthbeibio, Llanerfyl, Llanfair-Caereinion, Llangadfan, Llangyniew, and parts of Castle-Caereinion and Mallwyd. It takes its name from a camp or palace of the princes of Powys situated on the river Vyrnwy, which was stormed by Llewelyn-ap-Jorwerth in 1112.

MATHRY, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 11 miles N. of Haverfordwest, its post town. It is situated on the coast, and contains Abercastle and Castlemorris. The village, which is a rustic place, was formerly a market town, and was once ravaged by the Danes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £316, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to the Holy Martyrs. Mathry House is the principal residence. A fair for horses, cattle, &c., is held on 10th October.

MATLASK, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles S.E. of Holt, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Aylsham. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £130. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £186, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a circular tower of more ancient date than the rest of the building. Matlask Hall is the principal residence.

MATLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Mottram-in-Longden-Dale, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 8 miles E. of Manchester, 7½ N.E. of Stockport, and 2 S.E. of the Stalybridge railway station on the Manchester and Sheffield railway. The township is small and wholly agricultural. The soil consists of sand and clay, and the subsoil sandstone rock. The Earl of Stamford and Warrington is lord of the manor.

MATLOCK, a par. and post town in the hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, half a mile S.E. of the Matlock Bridge railway station, and 4 miles N.E. of Wirksworth. The par., which is very extensive, is situated on the river Derwent, here crossed by a stone bridge, and comprises the hmlts. of Matlock-Bath, Matlock Bridge, Matlock-Bank, Riber, Scarthin Nick, and Starkholmes. At the Domesday Survey it was called Mestesford, and until the end of the 17th century consisted only of a few rude dwellings inhabited by miners. It is now a fashionable watering place in Matlock Dale, situated in the midst of rock scenery. It consists at present of the village and baths about a mile distant from each other. The three principal hotels, which are all stone buildings, and the lodging houses afford accommodation for above 500 visitors. The houses are built in terraces on the steep acclivity of a mountain overlooking the Derwent. The chief trade of the town consists in the cotton, corn, and paper mills, bleach grounds, and other works. The lead mines are not worked so extensively as formerly. Matlock Bath is situated in a deep valley, the sides of which are richly wooded with pine, fir, cedar, &c. The bottom of the valley is narrow, the hills rising abruptly to the altitude of 800 feet at Masson-Low, or Heights of Abraham, as they are sometimes named from a fancied resemblance to those of Quebec.—The baths are about 1½ mile S.E. of the town of Matlock, and near the station on the Manchester, Buxton, Matlock, and Midland Junction railway, which runs frequent excursion trains during the summer season, thus affording easy access to the pleasure parties from the neighbouring towns. The spa, which is famous for the clearness of its water, and considered efficacious in glandular and other complaints, was first applied to medicinal uses in 1698. The warm springs are situate about a hundred feet above the level of the river, and possess 68° of Fahrenheit, but a much higher temperature prevails some depth below the surface. There are also three petrifying wells. The original bath was rebuilt by the Rev. Mr. Fern, of Matlock, and Mr. Hayward of Cromford afterwards disposed of it by leave to the Messrs. Smith and Pennell, who erected two buildings with every convenience for using the waters, constructed a carriage road alongside of the river from Cromford, and improved the road from Matlock Bridge. Two other springs have been subsequently discovered and buildings erected in connection with them all, the springs being within a short distance of each other. Among the various places of attraction are Cliff House, Old Bath, Dungeon Tor, and High Tor, this last is 396 feet in height, and commands a fine prospect; also Cumberland, Rutland, Devonshire, Speedwell, and other caverns. The Lover's Walk is situated on the opposite side of the river, and consists of various pathways cut through the dense woods, all of which lead to certain points where the beauties of the dale are seen to the best advantage. There is a museum of fossils replete with natural curiosities of the district, including urns and vases formed of spar, marble, and alabaster obtained in the county.—The parish is within the honour of Tutbury, and forms part of the Duchy of Lancaster.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £320, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a small, awkward structure, with a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing six bells. It is situated on a lofty rock with traces of the Hirst Druidical stones, and a camp above it. There is also a district church at Matlock Bath, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* It is a cruciform structure with a square spired tower, and was erected in 1842 at an outlay of £2,250. There are National schools for both sexes at Matlock Bath, and a parochial school for girls at Matlock, also places of worship for the Independents with infant schools adjoining. The parochial charities produce about £59 per annum. The free school, founded and endowed by Mr. George Spateman in 1647, is in ruins, but in lieu of it a convenient building was erected in 1829.—Willersley Castle is the principal residence, opposite to which is a perpendicular limestone rock 200 to 300 yards in length. William Pole Thornhill, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on 25th February, 2nd April, 9th May, and 25th October, chiefly for cattle and sheep.

MATSON, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles S.E. of Gloucester, its nearest railway station and post town, and 8½ S. of Cheltenham. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated in a vale, out of which rises Robins-Woodhill, or, as it is sometimes called, "Robin Hood's Hill," an interesting conical mountain, which has for centuries supplied the city of Gloucester with water by means of aqueducts. The manor formerly belonged to the Bohuns and William Nottingham, who gave it to Gloucester Abbey. During the siege of Gloucester the ancient Manor House became the headquarters of King Charles, and was subsequently occupied by James II. The tithes were commuted for allotments of land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1796. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £184, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church, rebuilt in 1730, is a neat brick structure, with a low tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains a tablet to the Selwyn family. The chancel was rebuilt in 1852. Matson House, the principal residence, once belonged to the celebrated G. Selwyn, and was visited by George III. Viscount Sydney is owner of the soil and lord of the manor.

MATTERDALE, a chplry. in the par. of Greystoke, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 10 miles W. of Penrith, its post town and railway station. It is situated in a wild valley on the E. side of an extensive moor, near Ulleswater, leading to Keswick. The chplry. comprises the hmlts. of Dockwray, Dewthwaite-Head, Thorneythwaite, and Matterdale End. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The soil is principally clay, affording only coarse pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £115, in the gift of the Rector of Greystoke. The church is a small structure, erected in 1685, with a tower containing one bell. There is a school for both sexes, with an endowment of £20 per annum for boys, and £8 per annum for girls. Henry Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MATTERSEY, or MATTERSEA, a par. in the Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 4 miles S.E. of Bawtry, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Sutton railway station. It is situated in a fertile district at the bridge over the river Idle. The manor belonged to Earl Tosti. The village, which is situated on the bank of the river, was formerly a market town under the Maresays, who founded a Gilbertine priory here in the 12th century, which came through the Nevilles, Hickmans, and others, to the Ackloms. The Chesterfield canal passes within a mile of the village. There are some sand pits and marshes on the river. The waste lands were enclosed under an Act of Parliament in 1770. The tithes have been commuted for 130 acres of land, valued at £1,300. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £260, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat structure with a square embattled tower, containing three bells. In the chancel is a curious carving, representing St. Martin sharing his cloak with the beggar. This relic of antiquity formerly belonged to the Abbey, the ruins of which are about a mile distant from the village. The charities consist of £9, the endowment of Nettleship's school. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists.

MATTINGLEY, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Heckfield, hund. of Holdshott, co. Hants, 2½ miles W. of Winchfield, its nearest railway station and post town, and 4 N. of Odiham. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Heckfield, in the dioc. of Winchester. The chapel-of-ease is a small ancient structure.

MATTISHALL, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 5 miles E. of East Dereham, its post town, and 10½ from Norwich. The village is large and chiefly agricultural. The worsted manufacture was formerly carried on, but has recently been discontinued. The land is chiefly arable, with some meadow and pasture. The impropriation belongs to the Master and Fellows of Caius College, Cambridge. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £448, and the vicarial for £293. The living is a vic.* with the rect.* of Pattesley annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £437, in the patron. of Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a lofty square embattled tower, surmounted by a spire. It contains two brasses of a priest, bearing date 1520, a piscina of elegant design, and several monuments. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is also a Quakers' meeting-house. At the enclosure of the parish, sixty acres were allotted to the poor, which, with other lands, produce £90 per annum.

MATTISHALL-BURGH, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 6 miles E. of East Dereham, its post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated on a branch of the river Wensum, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Hockering, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is a small neat edifice. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum.

MATTISHALL-HEATH, or MARKSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 2½ miles S. of Norwich, its post town. It is a very small parish, situated in the vale of the river Sas. The living is a sinecure rect. annexed to the rect.* of Caistor, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins. The charities produce about £182 per annum.

MATTOCK, a feeder of the river Boyne, rises near Newtown Monasterboice, co. Louth, Ireland.

MAUCHLINE, or MACKLIN, a par. and post-office vil. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Catrine, and 11 N.E. of Ayr. It is a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The par. contains the town of its own name, also the vils. of Auchmillan and Haugh. It extends in length from N. to S. about 7½ miles, with an average breadth of from 2 to 4 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Craigie, Galston, Torn, Auchinlech, Ochiltree, Stair, and Tarbolton. The land is principally arable, and with the exception of Mauchline Hill moderately flat. The soil is chiefly of a clayey nature, though in the vicinity of the town it is light and sandy. Coal, ironstone, and limestone exist, and were formerly worked; and white and red sandstone, of excellent quality, are quarried to some extent. There is a fine prospect from Mauchline Hill, which forms a part of the Long Ridge of Kyle, towering a little to the N.E. of the town. Here was formerly a Cistercian cell belonging to the Abbey of Melrose, but when that abbey was erected into a temporal lordship, the lands and barony of Kylesmure and Barmure, and the patronage of the church of Mauchline, were given to the Earl of Loudon, from whom they passed by marriage to the Earls of Moira, and in 1789 went by purchase to Gavin Hamilton, Esq., the friend of the poet Burns. There are numerous caves hewn out of the rocks, one of which, called Peden's Cave, was the hiding-place of Alexander Peden, during the persecution of the Covenanters. The Lugar stream joins the river Ayr at Barskimmey, where is a bridge of one arch with a span of 100 feet, and upwards of 90 feet in height; and at Ballochmoyle is a railway viaduct. This parish was reduced to less than a fifth of its original extent in the years 1631 and 1636, when Muirkirk and Torn were detached, and formed into separate parishes. The Glasgow and South-Western railway, and the road betwixt Glasgow and Dumfries, pass through the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £231. The parish church is a structure of red sandstone, with a turreted tower; it was rebuilt in 1829 on the site of an older one on Mauchline Moor. Here Wishart preached in 1544, and the royalists were defeated in 1647. In the churchyard are the graves of the Rev. Mr. Auld Nanse Tinnock and others, satirised in the poems of Burns. There are an United Presbyterian church, free school, new educational school, female school of industry, also a subscription school at Crosshands. The town, which is situate on an eminence near the river Ayr, is well built, and contains several mansions. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the weaving of cotton goods; there are also extensive manufactories of snuff-boxes, and various decorative ornaments; but this trade has been greatly superseded of late years by ornamental painting, which is carried on to a considerable extent. It was formerly a burgh of barony, and had power to elect its own magistrates, but its charter being lost, its rights have never been renewed. At Mauchline Town Head is a monument of recent erection to the five Covenanters, who suffered martyrdom in James VII.'s time. About half a mile N. of the town of Mauchline is Mossgiel, a small farm where the poet Burns resided several years; the house is a small rude building consisting of two rooms, and while here Burns composed his first edition of poems under the advice of Mr. Hamilton, of Mauchline Castle, an ancient building situated near the church. His chief resort when he visited Mauchline was the public-house kept by John Dow, which still stands, and is a thatched house of two flats nearly opposite the churchyard gate, close to which is the cottage of "Poosie Nancy," or "Agnes Gibson," the scene of the "Jolly Beggars." Many spots alluded to in his lyrics occur along the banks of the river Ayr, a short distance from Mauchline. Annual fairs for cows, horses, hiring servants, &c., are held on fixed days in February, April, May, June, August, September, November, and December.

MAUDLINS, a vil. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, not far from New Ross. There is also a mine of this name in co. Cornwall, near Lostwithiel.

MAUDLING, a hmlt. in the par. of Westhampnett, hund. of Box, Chichester rape, co. Sussex, 1 mile N.E. of Chichester.

MAUDLINTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing part of its post town, Wexford. The par. is 1½ mile in length by 1 broad. The surface lies along the E. side of Wexford harbour, and is crossed by the roads from Wexford to Broadway and Kilmore. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with St. Patrick's, Wexford, £493, in the patron. of the bishop. Rockland is the chief seat. Here stood a leper's hospital.

MAUGHAN'S, ST., a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Skenfreth, co. Monmouth, 6 miles N.W. of Monmouth. The village is a small rustic place. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed with that of Llanfaenor to the vic.* of Llangattock-Vibon-Avell.

MAUGHOLD. See KIRK MAUGHOLD, Isle of Man.

MAULBAUN, a vil. in the par. of Monkstown, in the bar. of Kerricurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Monkstown.

MAULDEN, a par. in the hund. of Redbornestoke, co. Bedford, 1 mile S.E. of Ampthill, its post town, and 9 miles S. of Bedford. The village is bounded on the E. by a small stream which flows into the Ivel. It is chiefly agricultural, but some of the women are employed in the manufacture of straw plait and lace. The greater part of the land is arable, the remainder pasture, with about 250 acres of woodland and plantations. There are quarries of sandstone. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1796. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £438. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected at different periods between the 13th and 15th centuries, and was entirely restored in 1837. It has a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a brass bearing date 1594, and the tomb of Lady Elgin, called the "Lady in the Punch-bowl." The living was formerly held by Pomfret, the poet. The parochial charities produce about £57 per annum, of which £10 goes to the school. There is a school for both sexes in connection with the church. The Independents have a place of worship. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor.

MAULDSLIE, a castle, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Lanark. It was built at the close of the last century by the last Earl of Hyndford, under Mauldslie Law.

MAULDS-MEABURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby Ravensworth, West Ward, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S. of Appleby. It is situated on the river Lyvennet, and contains Wickerslack. Maulds-Meaburn Hall is the principal residence.

MAUL-ELAN, two islets, situated at the entrance of Loch Assynt, on the W. coast of Sutherlandshire, Scotland.

MAUMBURY, a hill, co. Dorset, a quarter of a mile S.W. of Dorchester, remarkable for the remains of an amphitheatre cut out of the chalk rock by order of the Roman general, Agricola. The amphitheatre, which is reckoned the most perfect in England, is nearly oval, being 344 feet by 340, and 55 feet deep.

MAUMYKELLY, a mountain, co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Bangor. It attains an altitude of 1,205 feet above the sea level.

MAUN, or MAN, a feeder of the river Idle, rises in Sherwood Forest, co. Notts, and joins the Idle at Ollerton.

MAUNBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Wiske, wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Thirsk, and 6 S.W. of Northallerton. It is situated on the river Swale, and contains Maunby Hall.

MAUTBY, a par. in the hund. of East Flegg, co. Norfolk, 5½ miles N.W. of Yarmouth, its post town, and 2½ W. by N. of Caistor. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the river Bure, and is wholly agricultural. Nearly two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder meadow and marsh land. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £580. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a small thatched structure, with a circular tower, octagonal in the upper part, and of earlier date. The interior of the church has monuments to the Mautby family. Robert Fellowes, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MAVESYN-RIDWARE, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 3½ miles E. of Rugeley, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Lichfield. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Trent and Grand Trunk canal, near the Trent Valley railway. The par. comprises the vils. of Blithbury and Hill Ridware. The land is very fertile, and in a good state of cultivation. The manor anciently belonged to the Malvoisins, or Mauvesins. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £438. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of great antiquity to the Chadwick and Mauvesin families. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a free school, supported by voluntary contributions. Lord Leigh is lord of the manor.

MAVIS-ENDERBY, a par. in the hund. of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln. [See ENDERBY, MAVIS.]

MAVISTONS, shifting sandhills on the coast of Elgin, Scotland, near Dyke and Burghead.

MAWCARSE, a station on the Kinross railway, co. Kinross, Scotland, 7 miles from Ladybank, and 4 from Kinross.

MAWDDACH, or MAW, a river rising under Carn Twrog, co. Merioneth, and falling into the sea at Aber-Maw, or Barmouth. It flows through a valley for above 20 miles, and in its course forms the cascades of Rhaiadr Du and Pistyll-y-Cain, the latter a fall of 150 feet.

MAWDESLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Croston, hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 7 miles from Ormskirk, its post town, 8 W. by S. of Chorley, and 2 from the Rufford station on the East Lancashire railway. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Douglas, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of stiff clay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Croston. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure built in 1840. It has a small spired tower containing one bell. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. There are schools and places of worship for the Roman Catholics and Wesleyan Methodists. Mawdesley Hall, still the principal residence, was formerly the family seat of the Mawdesleys. It is situated on a rock of red sandstone. Courts leet and baron are held annually at Michaelmas by Sir Thomas Hesketh, Bart., and John Randolphus de Trafford, Esq., who are the lords of the manor and principal landowners.

MAWES, ST., a small seaport and ancient market town in the par. of St. Just-in-Roseland, hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 3 miles E. of Falmouth, across the harbour, and 14 from Truro. The ferry from Falmouth to Flushing is worked every half hour, from 8 A.M. to 8 P.M. in summer. Its name is supposed to be a corruption of St. Mary's, to whose priory at Plympton it anciently belonged. Other writers refer to a tradition which derives it from St. Mawe, or Machutus, a Welsh monk, who also gave name to the town of St. Malo, upon the coast of France. The former derivation, however, appears the more reasonable, and is supported by ancient records, in which the town is frequently written St. Mawes, alias St. Mary's. A castle was erected here in 1542 by Henry VIII. during the French war, as a protection to Falmouth Harbour. It stands upon the solid rock, a little to the right of the town, at an elevation of 117 feet above high-water mark, overlooking a most dangerous part of the coast, owing to the roughness of the waves, which in stormy weather break upon the rocks. In 1646 it was bombarded by Sir Thomas Fairfax, who captured in it thirteen pieces of ordnance, two brass guns of 13,000 lb. weight, and a large proportion of stores. It continued for several generations the property of the Vyvyan family, to whom it was given, with other lands belonging to the priory of St. Mary's at Plympton, at the Dissolution. In 1855 the tower tier, or battery, was mounted with twelve heavy guns, eight 65-pounders, and four of 96 lb., carrying shot of 130 lb., but the upper tiers are still unmounted. Opposite rises Pendennis, with its ancient keep, also the Lone Point and lighthouse, with the heights of St. Anthony to the left. The town, which is built at the foot of a precipitous hill, consists chiefly of one street fronting the sea. It is irregularly laid out, and chiefly inhabited by fishermen and pilots. The only branch of manufacture is that of cables and ropes for small craft. The pilchard fishery, formerly so productive, has entirely declined. A portreeve, or mayor, is chosen by the jury at a court-leet of the lord of the manor, held in October. It formerly returned members to parliament from the reign of Elizabeth, but was disfranchised by the Act of 2 William IV. cap. 45. It contains a chapel-of-ease dedicated to St. Mawes, also places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. There is a National school for boys and girls, and one founded by the late Duke of Buckingham. The chief landowners are Viscount Falmouth, Sir S. T. Spry, and Hugh O. Olivy, Esq. A small market is held on Friday for butcher's meat.

MAWGAN-IN-MENEAGE, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.E. of Helston, its post town. The parish, which is situated near the head of Helford Creek, under the Goonhilly-Downs, comprises a portion of the small port of Gweek. There are several barrows in which coins, urns, &c., have been found. The soil is light, with a subsoil of gravel, marl, and rock. From Point Downs a view is commanded over the valley of Mawgan, with a branch of the small river Hel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of St. Martin in Meneage, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £910. The church, dedicated to St. Mawgan, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a cross of great antiquity, also monuments of the Vyvyan and Carminow families. There is a National school for girls, in which a Sunday-school is also held for both sexes. There are two chapels for Association Methodists, and one each for Wesleyans and Baptists. Trelowarren, about 1 mile distant, is the residence of Sir Richard R. Vyvyan, Bart., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. It was erected in 1644, with a splendidly decorated chapel annexed. A feast day occurs on the nearest Sunday to November 11. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday after Lady Day, second Tuesday in August, and first Tuesday in December, for cattle.

MAWGAN-IN-PYDER, a par. in the hund. of East Pyder, co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.W. of St. Colomb-Major, its post town, and 8 from Padstow. It is bounded on the W. by the Bristol Channel, and includes the small cove of Mawgan Porth. The village, which is small, and chiefly agricultural, is situated in a valley, watered by a considerable stream which, about 2 miles below, falls into the sea between precipitous cliffs. At a point on the coast called Badrathan Steps, a pathway leads down the rocks to a firm sandy beach, locally known as Trevarrian, the sands extending for above 3 miles. Slate of excellent quality is procured in vast quantities from the cliffs, chiefly for exportation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £605. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £590, and a glebe of 64 acres. The church is an ancient structure, and in the churchyard is a cross, with a niche, in which is an alto-relievo of the Crucifixion. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship, and there are two village schools. A court leet and baron is held annually for the manor of Carnanton. Lanherne House, one of the principal seats of the Arundel family, was fitted up by the eighth Lord Arundel as a nunnery for four Carmelites from Antwerp. Near the village are traces of ancient earthworks.

MAWKINS-HAZELLS, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester.

MAWNAN, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 4½ miles S.W. of Falmouth, its post town, and 3 from Penryn. It is bounded on the S.E. by the English Channel, which here forms the two small open bays called Paisk and Bream. The village, which is small, is situated near the coast under Rosemullion Head, at the mouth of the river Helford, an arm of the sea, about a mile in breadth. The surface is hilly, and in the neighbourhood is an ancient circular camp known as Carlinnack. Petty sessions are held in the village. The soil is various, with a subsoil of clay and slate, which in some parts is overgrown with furze. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £304 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £323. The church, dedicated to St. Mawnanus and Stephen, is an ancient structure, with a tower which serves as a landmark to mariners. At Penwarne was formerly a chapel-of-ease, with a cemetery adjoining. There is an endowed National school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship.

MAWR, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Llangafelach, co. Glamorgan, 7 miles N. of Swansea. It is situated near the Via Julia. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the pits.

MAWR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanguick, hund. of Llangafelach, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N.W. of Neath.

MAWSLEY, an ext. par. place adjoining the chplry. of Faxton, co. Northampton, 3 miles S. of Rothwell.

MAWTHORPE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Well and Willoughby, Wold div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.E. of Alford.

MAXEY, a par. in the lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 1¼ mile S.W. of Market-Deeping, its post town, and 8 miles N.W. of Peterborough. It is situated on the river Welland, and contains the hmlt. of Deeping-Gate, where the river is crossed by a stone bridge to Market-Deeping. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Here are remains of the Lolham Bridges, constructed by the Romans, to conduct the Ermin Street over the low grounds adjoining the river. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £304, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower, containing six bells. The interior of the church contains many old tombs. The parochial charities produce about £126 per annum, of which £94 is realised by the Church estate. There is a National school for both sexes, of recent erection. There is a place of worship for the Independents.

MAXSTOKE, or MAXSTOCK, a par. in the Atherstone div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 2½ miles E. of Coleshill, its post town, and 4 S.E. of the Whitacre railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Blythe, and is wholly agricultural. Maxstoke is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Machitone, and formerly had an Austin priory, founded by Sir William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, in 1335. Maxstoke Castle, which was built about the same time, has successively belonged to the Staffords, Comptons, Egertons, and, finally, to the Dilke family, in whose possession it now remains. The site of the priory is now occupied by a farmhouse, but the remains of the castle are still in good preservation and worthy of inspection, presenting an almost perfect specimen of the early baronial fortress. The soil consists of a reddish loam, with a subsoil of clay and gravel. The surface is generally level, except in the east, where it rises into a considerable elevation. The living is a vic. in the dioc.* of Worcester, val. £70. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small neat edifice, containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Lord Leigh is lord of the manor.

MAXTON, a par. in the district of Melrose, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Maxton and Rutherford. It extends 3½ miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 2¼, and is bounded by Berwickshire, Makerston, Roxburgh, Ancrum, and St. Boswell's. The Edinburgh and Hawick railway passes through the parish, and has stations at Maxton and Rutherford. The village of Maxton is situated on the Melrose and Kelso road, near the western border of the parish, and on the river Tweed. In former times it was of more importance than at present. The chief part of the land is well cultivated; it has a rich soil, and is very productive. At Lilliard's Edge, on the boundary betwixt this parish and that of Ancrum, was fought the famous battle between the Scots and English on the 14th December, 1544, in which the latter were totally routed with the loss of 1,000 men slain and made prisoners. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the fishery of salmon and trout, which are abundant. This par. is in the presb. of Selkirk and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister has a stipend of £224. The parish church, an ancient structure, was restored and modernised in 1812. It has tombs of the Kers of Littledean Tower, of which there are still traces about one mile from the church. There are traces of a Roman way, also of a Roman camp, on Moorhouse-law Hill.

MAXWELLHEUGH, a vil. in the par. of Kelso, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 2 miles from Kelso.

MAXWELLTON, a demesne in the par. of Glencairn, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Minnihive, and 67 S. by E. of Edinburgh. It is situated near the southern bank of Dalwhat Water, over which there is a stone bridge, and is the property of Ferguson of Craigdarroch.

MAXWELLTOWN, a quoad sacra par. and burgh of barony, in the par. of Troqueer, dist. of East Kirkcudbright, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 1¼ mile from Dumfries, and 73 miles from Edinburgh. It is a station on the Castle Douglas branch of the Glasgow and South-Western and Portpatrick railway. The town stands on the right bank of the river Nith, here crossed by two bridges, about nine miles from the sea at Solway Frith, and directly opposite the town of Dumfries, within the limits of which parliamentary borough it is included. It was called Bridgend before 1810, when it was erected into a free burgh of barony, and was then only a poorly-inhabited village, but rapidly improved under the auspices of Mr. Maxwell, of Nithsdale. It now consists of three good streets, well paved and lighted, and several smaller streets or alleys, but, like London, it has no terrace or river frontage till below the old bridge, when the south hill, which rises abruptly from the water, is crowned by an observatory, once a windmill, and a range of houses fronting Dumfries. On the brink of the stream below the hill are numerous large corn mills, worked by water power, obtained by a high water wier, stretching diagonally across the whole breadth of the river. It contains a neat burgh or townhall, a Free church, and a chapel-of-ease to the parish church of Troqueer, which stands about a mile to the S. of the burgh. The living is in the presb. of Dumfries, and in the patron. of the shareholders and heads of families. There are two iron foundries, two rope works, dye works, a waulk mill, tannery, and the Dumfries granaries; also, on the Maxwelltown side of the river, a fishery of salmon, grilse, and herrings. In the town are an endowed school, and a Free Church school, and a little out of the town, to the S., the parochial school. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, and four councillors, assisted under the General Police Act by twelve commissioners, three of whom are police magistrates. Justice of the peace courts, for recovery of small debts, are held on the first Thursday in each month, and Stewartry Circuit courts on the 9th January, April, and July, and on the 1st October.

MAXWELTON, a vil. in the par. of East Kilbride, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Scotland.

MAXWELTON, a suburb of Paisley, in the par. of the Abbey of Paisley, and within the parliamentary bounds of that borough, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, half a mile S.W. of Paisley. It has entirely sprung up since the middle of the last century, and consists of several streets of neatly-built houses. It has a considerable manufacture of silk gauze.

MAY, a small river rising under the Ochills, co. Perth, Scotland. From thence it runs 10 miles N.E. by N., and, passing "the Birks of Invermay," forms the Falls of Muckarsie and "Humble-Bumble," and finally falls into the Earn, opposite Dupplin Castle.

MAYBOLE, a par. in the district of Carrick, co. Ayr, Scotland. It is a station on the Maybole and Girvan railway. The par. is situated between the rivers Doon and Girvan, abounding in salmon and trout, and includes the ancient par. of Kirkbride. It is bounded by the Frith of Clyde, and by the pars. of Ayr, Dalrymple, Kirkmichael, and Kirkoswald. The par., which extends in its greatest length 9 miles, with a breadth of 5, contains a market and post town of its own name, and the vils. of Culroy, Dunure, and Fisherton. On the banks of the rivers Doon and Girvan there are many well-managed farms, and some rich arable land in the eastern and south-eastern districts, which form an undulating plain, but the surface is in general mountainous, and appropriated to sheep-walks. The town of Maybole, which is a place of considerable antiquity, is situated on an eminence, and is defended from the northerly and easterly winds by a range of hills which surround it in the form of an amphitheatre, attaining, at Brown Carrick Hill, an eastern attitude of 925 feet above sea level. This range, though eminently beneficial in mitigating the severity of the climate, rises like a screen to intercept the view of the Frith of Clyde, with its numerous sails, and the rock of Ailsa in the distance. A collegiate church was founded here by Alexander II., as a cell to North Berwick, and, in 1516, the town was erected into a burgh of barony under the Kennedys, ancestors of the Marquis of Ailsa. It stands near the southern extremity of the parish, on the road from Glasgow to Portpatrick, about 9 miles S.W. of Ayr, and 12 N.N.E. of Girvan. The only parts of the town of any pretension are the main street, and what is called the Kirk-wynd. These contain many ancient residences, but are destitute of any modern attraction. The lower streets, called Kirklands, Newyards, and Ballony, are not within the limits of the burgh, and consist almost wholly of weavers' houses and workshops. The town contains the post-office, commercial bank, townhall, a cumbrous old pile with a spiral tower, situated near the cross, the toll-booth, once the town residence of the lairds of Blairquhan, and the Castle. This last was the ancient residence of the earls of Cassillis, the principal branch of the Kennedys. It is well supplied with water, and is noted for the health and longevity of its inhabitants. The principal manufactures are woollen-weaving and that of blankets, which are sold at the four annual fairs held in the town. The par. is in the presb. of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £336, besides glebe. The parish church was built in 1808, and improved in 1830. There are besides two chapels-of-ease, one situated at the W. end of the town and the other on the coast of Fisherton. Also a Free church in the town, an United Presbyterian church, and an Episcopalian chapel. There are a grammar school, of ancient foundation, and six non-parochial schools. The principal antiquities are the remains of the Collegiate church of Marbole, rebuilt by Sir Gilbert Kennedy, of Dunure, in 1441, on the site of an older one founded by Alexander II.; the ruins of the church of Kirkbride, on the shore about half a mile to the north of Dunure Castle; also traces of a chapel, on the lands of Auchendrane, the scene of Sir Walter Scott's "Auchendrane, or Ayrshire Tragedy," and the house, now occupied as the Red Lion Inn, in which John Knox, the reformer, disputed with Quentin Kennedy, Abbot of Crossraguel. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the third Thursdays in January, April, July, and October.

MAYFIELD, or MATHFIELD, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Ashborne, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Uttoxeter. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Dove, near Hanging Bridge. This latter consists of five stone arches, across the valley of the Dove. The par. includes the hmlts. of Church Mayfield, Middle and Upper Mayfield, Butterton, Calton, and Woodhouses. The spinning of cotton yarn is carried on to a small extent, and some of the inhabitants are employed in the works at Hanging Bridge, on the other side of the Dove. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £151. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a lofty tower, containing three bells. In addition to the parish church are two district churches, viz. at Butterton and Calton, the livings of which are a perpet. cur., and a don. cur.,* val. £90 and £86 each. The parochial charities produce £54 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes. Also a place of worship for Wesleyans. Mayfield Hall is the principal residence, occupied by Mrs. Tunnicliffe, who is lady of the manor. There is a wake held on the following Sunday after June 24th. Within the parish are two barrows, called Harlow and Rowloo; and, in digging a morass, vestiges of an ancient paved road, supposed to be Roman, were discovered, and traces of an old fortification.

MAYFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Loxfield-Pelham, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 5 miles S.W. of Wadhurst railway station, and 8½ S. of Tunbridge Wells. Hurst Green is its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated on the road from Tunbridge Wells to Eastbourne. It is wholly agricultural, and contains the hmlt. of Hadlow. The village, formerly a market town under a charter of Henry III., was almost wholly destroyed by fire in 1389. It was rebuilt, and is now a polling place for East Sussex. The principal attractions of the place are the ruins of a palace of the Archbishops of Canterbury, and the site of the old church erected by St. Dunstan in the 10th century, consisting of the gate, hall, &c. The surface is elevated, and diversified with hills, and the lower grounds are watered by the river Rother. In the neighbourhood are mineral springs of excellent quality. A large portion of the land is in orchards and hop grounds. The soil is various, but principally clay, alternated with sand on a subsoil of gravel. There were formerly furnaces here for smelting the iron sandstone, which is abundant. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £834. The church, dedicated to St. Dunstan, has a square tower, surmounted by a low spire, and containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a curious stone font, bearing date 1663. Also memorial windows to vicars of the parish in the south aisle, and monuments to the Baker family. Also tablets to the Aynscombe and Sands families. The church is built on the site of a more ancient one. The register dates from 1572. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. There is an endowed school for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel. The Marquis of Camden is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the 30th May and 13th November for cattle and sheep.

MAYFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Woking, first div. of the hund. of Woking, co. Surrey, 4 miles N. of Guildford. It is situated on the line of the South-Western railway, and on a branch of the river Wey.

MAYGLASS, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Wexford, its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 2½ broad. The soil is mostly good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Killinick, £310, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballymore. There is a day school. Thornville is the principal residence. There are ruins of the old parish church, which is supposed to have originally been an abbey, founded at the close of the 13th century; also ruins of three other churches, and of Ballycogley Castle.

MAY-ISLAND, a small island in the lordship of Pittenweem, and par. of Anstruther-Wester, co. Fife, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Crail, by which parish it is also claimed, and 8 from the Bass Rock. It is situated in lat. 56° 16′ N., at the mouth of the Frith of Forth, and extends about 1 mile in length, with a breadth of three-quarters. It consists of slate rock, and contains a small lake. There was formerly a chapel, which was dedicated to St. Adrian, who was murdered here by the Danes in 870; also an Austin Cell, founded by David I., to Pittenweem Abbey, of which the ruins are still to be seen. It subsequently became the property of the government, who purchased it of the Duke of Portland for £60,000. The tower was rebuilt in the years 1815-16, and in lieu of the coal-fire light which existed from Charles I.'s time, oil lamps, designed into a brilliant star, have been fixed at a height of 240 feet, and visible 21 miles. About 130 feet from it is another light 110 feet in height, and visible 15 miles, erected in 1844. In the extreme W. of the island the cliffs rise 160 feet in height, and abound in wild fowl; also towards the E. the surface is flat, well watered, and affords some excellent pasture for sheep. Rabbits breed here in considerable numbers.

MAYLAND, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 8½ miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town, and 4 W. of Burnham. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410, and the vicarial for £142. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £131, in the patron. of the Governors of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. The church, dedicated to St. Barnabas, is an ancient structure, situated on lofty ground near Mayland Hall. It has been restored. The register dates from 1748. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a day school, supported by the Governors of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, who are the lords of the manor. Dr. John Ganden, successively Bishop of Exeter and Worcester, and supposed by some to have been the author of "Eikon Basilike," was born here in 1605.

MAYLES, a hmlt. in the pars. of Sulhampstead and Bannister, hund. of Theale, co. Berks.

MAYLOR, a hund. co. Flint, contains the pars. of Hanmer, Hope, Overton, and Worthenbury, with parts of Bangor, Doddleston, Ellesmere, Erbistock, Llanarmon, Malpas, Threapwood, and Wrexham.

MAYNE, a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile W.N.W. of Castlepollard, its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3. It comprises the vil. of Coole. The surface consists of a middling soil. The river Inny flows along the W., and Lough Dereveragh lies in the S. The parish is crossed by the roads from Castlepollard to Granard and Edgeworthstown. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £91, in the patron. of the incumbent of Rathgraff. The church was built about 1805 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Faughley. Here are a Sunday and several day schools. Pakenham Hall is the residence of Earl Longford.

MAYNE, a par. in the bar. of Fassadinin, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Kilkenny. Leighlinbridge is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 1½ mile. The surface consists of a fair soil, and is crossed by the road from Kilkenny to Durrow. The rivers Nore and Dinane pass through portions of the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £217, in the patron. of the bishop. Jenkinstown is the seat of Colonel Bryan. Littlefield is another seat.

MAYNE, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.E. of Dunleer. Drogheda is its post town. It is a little over a mile in length, and the same in breadth. The parish is partly situated on the coast near Clogher Head. The road from Clogher to Dunleer crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Termonfeckin, £481, in the patron. of the crown. There is a hedge-school.

MAYNE, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Knighton, co. Dorset, 3 miles S.E. of Dorchester.

MAYNOOTH, or LARAGHBRYAN, a market and post town, in the par. of Laraghbryan, in the bar. of North Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the river Rye Water, about 12 miles W. from Dublin, with which it is connected by the Midland Great Western Railway, and Royal Canal, on which it is a station. There are no manufactures, and but little trade carried on; the consequence of which is that the town is straggling, the houses generally half empty, and the inhabitants, with few exceptions, very poor. The population of the town, according to the parliamentary return of 1831, amounted to 2,620; in 1834 it was 2,869; and, in 1861, it was reduced to 2,091. It contains the parish church, which was restored in 1774 by the late Duke of Leinster, a Roman Catholic chapel, National and other schools, court-house, and dispensary, which is within the Colbridge Poor-law union. Here, about the time of the reign of Henry III., the Kildare branch of the Fitzgeralds fixed their principal seat, and around the dwelling of these celebrated chieftains sprang up the town, almost as it now stands. At the W. end stand the ruins of a once formidable fortress, built in 1426 by John, sixth Earl of Offaly, and dismantled in 1646 by the Catholic army, under General Preston. In 1518, a license was granted for Gerald, eighth earl, to build a College under the special patronage of the B. V. M., of which the Prebend of Maynooth was master, and the Vicar of Laraghbryan, sub-master; and in 1678, a charter was given for the holding of one weekly market, and two yearly fairs. In modern times, also, Maynooth is celebrated both as the seat of the Fitzgeralds, represented in the person of the Duke of Leinster, and for its College, so often the subject of debates in the British House of Commons. About a mile from the town, on the E. side, is Carton, the residence of the Leinster family. The mansion stands in the midst of an extensive demesne. On the opposite side of the town, and contiguous to the ruins of Leinster Castle, stands the Roman Catholic College. The Relief Bill, passed in 1793, permitted Catholics to endow a college and schools. In consequence of this, the General Committee, or Convention of the Roman Catholics, when dissolving at their last meeting, on the 25th April, 1793, appointed a committee to procure an improved system of education for the youth of that persuasion. The persons to whom this duty was entrusted had made considerable progress in devising a scheme which embraced the education of persons of every persuasion, and which would be under the joint control of the clergy and laity, and depend on the people for support. This popular plan, however, did not obtain the approbation of the clergy, and the promoters were assured they might desist from their labours, as an arrangement had been made for Catholic education, which should be solely conducted by the bishops, under the auspices of government and the sanction of parliament. Accordingly, on January 14th, 1794, the Catholic prelates presented an address to the Lord-Lieutenant (John Earl of Westmoreland), praying that his excellency would use his influence to obtain the royal license for putting their design into effect. Lord Fitzwilliam, in his speech to parliament, recommended it, and the Rev. Thomas Hussey was called on to superintend the plan of education. (See Pelham's Speech, February 26th, 1798.) Lord Camden, on succeeding to Lord Fitzwilliam, found the government pledged to carry this measure into operation. Accordingly, on 23rd April, leave was given to bring in a Bill for applying the sum of £10,000, granted to his Majesty, or part thereof, for establishing a college for the better education of persons professing the Popish or Roman Catholic religion. Next day a bill was introduced, and Dr. Hussey was ordered to attend the committee of the House, when it should come under consideration. When the Bill was read a second time, it was found that no clause existed limiting the College to the admission of those only who were candidates for the clerical ministry. It was then withdrawn, and fresh leave given in an amended form, and the Bill was introduced on the 1st May. By this Act (35 Geo. III. c. 21) twenty-one trustees (the Chancellor and three Chief Judges, six Roman Catholic laymen, ten bishops, and Dr. Hussey) were appointed for the purpose of establishing, endowing, and maintaining one academy for the education of persons professing the Roman Catholic religion only. The original parliamentary grant for building and endowing this College was £8,000; it was afterwards raised to £13,000; again lowered to £8,928; and is now about £28,000 per annum. When first opened, in 1795, 50 students were admitted. In 1800, an increase of 50 more took place. The number was augmented to 200 in 1802, and, in 1809, to 250. There are now on the rolls about 480 students, 270 of whom, in addition to free commons, are in receipt of £20 per annum, paid out of the parliamentary grant. Attached to the College is an establishment for the support of a limited number of senior scholars of distinguished merit, called, from its founder, the "Dunboyne." Lord Dunboyne, at one time Catholic Bishop of Cork, having embraced Protestantism, again recanted, and, dying, bequeathed the sum of £500 for this purpose. Government afterwards added £700. It has a library, containing 12,000 volumes. The town also contains a police station, and petty and quarter sessions are held in the court-house. Fairs are held on May 4th, September 19th, and October 9th.

MAYO, a maritime co. of the prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated in the N.W. part of the island, and is bounded by the cos. of Sligo and Roscommon on the E., the ocean on the N. and W., and co. Galway on the S. It lies between 53° 28′ to 54° 21′ N. lat., and 8° 25′ to 10° 5′ W. long., and extends over an area of 2,131 square miles, or 1,363,882 statute acres, of which 497,587 are arable, 56,976 are under water, 8,360 in plantation, 800,111 uncultivated, and 848 are occupied by the sites of towns, roads, &c. Its length from N. to S. is 58 miles, and its extreme breadth from E. to W. is 72 miles. The coast is rugged and forbidding, but is broken by numerous indentations, the principal of which are, the Bay of Killala, with its extensive fisheries, Broadhaven, Blacksod, Tulloghane Bay, Clew Bay, an expanse of water with numerous islands, Bullan Bay, Westport, &c. The principal promontories of the coast are, Belmullet, Benwee Head, with the Stag's rocks, Eagle island, with its lighthouse, Erris Head, Mullet peninsula, Achill Head, with its lofty cliffs, Achillbeg, Clare island, with lighthouse, Innisgort, with light, Runa Head, Innisturk, Bofin Bank, where cod are taken, the Killeries, and Inistegil. The surface of the county is very various, comprising a large proportion of bog, alternated with fertile soil, mountainous and lake districts. The principal summits are, Mulrea, 2,683 feet; Benbery, 2,610; Croaghpatrick, 2,510; Bengorm, 2,224; Fermnamne, 2,210; Bengorriff, 2,038; Slieve Bohaim, 1,294, rising S. of Clew Bay, in the S.W. of the county; Achill Head, 2,222; Slieve More, 2,217; Slieve Cor, 2,368, Curraun Achill, 1,786; Nephin Beg, 2,012; Cushcamcurragh, 2,262; Nephin, 2,646; Buckoogh, 1,922; Bereen Curragh, 2,295; Slieve Turk, 1,322, rising to the N. of Clew Bay. The Croagh Moyle mountains are in the interior. Slieve Gamph, 1,321 feet, rises towards the E.; Knocklettercass, 1,208 feet; Maumakeogn, 1,243; Slieve Fyough, 1,090, in the N. The principal lakes are, loughs Corrib and Mask, Conn and Cullin, Carra, Beltra, Carrowmore, Lavalla, Feagh, and Furnace. There are numerous other lakes of less importance within the limits of the county. The chief rivers of Mayo are, the Moy, navigable to within a short distance of Ballina, and the only navigable stream of the county; the Owen, Oweninny, Owenmore, Deel, Robe, Ayle (partly subterranean), Amoy, Trimogne, and Shaddagh, with numerous other small streams, chiefly tributary to these. The climate of the county, owing to its extensive line of sea-coast, is damp, and subject to frequent rains and humid fogs, but is not considered unhealthy. The geological formations of the county consist chiefly of red sandstone, an extensive belt of which stretches between the N. side of Clew Bay and Lough Conn, and round Beltra, mica slate, granite, and quartz. The mica slate and quartz occur nearly all through the mountains of the W. To the N. of Lough Conn, and away to the river Oweninny, the surface consists of mountain limestone, and limestone forms the principal subsoil in the level districts. Several valuable marble and slate quarries are worked. Iron ore exists to some extent, but is not worked. Manganese and potters' clay are found in abundance. There are indications of coal at Slieve Garnon.—The inhabitants of the county are chiefly employed in agriculture and in the fisheries. The salmon fishery of the Moy and other streams is an important branch of industry, and on the coast ling, sole, turbot, herring, cod, oysters, lobsters, and seals, are taken. Greater attention is paid to pasturage and the rearing of cattle than to agriculture, which is in a backward state. The arable soils are mostly fertile, and much enriched by plentiful manurings of sea-weed. The cotton trade has greatly declined of late years, but there are still some manufacturers, chiefly at Ballyclare, who produce goods for domestic use. The fences of the country are constructed of stone or turf. Owing to the scarcity of wood, the peasants occupy huts of a wretched description. The farm labourer is paid at the rate of about 8*d.* a day, without rations of any kind.—This county is divided into nine baronies, viz. Burrishoole, in the W.; Carra, in the midst; Clanmorris, in the S.E.; Costello, in the E.; Erris and Tirawley, in the N. and N.W.; Gallen, in the N.E.; Kilmaine, in the S.; and Murrisk, in the S.W. These baronies include 73 parishes. The principal towns are, Castlebar, the county town, Westport, Ballinrobe, Ballina, Ballaghadirreen, Swinford, Claremorris, Crossmolina, Newport, Killala, and Foxford. The first four, with Swinford, are Poor-law Unions. The assizes are held at Castlebar, and quarter sessions are held at six of the above-named towns. This county is within the military district of Dublin, and has barracks at Castlebar, Ballinrobe, Westport, Foxford, and Ballaghadirreen. Along the coast there are 22 coastguard stations, and 45 police stations in the county. It is in the Connaught circuit, and the dioceses of Tuam, Killala, and Achonry. Mayo returned four members before the Union to the Irish parliament, and now returns two to the imperial parliament. Constituency in 1859, 3,779. The population of the county in 1851 was 274,830; in 1861, 254,796. It is governed by a custos rotulorum, lieutenant, high sheriff, 27 deputy lieutenants, magistrates, &c. —Mayo was the ancient territory of the Magnatæ. It appears to have been constituted a county in the time of Edward III. It was granted to the family of De Burgho by Henry II., who revolted in 1333, when William de Burgho, Earl of Ulster, was assassinated; and various parts of the county have at subsequent periods, especially during the troubled times of 1641, been the scene of rebellion and conflict, which will be more appropriately noticed under the names of the various localities in which they transpired.—The principal objects of antiquity to be found in Mayo are, round towers at Killala, Mellick, Aughnagower, Balla, and Turlough; Druidical stones at Westport; abbey ruins at Burrishoole, Ballyhaunis, Ballintubber, Moyne, Rosserk, and Ballysakeery; castle ruins at Doona, Dunbriste, Ballylahen, Ballinglen, Deel, Castle Island, Portnakally, Shrule, Carrig a Hooly, and Clare island. The last are Grace O'Malley's. The chief communications of the county are the Athlone and Castlebar section of the Great Northern and Western railway, and the coach roads, from Castlebar to Minola, Kilcolman, Ballyhaunis, Castlerea, Roscommon, and Dublin; to Lough Conn, Foxford, Ballina, Killala, and Sligo; to Lough Beltra in Glenhest, Owen Inny river, Bangor, Belmullet, and Erris Head; to Newport and Clew Bay, Bunown, Curran, Achill, and Achill Head to Clonkeen, Westport, Croaghpatrick, Killeries, and Clifden; and lastly to Balcarra, Burriscarra Abbey, Ballinrobe Cross, Rossduff, and Galway. The principal seats in the county are, Castlebar, of Earl Lucan; Westport, of the Marquis of Sligo; Newport, of Lord Clanmorris; Loughglyn, of Viscount Dillon; Neale, of Lord Kilmaine; Castlemacgarrett, of Lord Oranmore; Newport, of O'Donnell, Bart.; Kilboyne, of O'Malley; and Athvallie, of Blosse, Bart., &c.

MAYO, a par. in the bars. of Clanmorris and Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles S.E. of Castlebar. Ballyglass is its post town. It is 6 miles long by 3½ broad. The surface consists of a part of the plains of Mayo. There is a fair proportion of good soil. The interior is traversed by the roads from Claremorris to Castlebar, and from Ballagh to Hollymount. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £217, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by the late Board of First Fruits in 1811. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and four or five day schools. Mayo is supposed to have been the site of an episcopal seat, and of an abbey founded by St. Colman in 665. It appears to have been burnt by the Danes four times between the years 778 and 1169. It was ravaged by William de Burgh in 1204, and subsequently granted to the town of Galway. Brownehall is the seat of Colonel Browne. Vestiges of a castle and remains of fortifications are visible.

MAYOLA, a river rising in co. Londonderry, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Slieve Gallion, and falling into Lough Neagh at Tryad Point.

MAYPOLE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bold, par. of Prescot, co. Lancaster, 3 miles E. of Prescot, and 5 S.E. of St. Helen's. It is situated near Bold Heath, and on the line of the Runcorn railway.

MAYSHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Westerleigh, hund. of Puckle Church, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Chipping-Sodbury.

MEABURN, KING'S, a tnshp. in the par. of Morland, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles N.W. of Appleby. It is situated on the river Lyvennet. There is a small school in the hamlet, built in 1834, and endowed with the interest of £200.

MEABURN, MAULDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby Ravensworth, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles E. by N. of Shap. It is situated in a rich and fertile valley watered by the Lyvennet rivulet. The village, which is considerable, is neatly built. There are various bequests for the poor, producing about £15 per annum. A fair is held on the Monday before Easter for sheep and cattle.

MEADLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Monk's Risborough, co. Bucks, 2 miles N. of Prince's Risborough.

MEAD-MIDDLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Little Baddow, co. Essex, 3 miles E. of Chelmsford.

MEADOW MILL, a vil. in the par. of Tranent, co. Haddington, Scotland, near Preston-Pans.

MEADOWTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthen, co. Salop, 8 miles N. of Bishop's Castle.

MEAG, a rivulet on the southern border of the co. Ross, Scotland. It rises from Loch-Benachan, thence joining the Conan at Seatwell, 8 miles N.E.

MEALBUIDHE, a mountain in the par. of Fortingal, co. Perth, Scotland. It rises 3,480 feet above sea level.

MEALCEANDEARG, a middle range of Alpine mountain in the E. div. of Glensheil, co. Ross, Scotland. It rises nearly 4,000 feet above sea level.

MEALFOURVOUNIE, or MEALFORVHONIE, a mountain in the par. of Urquhart, co. Inverness, Scotland, 18 miles S.W. of Inverness. It is situated on the W. side of Loch-Ness, and rises 2,730 feet above sea level. It serves as an excellent sea-mark for the Moray Frith.

MEAL HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hepworth, par. of Kirk-Burton, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S. of Huddersfield. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal-pits and in agriculture.

MEALHORN, a mountain in the par. of Eddrachillis, co. Sutherland, Scotland. It is situated in the S.W. part of the Reay forest, and is 3,000 feet above sea level.

MEALMEADHONOCH, a mountain in the par. of Durness, co. Sutherland, Scotland.

MEALNENION, a summit of the Benclybric range, on the border of Lairg and Farr pars., co. Sutherland, Scotland. It ascends in a conical form to the height of 3,200 feet above sea level.

MEALO, a hmlt. in the par. of Aspatria, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Allonby. It is joined to Huyton.

MEALRIGG, a hmlt. in the par. of Bromfield, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 3 miles W. of Bromfield, and 6 W. of Wigton.

MEAN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Fareham, co. Hants, 3 miles S.W of Fareham. It is situated on Southampton Water, at the head of Portsmouth harbour, and is said to be the Meanvari of Bede.

MEAN, LOWER, an ext. par. place, co. Gloucester, 8 miles N.W. of Berkeley. It is joined with St. Briavel's.

MEANWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Leeds, wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Leeds. It is situated on the E. side of a thickly wooded dell, and contains several villa residences. The scenery is diversified, including a view of the town of Leeds. Divine worship is performed in the school-house, erected by Mr. Beckett. Meanwood House is a modern seat.

MEARE, a par. in the hund. of Glaston-Twelve-Hides, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Glastonbury, its post town, and 3 from Shapwick. The par., which is extensive, is situated on the river Brue, and contains the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Godney, and Westhay. There are remains of a double-ditched camp, supposed to be of Danish construction. Meare was formerly surrounded by moors, or meres; hence the origin of its present name. Of late years much has been done towards the drainage of these lands, particularly in the part called Mere-Pool. This district, formerly deluged with stagnant water, is 400 acres in extent, and is now in a useful state of cultivation. There was formerly a large fishery, but the old fish-house has been allowed to decay, except a small portion of the building preserved by the Archæological Society. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1779. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £340. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower containing an old clock and six bells. There is a district church at Godney, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £55. Near the parish church is an ancient stone cross. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There are ruins of the old manor house.

MEARLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.E. of Clitheroe railway station. It is a small township, situated at the foot of the Pendle hills.

MEARNS, the ancient name of Kincardine, which see.

MEARNS, a par. in the dist. of Renfrew, upper ward, co. Renfrew, Scotland. It contains Newton, a burgh of barony, and part of Busby. The par. is bounded by the cos. of Lanarkshire, Eaglesham, Ayrshire, Neilston, Eastwood, and Cathcart. It extends 7 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 3½. The surface, which is finely diversified, rises gradually from E. to W. The land is principally fertile, and is chiefly devoted to dairy farming and pasturage, for which it has long been famed. The great road from Glasgow to Ayr and Kilmarnock runs through the entire length of the parish, and the newly-formed road from Glasgow joins the former road a little beyond the King's Well Inn. The village is well built, and contains a branch of the City of Glasgow bank, and an inn. About 1 mile S. of the village of Newton Mearns are the moated ruins of Mearns Castle, consisting of a large square tower, seated on a rocky eminence, and surrounded by a strong wall. In the parish are two bleach-fields, calico printing works, and a cotton-spinning mill. The latter is situated at Busby, and gives employment to a large number of hands. This par. is in the presb. of Paisley and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £283. The parish church is an ancient structure, restored and enlarged in 1813. There is an United Presbyterian church at Newton-Mearns, also one at Busby. The former was rebuilt in 1840, and the latter erected in 1836. The parish, which is studded with numerous residences, is diversified by three lakes, called Brother, Little, and Black Locks. The last named is nearly two miles and a half in circumference.

MEARS-ASHBY, a par. in the hund. of Hamfordshoe, co. Northampton, 7 miles N.E. of Northampton, its post town, and 4 from Wellingborough. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £235, in the patron. of Trustees. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone edifice, with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a free school, also a Sunday-school. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship, the former being but little used. Lewis Loyd, Esq., is lord of part of the manor.

MEARSBRO', a hmlt. in the chplry. of Barnsley, par. of Silkstone, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Barnsley, and 33 S.W. of York. It is situated near the river Dearne and the Barnsley canal. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the linen manufacture, and others in the collieries.

MEASAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Bampton, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles S.W. of Bampton. It is situated on the W. side of Hawes-Water lake, and near Fordingdale Beck, a small stream which forms several waterfalls in its course. There is a free school, endowed in 1713 by R. Wright and Richard Lacy, with an estate now producing about £40 per annum.

MEASHAM, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 3½ miles S.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its nearest money-order office, and 9½ N. of Atherstone. It is situated on the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal and small river Mease, from which it derives its name. This latter rises at Ashby, and runs 16 miles S. and W. to the river Trent, below Croxall, bounding the parish of Measham. The par. includes, on the S. and E., the hmlts. of Donisthorpe and Oakthorpe. The chief trade of the town is in the manufacture of silk, tape, and small ware. There is also a steam boiler and chain manufactory, giving employment to a large number of hands. A brisk trade is carried on in malting and brewing. Coal is found, but not worked, and there are quarries of good building-stone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £97. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower containing a clock and four bells. The parochial charities produce about £325 per annum, of which £268 goes to Monk's school. There are National, British, and infant schools. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel, and the latter have a Sunday-school in connection. Measham Hall is a brick-built mansion, situated in the midst of an extensive park.

MEATH, or EAST MEATH, a large maritime co. in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are, cos. Cavan, Monaghan, and Louth, on the N.; the Irish Sea and Dublin on the E.; Kildare and Queen's County on the S.; and Westmeath on the W. It extends between 53° 23′ to 53° 55′ N. lat., and from 6° 13′ to 7° 19′ W. long. It is 40 miles in length from N. to S., and 47 broad from E. to W., comprising an area of 906 square miles, or 579,899 statute acres, of which 16,033 are uncultivated, 12,767 are plantations, 547,391 arable, 3,244 under water, and 464 occupied by the sites of towns, &c. The coast line extends for 10 miles, the greater part of which is low and sandy, without any inlet of importance. The surface, though not mountainous, is diversified in contour, and possesses in some of its districts picturesque scenery. The greater part of the arable soil consists of a rich loam. Portions of the bog of Allen take up a considerable area. The principal rivers of the county are the Boyne and Blackwater. Numerous small streams likewise water the county in wending their way towards those waters. The chief lakes are, Sheelin, Bawn, and Kilmainham, also Lough Dereveragh, Lough Annagh, Lough Ennel, Lough Leign, and Lough Drin. About 15 miles of the Royal canal are included within the limits of the county. The climate of Meath is very temperate, and the amount of rainfall under the average. Geologically this county forms the eastern portion of the great central limestone field of Ireland, with clay slate occurring occasionally, also a little coal. There are traces of copper and iron, and paving stones and slate are quarried. This part of the country was originally inhabited by the Eblani. It afterwards formed part of the kingdom of Meath, subject to the M'Laghlins. It was overrun by the Danes in the 9th century, and again in the 11th century, and after being taken by Strongbow in 1171, was granted to the Lacy family by Henry II. Trim, Dunboyne, Tara, and other places in the county were at different later periods the scene of conflict and siege, as noticed in the descriptions of the various towns and parishes.—The inhabitants are almost entirely agriculturists. 10*d.* to 1*s.* a day is paid for farm labourers, without rations. Grazing occupies considerable attention. Some coarse linens are manufactured.—This county is divided into 18 baronies, viz. Lower and Upper Deece, Lower and Upper Duleek, Lower and Upper Dunboyne, Fore, Lower and Upper Kells, Lower and Upper Slane, containing together 140 parishes, and parts of 7 others. Trim is the county and assize town. The next principal and market towns are Navan, Kells, Duleek, Athboy, Slane, and Oldcastle. The first four, with Dunshaughlin, are quarter sessions towns, and the first three, with it and Oldcastle, are Poor-law Unions. The county contains 6 police districts, with 51 stations. It is in the Dublin military district, and has barracks at Navan and Trim. The county returned 14 members to parliament before the Union; it now sends two representatives to the imperial parliament. Constituency in 1859, 4,383. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant, custos rotulorum, vice-lieutenant, 19 deputy-lieutenants, high sheriff, and about 120 magistrates, &c. It is in the home circuit, and the assizes are held at Trim. The greater part of the county is in the diocese of Meath, with parts in the dioceses of Armagh and Kilmore. The population in 1851 was 140,750, which had decreased in 1861 to 110,373. There are about 137 National schools, besides parochial and sectarian schools.—The chief antiquities are—numerous fossils, which are found in the limestone; the great rath at Tara, an interesting object, and anciently a royal seat, was the scene of the coronation of the Irish monarchs; at New Grange, Tailtean, Tlachtga, and Dunsany, are remains, probably Druidical; at Kells and Donaghmore round towers; at Trim, Newtown, Duleek, Bective, Ballybogan, Clonard, Castle Kieran, Fingall, Lough Sheelin, Balscon, Navan, Slane, Trevet, Killeen, Horan's Cross, and Skreen, remains of abbeys, churches, and ecclesiastical buildings. There are castles at Trim, Athlumney, Scurlogstown, Dunmow, Moyrath, Athcarne, Asigh, Donaghmore, Navan, Dangan, and Laracor.—The principal residences in the county are—Dunsany Castle, of Lord Dunsany; Killeen, of Earl Fingal; Slane, of Marquis of Conyngham; Headfort House, of Marquis of Headfort; Rathmore, of Earl Darnley; Dowth, of Viscount Netterville; Stackallan, of Viscount Boyne; Corbalton, of Viscount Gormanstown; Ardbraccan, of the Bishop of Meath; Trimlestown, of Lord Trimlestown; Lismullin, of Baron Dillon, &c. The family of Brabazon takes from hence the title of Earl of Meath.—The chief communications of the county are the Royal canal, the Dublin and Drogheda, and the Dublin and Meath railways; and the coach roads from Navan to Tara, Dunshaughlin, Ratouth, Greenoge, Swords, Clonee, and Dublin; to Duleek, Drogheda, Julianstown, and Gormanstown; to Slane, Tulliallen, Drogheda, Collon, Dundalk, Drumcondra, Carrickmacross, and Monaghan; to Donaghpatrick, Kells, Moynalty, Bailieborough, and Virginia; and, lastly, to Trim, Clonard, Castle-Jordan, Kilcock, and Maynooth.—The diocese of Meath is in the ecclesiastical province of Armagh, and comprises the quondam dioceses of Clonard, Duleek, Kells, Trim, and others. It spreads over nearly all the counties of Meath and Westmeath, about half over King's County, and over portions of Cavan, Longford, and Kildare. It contains 107 benefices and 26 curates. It has neither cathedral nor chapter. Ardbraccan House is the seat of the bishop, whose revenue is £4,308. The Roman Catholic diocese includes 68 parishes. The episcopal residence is at Mullingar.

MEATH, WEST. See WESTMEATH, Ireland.

MEAUX, or MELSA, a tnshp. in the par. of Wawn, middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Hull, and 3 E. of Beverley. The township derives its name from the settlers from Meaux in Normandy. There are traces of a Cistercian priory, founded by William-le-Gros in 1150, and valued at the Dissolution at £299. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The land is fertile. There are places of worship for the Independents and Methodists.

MEAVY, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 7 miles S.E. of Tavistock, its post town, and 10 N. of Plymouth. The line of railway to Plymouth passes through the parish. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Mew. It is wholly agricultural, and extends along the river bank. The soil is of a light nature, with a ferruginous subsoil. The surface is undulated. Nearly a third of the land is open and unproductive common, or coppice wood. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £210, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a square embattled tower, containing six bells. The parochial charities consist of the interest of £300, bequeathed by the late Sir Ralph Lopes. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Baptists have a place of worship. Near the church is a cross of great antiquity. The ruins of an old seat of the Drake family, of which was the great admiral Sir Francis, are in this parish. Sir Massey Lopes, Bart., is lord of the manor. A fair for cattle and pleasure is held annually.

MECHLAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Cilcen, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 4 miles N.W. of Mold.

MECKVEN, a vil. in the par. of Methven, co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles W. by N. of Perth.

MEDBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6½ miles N.E. of Market-Harborough, its post town, 4½ W. by N. of Rockingham, and near the Melbourne Bridge station, on the Rugby and Peterborough railway. It is situated on the banks of a small rivulet, N. of the river Welland, and contains the chplry. of Holt. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is divided between arable and pasture. The soil is various. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Holt annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £606, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £88 per annum, of which £32 goes to the free school, which is held in the N. transept of the church. In a field, a little to the N.W. of the village, are evidences of the site of a Roman station on the Via Devana, where coins, a tesselated pavement, and other relics, have been found. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. Cosmo Nevill, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MEDEN, a river rising near Hardwick Hall, co. Notts. After a course of fourteen miles, it joins the Idle below Thoresby Park.

MEDINA, EAST and WEST, libs. in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants. The liberties comprise the whole of the island, which see.

MEDINA, or MEDE, a river of the Isle of Wight, rises near Kingston, and falls into the sea at Cowes, where it forms a good harbour.

MEDLAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Revesby, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Bolingbroke.

MEDLAR WITH WESHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles N. by W. of Kirkham, which station is situated in this township. The houses are irregularly built. There is a large cotton mill and weaving shed, employing a great number of the inhabitants. Mowbreck Hall is the principal residence.

MEDLEY, or MEDELEY, a spot on the Thames, co. Oxford, 2 miles N. by W. of Oxford. It is watered by the Isis, and was anciently a seat of the priors of Oseney, where Henry II. met Fair Rosamond when a nun at the Abbey of Godstone.

MEDLICOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Wentnor, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Church Stretton.

MEDLOCK, a feeder of the Irwell, rising at Scholver, co. Lancaster.

MEDMENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 4½ miles W. of Henley-on-Thames, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Great Marlow. The village, which is small, is situated 1 mile from the London and Oxford road, on the banks of the Thames. It is wholly agricultural, and has the ruins of a monastery for Cistercian monks, founded by Hugh de Bolibec as a cell to Woburn Abbey. Its revenue at the Dissolution was returned at £20 6*s.* 2*d.* The incumbent's tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £133. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a chalk, flint, and stone edifice, with a tower containing three bells. It has several stained windows, and has recently been thoroughly restored. In the churchyard is a monument to the wife of Bransby William Powys, Esq. There are two free schools, also a Roman Catholic school. The site of the abbey, which is partly occupied by a modern erection in imitation of ruins, is on the banks of the Thames, and is nearly overgrown with ivy. Danesfield House and the Vicarage House are the principal residences. Above the village are vestiges of a large square camp, surrounded by a single vallum and ditch; also an ancient circular intrenchment, called Danesfield. C. R. S. Murray is lord of the manor.

MEDOMSLEY, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 11 miles S.W. of Gateshead, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the Stanhope rail, and on the road from Shotley Bridge to Newcastle. The chplry. comprises the tnshp. of Medomsley, and part of the tnshp. of Conside-cum-Knitsley. There are collieries, brick-kilns, and an iron foundry. The soil is chiefly loam and clay. Iron ore abounds in the coal formation of this district. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a stone edifice. There is a parochial school. The charities produce about 10*s.* per annum. Christopher Hunter, the physician and antiquary, was born at Medomsley Hall in 1675, and interred in Shotley church in 1757.

MEDSTED, or MEADSTED, a par. in the hund. of Bishop's Sutton, Alton div. of co. Hants, 4 miles S.W. of Alton, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The surface is elevated, and the scenery picturesque. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £580, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a small tower. The interior of the church has some Norman pillars of great antiquity. There is a National school, and a chapel for the Independents.

MEDUSA, the inner channel to Harwich harbour, coast of Essex. It passes over the Naze flats, and has the Stone Banks and Ridge on one side, and the Ledge and Pye Sands on the other.

MEDWAY, a river known to the Romans as Madus or Vaga, rises near Felbridge Park, co. Surrey, but is called the Eden till after its junction with the Broad Mead at Starborough Castle, after which it continues its course in a north-easterly direction through West Kent, where it is swollen by several streams, as the Tun from Tunbridge Wells, which joins it at Penshurst, the Beult, which joins at Twyford, and the Len at Maidstone, shortly after which it becomes navigable, the tide rising 20 feet, and, before its union with the Thames at the Nore, forms the dockyards of Chatham and Sheerness.

MEDWIN, or METHVEN, a river rising in the par. of Dunsyre, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is formed by the union of two streams, called North and South Medwin, and flows 8 miles W. to the Clyde, near Libberton. A little below its source, a part is turned off by a mill-pond to the river Tarth, a branch of the Tweed.

MEECHING, a par. in the hund. of Holmstrow, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex. See NEWHAVEN, its modern name.

MEELAGH, a small lough, co. Roscommon, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Boyle.

MEELICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Killeely, in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Limerick. There is a police station and a branch of the Cratloe dispensary. Meelick House is the principal seat in the vicinity.

MEELICK, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles W.S.W. of Swineford, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 3½ broad. The soil is mostly good. The road from Moy to Spaddagh crosses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, united with Kilconduff. The church has fallen into ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilconduff. There are two hedge-schools. Newcastle is the chief seat of this locality. A round tower is seen here. Coal and building-stone occur.

MEELICK, a par. in the bar. of Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Eyrecourt, which is its post town. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. The surface lies low, and the soil is poor. The Shannon traces its boundary, in which are the islands named Cromwell's, Big Islands, and Friar's Island, all belonging to this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Clonfert, united with Dononaughta. There is a Roman Catholic convent chapel; also two police stations in the parish. Prospect is the chief seat. An abbey was founded here in 1474, the site of which was granted to Sir John King at the suppression, and from whom it came into the hands of Earl Clanricarde.

MEELMANE, a vil. in the par. of Lislee, in the bars. of Ibane and Barryroe, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Timoleague.

MEELNAGH, or MILLENAGH, a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the vil. of Oulart, which is its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and 2 at the widest. The soil varies in quality. The road from Wexford to Dublin traverses the interior. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, united with Ballyvaldin. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballyhuskard. There are three hedge-schools. Island House is the only residence of note. This parish was the scene of a battle between the North Cork militia and the insurgents in 1798.

MEER, or MEERTOWN, a tythg. in the par. of Forton, W. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 1 mile N.E. of Newport. It takes its name from Aqualate Meer, a sheet of water to the N. of Aqualate Park. The village, which consists of several houses, is built on an eminence near the border of Shropshire.

MEER. See WADDINGTON, co. Lincoln.

MEERBECK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Settle, par. of Giggleswick, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Settle. It is situated on the road from Skipton to Settle, and commands an extensive view of Ribblesdale and the celebrated height of Pendle Hill.

MEERBROOK, a chplry. in the par. of Leek, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 3 miles N. of Leek, and 24 N. by E. of Stafford. It is situated near the river Churnet and Caldon canal. The valley is strewn with fragments of the Leek rocks, stupendous over-hanging masses, about 2 miles in length. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Leek. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is a small edifice with a square tower. There is a school, endowed by John Stoddard in 1673 with property producing £15 per annum.

MEESDEN, a par. in the hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts, 6 miles E. of Buntingford, its post town, 4 S.E. of Barkway, and 10 N.W. of Bishop-Stortford railway station. There are several residences. The land is partly in common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £178. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £229. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small structure, with a bell-turret. It contains a pavement of great antiquity, and a monument to R. Young, bearing date 1626. The register dates from 1737. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a Church school, supported by voluntary contributions.

MEESON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolas-Magna, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Newport. It is situated on the river Mees, which rises near Woodcotes, flowing N.W. and W. to the Tern at Great Bolas.

MEETH, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 3 miles N. by E. of Hatherleigh, its post town, and 10 E. of Eggesford railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Torridge, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is dunland upon a subsoil of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £221 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £237. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments, among which is one to Dr. Lempriere, the author of the "Classical Dictionary." The parochial charities produce about £5 5*s*. per annum, of which 10*s*. goes to the rector for preaching a sermon. There is a school for both sexes, supported by the rector. Lord Morley and R. Preston are the joint lords of the manor.

MEFENYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhystyd, co. Cardigan, 8 miles N.E. of Aberaeron.

MEGGET, a par. in the co. Peebles, Scotland, 11 miles S.W. of Peebles. It is situated on Megget Water, within the southern border of the county, and near the head of the Elbick and Yarrow. The parish is intersected by the above-named stream, which takes its rise under Cairn-law, and flows 6 miles E. into St. Mary's Loch. It extends 6 miles in length by the same in breadth, and is a bleak and hilly district, abounding in sheep-walks. This parish, prior to its conjunction with Lyne, was called Rodonno.

MEGGET, a mountain stream of the par. of Westerkirk, Eskdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It flows 7 miles S. to Stannis Water, with which it unites, and then flowing half a mile farther, falls into the Esk in the vicinity of Waulkmill. It abounds in trout.

MEGINCH CASTLE, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Perth. It is situated on the river Tay.

MEGSTONE, a rock near Fern Island, coast of Northumberland.

MEIFOD, or MYFOD, a par. in the hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery. It is situated on the river Vyrnwy, and includes Peniarth, Teirtref, and nine other tnshps. Meifod is thought by some to be the Roman station Mediolanum, although there are but slight proofs to support this conjecture. There are several mineral springs in the neighbourhood, and traces of ancient barrows. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £588, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Tysilio, formerly belonged to Ystrad Marchel Abbey. The interior contains some ancient tombs, and was the burial-place of the princes Powys. There is a district church at Pont-Robert, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £65. Fairs are held on the first Friday in February, last Tuesday in April, first Tuesday in August, and 21st September.

MEIGH, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Killery, in the bar. of Upper Orior, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.W. of Newry. It is 6 miles long by 4 broad, and was incorporated with Killery until 1830. The surface includes a large proportion of bog and mountain. Slieve Gullion rises to the height of 1,893 feet in the W. The roads from Newry to Forkhill and from Camlough to Dundalk pass through the parish. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Armagh. The church was erected at the expense of the late Board of First Fruits in 1831. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Forkhill. There are five daily schools. Killery and Hawthorn are the principal residences Here is a dispensary within the Newry Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held in the village. Abbey ruins are in the neighbourhood.

MEIGLE, a par. in the district of Perth-Eastern, co. Perth, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and is bounded by the co. of Forfar, and by the pars. of Cupar-Angus and Alyth. It is about 5½ miles in length, with a breadth varying from 1 mile to 2½ miles. The surface is moderately even, with a few gentle eminences. The soil is principally of a rich dark-coloured loam, and the land in an excellent state of cultivation. The village, which lies 5 miles N.E. of Cupar-Angus and 1 mile N. of the junction station on the Scottish Midland railway, is situated on Meigle Water, near the confluence of the rivers Isla and Dean. It formerly belonged to Cupar Abbey, and was a seat of the bishops of Dunkeld. There was a market on Wednesday, which is now discontinued. Red sandstone is quarried. This par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £237. The parish church was erected about 1780, and contains two aisles of the old church. In the churchyard are some ancient and curious sculptured stones, said to commemorate Vanoria, or Guenever, the faithless wife of King Arthur, but the inscriptions are so defaced that they are not legible. There are also a Free church, an Episcopalian chapel, and a parochial school. There are several residences in the parish, among which may be mentioned Belmont Castle, the seat of Lord Wharncliffe, of modern construction, with a tower of more ancient date. In its grounds, which are extensive and well wooded, is a tumulus called "Belliduff," where, according to tradition, Macbeth fell in his fatal encounter with Macduff. At some distance from this spot is a huge block of granite 20 tons in weight, which bears the name of Macbeth's Stone. Annual fairs for cattle and horses are held on the last Wednesday in June and October.

MEIGLE HILL, in the par. of Galashiels, co. Selkirk, Scotland. It is situated near the border of Roxburghshire, and is 1,480 feet in height.

MEIKLEBEN, one of the Lennox hills, co. Stirling, Scotland. It is situated close to the Campsie and Kilsyth ranges, of which it is a spur. It rises to a height of 1,500 feet above the level of the sea, and serves as a landmark from the Frith of Forth.

MEIKLE-FARNESS, a decayed vil. in the par. and co. of Cromarty, Scotland.

MEIKLE FERRY, crosses Dornoch Frith, on the borders of Ross and Sutherland, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Tain. It is a station on the Inverness and Perth and Inverness and Aberdeen junction railway.

MEIKLEHOLMSIDE BURN, a small stream of co. Dumfries, Scotland, traversing the south-western boundary of Moffat parish to the river Annan.

MEIKLE LOCH, a lake in the par. of Urquhart, co. Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Loch Ness. It extends about 1 mile in length, by half a mile in breadth. It is situated in a well-wooded spot.

MEIKLEOUR, a vil. in the par. of Caputh, co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Cupar-Angus. It is situated near Dunkeld. Numerous cattle markets are held here during the year, also annual fairs on the fourth Fridays in June and October, the 2nd July, and the third Friday in August.

MEIKLE-ROE, one of the Shetland islands, coast of Scotland. It is in the par. of Delting, and is about 2½ miles in circumference. It is situated S.E. of St. Magnus Bay.

MEIKLEWARTHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Rayne, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Old Meldrum. An annual cattle market is held here about Whitsuntide.

MEIKLEWOOD, co. Stirling, Scotland, at Gargunnock. It forms part of an extensively wooded forest, and has a heronry.

MEIN WATER, a small river of the district of Annandale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It rises above Middlebie, and flows 6 miles S.W. to the river Annan, near Hoddam.

MELAAN, an islet in Kenmare Bay, co. Kerry, Ireland, 1 mile W. by S. of Lamb-Head. Its cliffs are extremely rugged, and are a favourite haunt of the Pooka, or Irish Puck.

MELAI, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfairtalhaiarn, co. Denbigh, 7 miles S.W. of Abergele.

MELAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Aspatria, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 8 miles N.W. of Cockermouth. It is joined with Hayton.

MELBECKS, a tnshp. in the par. of Grinton, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Muker, and 14 W. by S. of Richmond, its post town. It is situated on the river Swale, and contains Gunnerside and ten other hmlts. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Grinton. The church is a modern structure.

MELBOURNE, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 8 miles S.E. of Derby, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. It is situated near the rivers Derwent and Trent, and comprises the tnshp. of King's-Newtown. The village is a polling-place for the county elections. It belonged to the crown at Domesday Survey, and came to the Beauchamps and Lancasters, who had a castle, in which John, Duke of Bourbon, who had been made prisoner at the battle of Agincourt, was imprisoned in 1415. The castle was dismantled in 1460 by order of Queen Margaret, but was subsequently restored, and traces of it are still visible. The savings-bank and mechanics' institution are held in a building erected in 1854. The manufacture of lace gloves is carried on, and building-stone is extensively quarried, and also a fine kind of stone used for sharpening scythes. The surface is hilly, and partly in common. The soil is generally a rich loam, alternated with clay. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1787. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £179, in the patron. of the bishop of the diocese. The church, which is dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church is remarkable for the circular arches and zigzag ornaments peculiar to the Norman style of architecture. It contains an old pillared font, and ancient marble monuments of the Hardinge family. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum, of which £20 goes to Lady Hastings' school, also an additional annuity of £10 by Viscountess Palmerston. There are places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, Methodists, General Baptists, and Swedenborgians. Melbourne Hall, formerly the episcopal palace of the bishops of Carlisle, was the residence of the late Lord Melbourne, and King's-Newtown Hall was the seat of the Hardinges, ancestors of Lord Hardinge. The Marquis of Hastings is lord of the manor. The family of Lamb take from this place the title of viscount. Saturday is market day.

MELBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Armingford, co. Cambridge, 3 miles N.E. of Royston, and 10½ from Cambridge. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of various quality. The manufacture of straw-plait is carried on. An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1839. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £860, and the vicarial for £220. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £250, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to All Saints, an ancient structure built by Henry VII., contains several monuments to the Birch family. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £165, of which £109 goes to Trigg's school, and £7 to Ayloffe's school. There is a school for both sexes, on the Lancasterian system, also an infant school. The Independents and Baptists have places of worship. Near the churchyard is an elm-tree of remarkable antiquity. John Hitch, Esq., and the Dean and Chapter of Ely, are lords of the manor.

MELBOURNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton, Holme Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Pocklington. It is a large tract of land, part common, lying between a branch of the river Derwent and the canal.

MELBURY-ABBAS, a par. in the hund. of Sixpenny Handley, West Shaston div. of the co. Dorset, 2½ miles S.E. of Shaftesbury, its post town, and 10 N. of Blandford. The parish, which is small, is wholly agricultural. Limestone is quarried and burnt. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £263. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is a stone structure with a square turreted tower containing five bells. It was rebuilt by Sir R. P. Glyn in 1851, who also built the National school for both sexes near the church. The register dates from 1716. Sir R. P. Glyn is lord of the manor. Dr. Walter Blandford, successively Bishop of Oxford and Worcester, was born here.

MELBURY-BUBB, a par. in the hund. of Yetminster, co. Dorset, 2 miles N.E. of Evershot, 6 miles N.W. of Cerne, its nearest money-order office, and 13 N.W. of Dorchester. It is situated under Bubb-Down, and contains the chplry. of Woolcombe and the hmlts. of Melbury-Osmond and Melbury-Sampford. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture. On an eminence called Bubb-Down was formerly a beacon. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £181. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £222. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower on the S. side, which remains in its original form, though the church itself was rebuilt in 1854. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at Woolcombe.

MELBURY-OSMOND, a par. in the hund. of Yetminster, Sherbourne div. of co. Dorset, 13 miles N.W. of Dorchester, its post town, and 6 S. of Yeovil. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £177. In the grounds of the rectory, the greater part of which was built in 1641, is a remarkable yew-tree. The fossil called the tortoise stone is found in considerable abundance. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Melbury-Sampford, in the dioc. of Sarum, joint val. £268. The church, dedicated to St. Osmond, is an ancient structure, rebuilt in 1745 of freestone, with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school. The Earl of Ilchester is lord of the manor.

MELBURY-SAMPFORD, a par. in the hund. of Tollerford, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 12½ miles N. of Dorchester, its post town, and 7 S. of Yeovil. The village is inconsiderable, and wholly agricultural. It derives the affix to its name from a former lord of the manor. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £57. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Melbury-Osmond, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is a cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower rising from the centre. It has some stained windows of ancient date, enriched with delicate tracery and effigies of the Brownings and Strangeways of Melbury House, now the seat of the Earl of Ilchester, who is lord of the manor. It is situated in an extensive park, in which is an oak 33 feet in circumference. It commands a view of the Mendip and Quantock hills, and was rebuilt in the 17th century.

MELBY, a post station in the par. of Lerwick, Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland, 20 miles N.W. of Lerwick.

MELCHBOURN, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, co. Bedford, 6 miles S.E. of Higham-Ferrers, its post town, and the same distance S.W. from Kimbolton. It is a small village, entirely agricultural. It was formerly a market town under a charter granted in 1264 to the Knights Hospitallers, who had a preceptory here, which Queen Elizabeth gave to the Russells. The soil is chiefly a stiff clay. The impropriation belongs to Lord St. John. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains two monuments to the Beauchamp family, also a brass to R. Paveley and wife, bearing date 1377. There is a school at Risley for the education of the children of this parish, which is supported by Lord St. John. Melchbourn Park, the residence of Lord St. John, is situated in a wooded park, in which are game preserves and fish-ponds. Leland, the historian and antiquary, was a native of this place. Lord St. John is lord of the manor.

MELCHET-PARK, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Alderbury, co. Wilts, 9 miles S.E. of Salisbury. It has a Hindoo temple to the memory of Warren Hastings, erected by Daniell in 1800.

MELCOMBE-HORSEY WITH MELCOMBE-BINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Whiteway, Cerne subdivision of co. Dorset, 9 miles N.E. of Dorchester, its post town, and the same distance S.W. of Blandford Forum. The par. contains the hmlts. of Hartsfoot Lane and Nettlecombe Camp, the latter occupying a square space of 20 acres. Melcombe Bingham, the family seat of the Binghams, came to that family through the Turbervilles. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £278 6*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £342. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small edifice with a low tower. There is a free school supported by Lord Rivers, who is lord of the manor. There are several old mansions, now converted into farmhouses.

MELCOMBE-REGIS, a par. in the borough of Weymouth, co. Dorset. See WEYMOUTH.

MELDON, a par. in the W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles W. of Morpeth, its post town. It is a station on the Wansbeck railway. The parish, which is small, is situated on the river Wansbeck. It has an alluvial soil upon a subsoil of clay. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £322, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a stone structure. There is a school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school is held at the church. Meldon Park is the seat of John Cookson, Esq., who is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MELDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Okehampton, co. Devon, near Okehampton.

MELDRETH, a par. in the hund. of Armingford, co. Cambridge, 4 miles N.E. of Royston, its post town, and 9½ S. of Cambridge. It is a station on the Cambridge and Hitchin railway. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Cam, and is entirely agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Enclosure in 1813. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £224, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has an embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. Andrew Marvell, father of the poet and statesman, was born in this parish. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans.

MELDRUM, or METHELINE, a par. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It comprises the post town of Old Meldrum, and is bounded by the pars. of Fyvie, Tarves, Bourtie, and Daviot. It extends about 6 miles in length, with an average breadth of from 2 to 4 miles. The surface is hilly, the chief part being arable, and the remainder in pasture. On the lofty hill of Bethelny, a variety of rock crystal is found; and at Bethelny Farm are traces of a Roman encampment. In 1856, a branch railway was opened from Old Meldrum to Inverury. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch, and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £224. The parish church was erected in 1684, enlarged in 1767, and restored and re-seated in 1810. Besides the parish church, are a Free church, Presbyterian church, and an Episcopalian chapel, erected in 1813. There are parochial and other schools. The town of Old Meldrum is situated on the road from Aberdeen to Banff, distant 14 miles N.N.W. from the former, and 27 from the latter, and 5 N.E. of Inverury. It was constituted a burgh of barony in 1672, under the jurisdiction of two bailies, &c.; but these offices are now void. The streets are of irregular form, though some of the houses are well built. The townhall has a spire. There are also a mechanics' institute, reading-room, and horticultural society. The principal manufactures are cotton spinning, an extensive distillery, brewery, and corn-mills. Meldrum House is an ancient mansion. Market day is Saturday, the market being held every fortnight for the sale of cattle and grain during the winter and spring months. Fairs are held in May and November.

MELFORD LOCH, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is a small sea-loch, the name of which signifies "the Lake of the High Eminences," from the elevation of the land on either shore. It enters between Degnish and Ashnish Points, opposite Luing Island, and at its entrance is about 1¾ mile in breadth, extending 4 miles N.E. along the southern boundary of Nether-Lorn.

MELFORD-LONG, a par., and formerly a market town, in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Sudbury, to which is a branch line from the Great Eastern railway, and 22 W. of Ipswich. The village, which is situated on a branch of the river Stour, extends for near a mile in length, from which circumstance it is called Long Melford. Silk weaving was formerly carried on. Petty sessions are held every fortnight, and a court baron annually by the lord of the manor. In the village is a literary institute, founded in 1849, with reading and lecture rooms. On the E. side of Melford Green is Melford Hall, an old Elizabethan mansion, with four small round towers in the front, situated in a park on the banks of the rivulet, and at present the residence of Lord Alfred Paget. In the neighbourhood are several other mansions, as Kentwell Hall, a little N. of the village, and Melford Place, the ancient seat of the Martyn family, at the S. end of the village, with pleasure-grounds. On Cranmer Green in this parish is a petrifying spring. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £830. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £839. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a Gothic structure, about 180 feet long, with a small square tower of more modern erection, containing a peal of eight bells. It contains several ancient brasses, and monuments of the Martyn, Parker, and Cordell families, especially one of Sir William Cordell, Speaker of the House of Commons in the reign of Philip and Mary. The register commences in 1559. Near the church stands the hospital, a plain brick building, enclosed with a wall. It was founded and endowed in 1573 by Sir W. Cordell for a warden, twelve brethren, and two poor women, being old and decayed housekeepers of Melford. The Independents and Methodists have each a place of worship. There are National and Sunday schools. An annual fair of three days is held in Whitsun-week, Tuesday and Wednesday for pleasure, and Thursday for cattle.

MELGAM, or MELGUM WATER, rises in the par. of Lentrathen, co. Forfar, Scotland, and runs S. to the river Isla.

MELGUND CASTLE, near the par. of Aberlemno, co. Forfar, Scotland. It formerly belonged to the Kynynmounds, and gives title of viscount to the Earl of Minto.

MELIDEN, a par. in the hund. of Prestatyn, co. Flint, 4 miles N.E. of St. Asaph, its post town. It is situated on the coast, and includes Nant, a seat of the Conways. At Prestatyn was formerly a castle. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £206, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church is dedicated to St. Melided. There is a district church at Prestatyn, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £233. The charities produce about £75 per annum for four poor clergymen, bequeathed by Dr. Bouchery in 1783.

MELIN-ABBEY, a seat in the par. of Llanvihangel-Llantarnam, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N. of Newport. It is situated on the river Afon Llwyd, a branch of the river Usk, and was partly built out of the remains of a Cistercian abbey.

MELIN-CRYTHAU, a hmlt. in the par. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile E. of Neath. It is situated on the Swansea canal and bay, near the mouth of the Neath river, and had extensive copper and coal works, belonging to the Mackworks of Gnoll.

MELIN-CURT, a fall of the river Cleddau, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N.E. of Neath.

MELINDUR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadarn-Fawr, hund. of Geneur-Glynn, co. Cardigan, near Aberystwith. It is situated in the vale of Rheidol. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the lead mines.

MELINE, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 6 miles S.W. of Cardigan, its post town. It is situated near Precelly Mountain. There is a camp at Pennybenglog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £140. The church is a small ancient structure. There are National and other schools.

MELINIOG-FACH and MELINIOG-FAWR, tnshps. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, co. Montgomery, near Llanfyllin.

MELKINTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lowther, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 1½ mile S.E. of Clifton railway station, and 2 miles E. of Lowther Castle. It is situated on the banks of the Leathe rivulet. There is a free school, endowed with an annuity of £14, for children under ten years, whom it prepares for the higher school at Hackthorpe. The land is fertile, and the soil loam and clay, upon a subsoil of clay and freestone.

MELKRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Haltwhistle, W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles E. of Haltwhistle railway station on the Newcastle and Carlisle line. Whitchester Roman camp is in this township. Sir Edward Blackett, Bart., is lord of the manor.

MELKSHAM, a hund. in co. Wilts, contains the pars. of Earl-Stoke, Hilperton, Melksham, Poulshot, Trowbridge, Whaddon, and part of Keevil, comprising an area of 18,870 acres.

MELKSHAM, a par., post and market town, in the above hund., co. Wilts, 5 miles S.E. of Corsham, 6 N.E. of Bradford, and 28 N.W. of Salisbury. It is a station on the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth railway. It is situated on the river Avon, which is crossed by a bridge of four arches, and on the E. is the Wilts and Berks canal, which is in confluence with the Kennet and Avon canal, about 1½ mile S. The par., which is of large extent, contains the tythgs. of Melksham Town, Shaw, Beanacre, Blackmore, Cannonhold, Seend, and Woodrow. Melksham was formerly held by King Harold, and was a place of some importance in the reign of King John, but has since decayed. The land is chiefly pasture and meadow, with a small proportion of arable and waste. The soil is clay, alternated with gravel. Two mineral springs, one saline, and the other chalybeate, were discovered in the last century; and in 1816 a new saline spa was obtained at a depth of 351½ feet. Subsequently a bath and pump room was erected, with a crescent and promenade, at considerable expense, with the expectation of great advantages to Melksham; but in consequence of the lack of patronage, it proved a failure. The town, which chiefly consists of one long street, well paved and lighted with gas, contains many good houses, but of irregular formation. It is a petty sessions and polling town for North Wilts. The sessions are held by the justices of peace for Melksham division, at the townhall, on the last Tuesday in every month, and every fourth week a county court for the recovery of small debts. The townhall and the cheese market were erected by a company in 1847, at an outlay of £3,350. They are of white freestone, and improve the appearance of the town. There are an extensive corn-mill, manufactories of broad cloth, hair cloth, sacking, &c. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,278, and the vicarial for £1,214. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Seend and Earl Stoke annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £1,215, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a large cruciform structure with an embattled tower crowned with pinnacles. The church has two side chapels, and tombs of the Awdreys, Seends, &c. It was thoroughly restored and enlarged in 1846, at an expense of £2,000. There is also a district church at Shaw and Whitley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There are National, British, and infant schools. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Society of Friends, have each a place of worship. The union of Melksham comprises six parishes, and the poorhouse, a stone building, is situated at Semmington, about 2 miles distant from the town. Walter Long, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor. Market day is Monday, for butter, &c., the first Monday in the month for cheese, and every other Monday for cattle, horses, &c. An annual cattle fair is held in the market-place on the 27th July.

MELLENDEAN BURN, a rivulet forming the boundary between the pars. of Kelso and Sprouston, co. Roxburgh, Scotland.

MELLENETT, or MELIENYDD, a deanery in the archdeac. of Brecon and dioc. of St. David's.

MELLERSTAIN, a vil. in the par. of Earlstoun, co. Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Earlstoun.

MELLIFONT, a locality on the border of the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Collon. It is situated on the river Mattock, and is the site of a celebrated abbey, the most ancient Cistercian establishment in Ireland. The pile now forms an extensive and interesting ruin. This abbey was founded in 1142 by Donough O'Carroll, Prince of Uriel, who was buried within its precincts. It became the seat for many generations of the Moore family. In 1157 a synod was held within the abbey. Among some of the points of attraction are St. Bernard's chapel, a Norman portal, fine carvings, baptistery, with Saxon windows, &c. The place is now the seat of the Marquis of Drogheda, from which he takes the title of baron. Mr. Armstrong of Raheny published an excellent description of these ruins.

MELLING, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 11 miles N.E. of Lancaster, its post town, and 2 from Hornby. The par., which is extensive, is situated between the rivers Lune and Wenning, and comprises the tnshps. of Arkholme-with-Cawood, Farleton, Hornby, Melling-with-Wrayton, Roeburndale, Wennington, and Wray-with-Botton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £135. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing six bells. There are several stained windows. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. at Arkholme, Hornby, and Wray, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £92 to £59. The register dates from 1627. The parochial charities produce about £73 per annum, of which £6 goes to Gillison's school.

MELLING, or MELLING-CUM-CUNSCOUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Halsall, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.E. of Liverpool, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Ormskirk. The township, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal. There are quarries of building stone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Rector of Halsall. The church was rebuilt in 1834, and is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum, of which £25 goes to the National school for both sexes. There is also a Roman Catholic school. The tithes were commuted in 1837 for £505.

MELLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Church-Stoke, co. Montgomery, 3 miles S.E. of Montgomery.

MELLION, ST., or MELLYN, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.S.E. of Callington. It is a small agricultural village. About two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder pasture, common, and woodland. The lower grounds are watered by the small river Lynner, a branch of the Tamar. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £225. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £216. The church is an ancient structure, with a lofty granite tower. It contains some rich Norman details and monuments to the Coryton family.

MELLIS, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 3 miles W. of Eye, its nearest money-order office. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The parish, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £345. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £232, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower of recent erection, in lieu of the old one, which fell down. There are several monuments to the Clarke family. The register dates from 1528. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

MELLISHES-BOTTOM, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Titchfield, Fareham div. of the co. Hants.

MELLONS, ST., a par. in the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 3¼ miles N.N.E. of Cardiff, and 7 S.W. of Newport. It is situated on the river Romney, and is a small agricultural village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with the cur. of Llanedarn, £160, in the patron. of the bishop and chapter, who, with the Dean and Chapter of Bristol, are the appropriators. The church is an ancient structure. The charities produce about £15 per annum.

MELLOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Blackburn, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Blackburn, its post town, and 7 E. of Preston. It is situated on the N. side of the new road from Blackburn to Preston. There is a Roman camp on the moor, also an extensive cotton-mill. A brisk trade is done in hand-loom weaving. There are some good stone quarries, and several mineral springs. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Blackburn. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern stone structure, with a lofty spired tower. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. Woodford Park is the principal residence. The representatives of the late J. F. Hindle, Esq., are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

MELLOR, a chplry. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 8 miles N.N.W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith. In the village are extensive cotton-mills, which afford employment to a considerable portion of the inhabitants. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £136. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is an ancient structure, with a rudely-carved pulpit and font. The Wesleyans and Independents have places of worship. The charities produce £27 per annum, of which £25 goes to the free school, founded in 1639.

MELLROSE HEAD, a promontory in Moray Frith, co. Banff, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Banff.

MELLS, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 3½ miles N.W. of Frome, its railway station and post town, and 14 from Bath. The village, which is large, is situated in a valley, and on a stream which takes its rise in Emborrow pond, on Mendip, and joins the river Frome. There are traces of several camps in the neighbourhood. The yield of coal is very productive on the western part of the parish, and is worked on a large scale by the Vobster Coal Company. Brick-making and lime-burning are carried on. There are manufactories for agricultural edge-tools of a first-class quality. The soil is various. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £630. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with an embattled tower, surmounted by four crocketed pinnacles, and containing eight bells, with a set of chimes.

The church is adorned with numerous painted windows on various Scripture subjects. There is a district church at Vobster, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of Leigh-upon-Mendip annexed, val. £60. The register dates from Queen Elizabeth's time. The parochial charities produce about £70 per annum, which goes to the repair of the church. There are two Church schools for both sexes, and a Sunday-school, held at the boys' school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Mells Park is the principal residence, situated in a finely-wooded park. It is the seat of the ancient family of the Horners. The Rev. J. S. H. Horner is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MELLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Wenhaston, hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Halesworth. There was formerly a chapel dedicated to St. Margaret.

MELLTE, a river of co. Brecon, rising under the Brecknockshire Beacon. It flows by the Vale of Neath, and passing through the Porthyr Ogof cavern for 800 yards, again emerges from its subterraneous course, and after having formed several cataracts, joins the Hepste and Neath at Pont Neath Vaughan.

MELLWATER, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bowes, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Barnard Castle.

MELMERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wath, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 4½ miles N. of Ripon, and a quarter of a mile from the Melmerby Junction railway station. There is a chapel for Wesleyans.

MELMERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Coverham, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Leyburn, and 2½ from the parish church of Coverham.

MELMERBY, a par. in the Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 9 miles N.E. of Penrith, its railway station and post town. It is a small agricultural village situated on the Maiden Way, under Hartside Fell, which rises above the village 1,312 feet. The ascension of this hill is 1 foot in 20, and the surface is of a smooth nature, producing excellent pasture for sheep. About half the land is under cultivation, the remainder, about 2,000 acres, in fell and common. The soil is a sandy loam upon a subsoil of sand and gravel. There are two mineral springs, one sulphurous and the other chalybeate, and some quarries of freestone. A lead mine was formerly worked. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £172. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, a structure of red freestone with a tower, was thoroughly restored in 1849, and contains several ancient monumental stones. There is an endowed school with an annuity of £30, the produce of recently enclosed lands. Melmerby Hall is the principal residence, and is of great antiquity. This parish is subject to the helm-wind, which occasionally blows with great violence. The Rev. John Hall is lord of the manor and chief landowner. There are annual fairs for cattle and sheep held on the 22nd April and 28th September, both of which were established about 1850.

MELMORE POINT, a headland on the W. side of Mulroy Bay, co. Donegal, Ireland. It is crowned by a signal tower.

MELNESS, a district in the par. of Tongue, co. Sutherland, Scotland. It comprises a post-office station of its own name. There is a Free church.

MELPLASH, a tythg. in the par. of Netherbury, co. Dorset, 2 miles S.E. of Beaminster.

MELROSE, a par. in the district of Castletown Melrose, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 10 miles N.W. of Jedburgh, and 37 from Edinburgh. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Hawick railway. This parish is situated on the banks of the river Tweed, under the Eildon hills, in the extreme N. of Roxburghshire. It is bounded by the cos. of Berwick, Edinburgh, and Selkirk, and by the pars. of St. Boswells, Bowden, and Lindean. In ancient times it was called Fordel, but assumed its present appellation in 1136—46, when David I. founded here the famous abbey of Melrose for Cistercian monks from Rievaulx, in place of the Culdee house at Moel or Mull-rhos, originally founded on a "bare promontory" of the river Tweed by St. Columba in 635. It contains, besides the post and market town of its own name, the greater part of the post town of Galashiels, recently constituted the quoad sacra par. of Ladhope, the vils. of Blainslie, Darnick, Eildon, Gattonside, Newstead, and Newton, besides the promontory of Old Melrose, interesting only for its antiquarian associations. The history of the district is almost identical with that of the abbey until comparatively recent times. In A.D. 664 Eata, one of the twelve disciples who accompanied Aidan, the founder of the bishopric of Lisdisfarn, from Iona to Northumbria, became the apostle of the upper vale of the Tweed, and was chosen abbot or head of the Melrose establishment, which continued to flourish for at least two centuries, and was a famous nursery for learning and religious men, as Basil, the friend of the venerable Bede, St. Cuthbert, one of the most famous saints of Scotland, and others, who were all filled with zeal for propagating the Christian religion, particularly among their neighbours the pagan Saxons, till about the middle of the 9th century, when the Saxon power was broken by the ascendency of the Scots, and the abbey overthrown by Kenneth III. After it had remained for nearly two centuries in desolation, it was removed by David I. to New Melrose, about 2½ miles further W., and about a quarter of a mile S. of the Tweed. It was then replenished with Cistercian monks from Rievaulx in Yorkshire, and subsequently became the scene of several historical events, as the death of the first Stuart, Walter Fitzalan, "dapifer regis" in 1177; the meeting of the rebel barons of King John in 1285 to swear fealty to Alexander II., who lies buried below the high altar; the devastations of Edward II. of England, who burnt the abbey in 1322, but which was restored in 1326 by Robert Bruce, whose heart was buried here. It was twice subsequently partly ruined by the English in 1378 under the reign of Richard II., and again in 1545. On the dissolution of monasteries it was given by Queen Mary to James Earl of Bothwell, and then to the Ramseys and Hamiltons, from whom it came to the dukes of Buccleuch, the munificent proprietors of these ruins, who have preserved the venerable pile for the public admiration, which upon the whole is the most beautiful ruin in Scotland, affording more specimens of Gothic ornament than are anywhere else to be met with. The abbey, though inferior in proportions to many edifices of its kind, and only about half the dimensions of York Minster, is acknowledged to have been the most beautiful of all the ecclesiastical structures of Scotland, and scarcely surpassed by the edifices of any land. What remains is only the principal part of the church, with some traces of the cloisters, which once occupied a square 150 feet deep, surrounded with a spacious arcade, or piazza. The church is built in the form of St. John's cross, the dimensions being 258 feet in length, 137½ feet in breadth, with an hexagonal tower 84 feet high, and the circumference about 943 feet. On the S. side are a door and window each 24 feet by 18, and on the E. a mullioned window 24 feet by 15. It is also adorned with 68 canopied niches, clustered shafts, delicate carvings of plants and animals, buttresses, side chapels, &c. Near the high altar is a marble monument of St. Waldevus, or Walter, the second abbot, who was canonised. In other parts of the church lay many of the noble house of Douglas, the Lord of Liddisdale, who was styled "the flower of chivalry," and many other men of eminence and rank. This pile, though venerable and extremely beautiful in its mouldering grandeur, owes nearly all its modern fame to the graphic descriptions of it by Sir Walter Scott in the "Lay of the Last Minstrel," and in his tales of the "Monastery" and "The Abbot."—Immediately to the S.W. of the abbey ruins stands the prosperous town of Melrose, situated at the N. base of the Eildon hills, not more than three furlongs S. of the Tweed. It is intersected by the road from Edinburgh to Jedburgh and by the Edinburgh and Hawick railway. The town is antiquely picturesque, with its old houses, partly built out of the abbey ruins, and arranged in triangular form round a green, in the centre of which stands an old cross, kept up by a bequest called the "corse-rigg," or field, about a rood in extent. The cross is about 20 feet high, and is surmounted by an unicorn sustaining the arms of Scotland. From each of the corners of the central triangle streets lead off towards Galashiels, Gattonside, and Jedburgh. The first, situated at the western corner, is a street of modern houses, but the others are narrow and brief thoroughfares, chiefly occupied by artisans. The town has recently undergone much improvement in consequence of many wealthy families being attracted by its situation to take up their abode in the vicinity, which has caused the construction of many airy edifices, contrasting with the antique appearance of the original town. The principal public buildings are the churches described below, the gaol, a small modern structure, occupying the site of a curious ancient one, the railway station, a spacious building, the suspension bridge across the Tweed to the opposite village of Gattonside, and a short distance up the river the railway viaduct, and bridge of the Edinburgh and Jedburgh high road. —The manufactures are now inconsiderable, though so early as the year 1688 the weavers were incorporated by a "seal of cause" from the earls of Haddington, and for above a century and a half the town was famed for the manufacture of a fabric called Melrose land-linens, which were largely exported to London and foreign countries. But towards the end of the last century the manufacture rapidly declined, and cotton weaving and the woollen trade, which were successively introduced, have shared the same fate, being now almost extinct.—Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, Melrose was a burgh of regality under the Hamiltons of Haddington, but is now a free burgh of barony, with a magistracy elected by the burgessess.—The environs of the town are adorned by above 21 mansions and villas on the banks of the Tweed, including the classic demesne of Abbotsford [which see], and the modern mansion of Old Melrose, near the site of the Culdees' house, which came to the Ormestouns, and now belongs to the Locharts. The land in the vicinity of the town is very fertile, and is chiefly occupied by orchards and gardens; also on the S. bank of the river all the land is under cultivation, excepting on the Eildon hills and the patch of moorland at their western base. On the northern bank of the river the land is of a much wilder character, being chiefly upland and pastoral, with some fertile patches of arable along the banks of the numerous streams and on the lower slopes of the hills. The chief rivers are the Tweed, which appears to have changed its course from the S. side of the valley within the last two centuries, as shown by the village of Newstead, which stands on the confines of a meadow still called "the wheel," where was formerly a deep pool and perilous eddy, across which Claverhouse is said to have been ferried; the Bowden Burn, Cauldshields brook and loch, Galawater, Leader and Allen water, all which fall into the Tweed, and have been rendered famous by Sir Walter Scott, in his tale of the "Monastery," where the leading characteristics of the Glendearg are derived from the vale of Allenwater.—The par. is in the presb. of Selkirk and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £300. The parish church, built in 1810, is a plain edifice with a spire; it is situated on rising ground, called the Wier Hill, to the W. of the town. At Galashiels is another church belonging to the recently constituted quoad sacra par. of Ladhope; also Free churches at Melrose and Galashiels, United Presbyterian churches at Melrose and Newton, a Congregational chapel and an Episcopalian chapel at Melrose. There are parish schools, a Free Church school, an Episcopalian school, the Weirhill academy, three boarding schools for young ladies, and six village schools. Besides the ruins of the magnificent abbey above described are remains of a wall supposed to have formed part of the original Culdees' house at Old Melrose; also Roman camps at Gattonside and Chesterknowe, where coins of Vespasian, &c., have been found, and on the Eildon hills are traces of the ancient Watling Street, which went by Trimontium.

MELSA. See MEAUX, co. York.

MELSONBY, a par. in the wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 8 miles from Darlington, its post town, and 5 N. of Richmond. The village, which is small, is situated near the great road from Catterick Bridge to Pierse Bridge, and is chiefly agricultural. There are traces of a Benedictine nunnery founded in the reign of King Stephen, and said to have been destroyed prior to the Reformation. The soil is various, but in general fertile. The land is chiefly arable, with some meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £590. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £809, in the patron. of University College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James the Great, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing two bells. There was a porch added in 1850. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum, of which £25 goes to Cockin's school for ten poor boys. There is a girls' school, supported by the rector. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, also a day school. Messrs. Swan, Clough, & Co., of York, are the lords of the manor.

MELTHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Almondbury, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Huddersfield, its post town, and 3¼ N.W. of Holmfirth. The village is situated in a valley adjoining a mountainous moorland ridge called West Nab, and abounds with mineral wealth. A portion of the inhabitants is employed in the woollen and cotton trade. There is an extensive iron foundry. In this township are quarries of good flagstone, also coal. A great portion of the land is moory. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £260, in the patron. of the Vicar of Almondbury. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a stone structure with a square tower containing six bells. The tower was added in 1835, when the church was enlarged. There is a National school for both sexes, and day and Sunday schools for the Wesleyan Methodists, for whom there is a place of worship, and one for the Baptists. A fair is held on the first Saturday in April, and the first Saturday after the 11th October.

MELTHWAITE WITH SANTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Irton, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Ravenglass. It is situated near Wast Water.

MELTON, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile N.E. of Woodbridge, its post town. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Deben, and was formerly a quarter sessions town. There are extensive iron works and machine factories, also a brisk trade is done in corn and coals on the river Deben, which is navigable, and is crossed by Wilford Bridge. The gaol for the lib. of St. Ethelred was formerly in this parish, as also the workhouse for the hunds. of Loes and Wilford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £347, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Ely. The church is situated some distance from the village. It is dedicated to St. Andrew, and has a tripled canopied brass of a man and his two wives, bearing date 1430. The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum. The county lunatic asylum was formerly the house of industry for the Loes and Wilford hundreds. There is a National school for both sexes. The Dean and Chapter of Ely are the principal lords of the manor. An annual fair is held on the second Tuesday in September, principally for lambs, and on the Wednesday week after Michaelmas Day for cattle.

MELTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Welton, in the wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile from Ferriby railway station, and 4 miles S.E. of South Cave. Brough is its post town. It is situated near the river Humber and Selby railway. The soil consists of mould, chalk, and clay. There are brick and tile kilns. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Welton, in the dioc. of York. There is an infant school. Mrs. R. Whitaker is lady of the manor.

MELTONBY WITH YAPHAM, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Pocklington, Wilton-Beacon div.

of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Pocklington, its post town and railway station. The villages, which are small, and about 1 mile distant from each other, are wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and sand. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Pocklington, in the dioc. of York. The chapel is a small edifice with a bell-turret containing one bell.

MELTON-CONSTABLE, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.W. of Holt, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Fakenham. The river Thurne, which is navigable from Aylsham to Yarmouth, has its source in this parish. At the time of the Domesday Survey it was held by the bishops of Thetford, to whom it was granted by William the Conqueror. It afterwards passed to Roger-de-Lyons, whose descendants assumed the name of Mealton, and occasionally De-Constable, from the office which they held under the bishop. The surface, which is undulating, is well cultivated and richly wooded. The soil is generally a sandy loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £235. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect. of Little Burgh, joint val. £219. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a cruciform structure with a tower. There is a small house of industry for the poor of this and the Brinton parishes, which is entirely independent of any Poor-law Union. Melton Hall is the principal residence, and has been the seat of the Astleys for many centuries. It is a brick and stone mansion, having four fronts, and was erected in 1680 by Sir J. Astley, with Belle Vue tower in the grounds, which are extensive. The interior of the mansion contains a chapel, and a choice collection of pictures. Both the exterior and interior have been restored and improved at different periods. Lord Hastings is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MELTON, GREAT. See MELTON-MAGNA, co. Norfolk.

MELTON-HIGH, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Doncaster, its post town, and 2½ from Mexborough railway station. It is a small agricultural village, situated on an eminence near the river Don, affording varied views of the surrounding country. Nearly a third of the parish is woodland, the remainder arable and pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £97. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure with a tower containing a clock and three bells. The church has some stained windows, also monuments of the Wilson and Fountayne families. The register dates from 1538. The Independents have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. Melton Hall is the principal residence.

MELTON-MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 6 miles W. of Norwich, its post town, 4 N.E. of Wymondham, and 3 N. of the Hethersett railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Yare, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £748 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £652, in the patron. of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a small square tower containing three bells. The church of All Saints adjoining is in ruins, with a tower completely clothed in ivy. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. A commodious village school was erected in 1850 at the expense of Charles Lombe, Esq., by whom it is supported, with the Rev. Charles Eyres, M.A. The hall is the principal residence. It is a noble mansion, with an extensive lawn.

MELTON MOWBRAY, a par. and market town in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 15 miles N.E. of Leicester, 12 N.W. of Oakham, in Rutlandshire, with which it is connected by a canal, and 105 miles N.W. of London by road, or 114¼ by the Great Northern railway, and 118 by the Midland railway, on the Syston and Peterborough section of which it is a chief station. It is situated in a fertile valley near the junction of the rivers Eye and Wreak, the former of which was made navigable in 1800 from this point to the Soar navigation near Syston, and is crossed by three bridges. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Medeltune, and was given by William the Conqueror, with 26 lordships, to Goisfrid de Wircè, from whom it came through the Albinis and Mowbrays to the Hudson and Lamb families. In the reign of Edward III. it sent members to the parliament held in the 11th year of that king's reign, but never subsequently. In the civil war of Charles I. the parliamentarians under Colonel Rossiter were defeated here by Sir M. Langdale.—Besides the town of Melton Mowbray, the par. includes the small vil. of Freeby, and the chplries. and tnshps. of Burton Lazars, Freeby, Sysonby, and Welby. The town is well built, and the streets are paved and lighted with gas, the cost being defrayed out of the rental of the town estate, consisting of property worth £800 per annum, which is administered by twelve feoffees and two town wardens, annually chosen by the inhabitants. It contains several public buildings, including the new corn exchange, erected in 1855, with magistrates' rooms, savings-bank and reading-room; a police station, built in 1843; a literary institution, and museum; a mechanics' institution, established in 1845; Athenæum, with library attached; assembly rooms, two branch banks, and union workhouse. Stables to accommodate 500 horses have been provided for the convenience of sportsmen; and to the S. of the town is a railway station, with extensive warehouses adjoining. The principal attraction of Melton is the celebrated fox-hunt, to which it gives name. The town is thronged with visitors during the hunting season, which commences at the beginning of November, and closes with the Croxton Park races at the end of March.—The chief manufactures are bobbin-net, lace, and stocking-weaving. A considerable trade is also carried on in Stilton cheese and pork pies, for the latter of which this town is so celebrated that upwards of two tons are manufactured weekly and sent to London, Manchester, and Leeds.—Petty sessions are held every alternate Tuesday, and a county court monthly, in the town. It is a polling place for the northern division of the county, and the seat of a Poor-law Union, embracing fifty-four parishes and townships. At a short distance from the town is Egerton Lodge, the seat of the Earl of Wilton, surrounded by gardens.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. with the curs. of Burton Lazars, Freeby, Sysonby, and Welby annexed, £580. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure, 164 feet by 117, with a tower rising from the intersection. It once was a cell to Lewes Abbey, and is still considered one of the finest churches in the county. At the western end is an entrance porch, and immediately above it a window, with tracery, divided into five lights. The church was considerably heightened in the reign of Elizabeth, and since 1850 has been entirely restored by G. G. Scott. It contains an organ, and tombs of a knight in the Digby aisle, and of a Hudson. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have places of worship, and the Roman Catholics a Gothic chapel, built by Pugin, with a rich E. window, representing St. John the Baptist holding a lamp, and two figures kneeling before him. The grammar school was closed in 1848, but there are at present two schools supported out of the town revenues, viz. the Church free school and British free school, open to children of all denominations; also an infant school, built in 1853 by subscription. There are besides a Roman Catholic free school and a Church Sunday-school. The parochial charities, including the revenues of the almshouses and school endowments, produce annually £365, exclusive of the town estate, worth about £800 per annum.—Among the distinguished natives of Melton were, John de Kirkby, Bishop of Ely and lord treasurer, who built Ely House; William de Melton, Archbishop of York and Lord Chancellor of England; and Orator Henley, a divine who acquired considerable notoriety in the last century.—Market day is Tuesday, when much business is done in corn, horses, cattle, and provisions. Fairs are held on the Monday and Tuesday following 17th January, on the 13th March, 4th May, Tuesday and Wednesday in Whitsun week, 21st August, and 7th September, for horses, cattle, and sheep; but that in Whitsun week is also a great pleasure fair.

MELTON PARVA, or LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 6 miles S.W. of Norwich, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated S. of the river Yare. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £110, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small thatched structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions. Charles Lombe, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MELTON-ROSS, a par in the S. div. of the hund. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles E. of Brigg, its post town, and 2 from the Barnetby-le-Wold station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The parish, which is small, is situated on the Wolds, and is chiefly agricultural. There are extensive lime-works. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, with the cur. of New Barnetby annexed, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is small, was erected in 1773, and has but one bell. Lord Yarborough is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MELTON, WEST, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Brampton Bierlow, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Rotherham.

MELVERLEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 10 miles from Oswestry, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Baschurch railway station. The village, which is small, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Vyrnwy and Severn, and is wholly agricultural. A tithe rent-charge of £176 17*s.* is paid to the Bishop of St. Asaph, who also has a glebe of six acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient wood and plaster structure, with a turret containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The Independents have a chapel at Melverley Green. Major Edwards is lord of the manor.

MELVICH, a vil. in the par. of Reay, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Strathy, and 24 S.W. of Thurso.

MELVILLE, an ancient par. in co. Edinburgh, Scotland, now joined to Lasswade.

MELVILLE CASTLE, a seat of the Earl of Leven, co. Fife, Scotland, near Monimail. It has an old tower, built by Cardinal Beaton in the middle of the 16th century, and carved with the arms of the Bethunes. It gives the titles of earl and baron to the Earl of Leven.

MELVILLE CASTLE, the seat of Viscount Melville, in the par. of Lasswade, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It is situated in a well-wooded park, and came to Viscount Melville, to whom it gives title, through the Rennies.

MELVILLEDEARG, a vil. in the par. of Gairloch, co. Ross, Scotland, 7 miles S.W. of Gairloch.

MELVIN, a lough between the cos. Fermanagh and Leitrim, Ireland. It extends about 8 miles in length by 2 broad, and discharges itself by a stream past Kinlough to the sea.

MELWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Owston, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.E. of Epworth.

MEMBURY, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Axminster, and 9 E. of Honiton. Chard is its post town. It is a small irregularly built village, on the river Yarty, and on the borders of Dorsetshire. The par. is divided into two tythgs. N. and S. In the neighbourhood is Castle Camp, two acres in extent, and situated on a hill. Stone is quarried here. The soil is various. The tithes have been commuted for rent-charges of £132 each, payable to the prebendaries of Grindall and Warthill, and the vicarial for £336. The living is a cur.* annexed to the vic.* of Axminster, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing five bells. In the interior of the church is a monument to Sir S. Calmady, who was mortally wounded at the siege of Ford House. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Goodmans is the principal residence. The Rev. Lord John Thynne, D.D., is lord of the manor.

MENAI, a hund. in co. Anglesea, contains the pars. of Llanedwin with Llanfair-yn-y-Cwmmwd, Llanerchymedd, Llanffinan, Llanfihangel-Esceifiog, Llangefin, Llangeinwen, Llangaffo, Llangwyllog, Llanidan, Llanddaniel-Fab, Newborough, Rhodogeidio, Rhoscolyn, and Tregayan. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Bangor.

MENAI STRAITS, THE, between Carnarvon and Anglesea, on the coast of Wales, were anciently called Maenige, or Mannic, by the Saxons. They extend in length about 17 miles, and vary in width from one-third of a mile to 4 miles, being subject to two tides, which run from 5 to 9 miles per hour, and have a rise of 20 feet. The shore is lined on either side by slatey rocks, and in the centre of the channel were two large masses of rock, known as the Cow and Calf Rocks, which much impeded the navigation; but these were removed in 1863. At the point called Trwyn-Du is a lighthouse, and there are several ferries, but these are of small importance since the construction of the Great Suspension Bridge in 1818 by Telford, at a cost of £211,791. This bridge, one of the wonders of engineering skill, is suspended from piers 553 feet apart, and 153 feet high, over which 16 chains pass, each 1,715 feet in length, with a fall between the piers of 44 feet, so that the roadway is 100 feet above the level of the sea below, and is 28 feet in width. The total weight of the bridge is 644 tons, and its length about one-third of a mile, including the four arches on one side, and the three on the other, which carry the road out to the suspending piers. To the S. of this bridge is another engineering work of still vaster design, the Britannia Bridge, begun by Robert Stephenson in 1846, to carry the Holyhead railway over the Straits at this point, 1,100 feet broad between the cliffs on either shore, but the total length of the bridge is 1,833 feet, including 230 feet from the land on the Carnarvon side to the first pier, and the same to the land on the Anglesea shore. The space between is spanned by two enormous tubular ways, or troughs, 1,513 feet long, made of wrought-iron plates, about three quarters of an inch in thickness, tightly riveted together, and weighing 5,000 tons each. The tubes, which lie side by side, are supported at the height of 104 feet above the sea at high water, by three vast piers built in the water, each pier measuring at the base 62 feet by 53 feet. It is said to have cost somewhat over £600,000, and to have absorbed, in its construction, 11,400 tons of iron, 14,000,000 cubic feet of Anglesea limestone, and 450,000 cubic feet of timber. The first train went through it on the 5th March, 1850, and ever since it has been in constant use.

MENDHAM, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, but partly also in the hund. of Earsham, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.E. of Harleston railway station, its post town. The par. of Needham, in Norfolk, was originally a hmlt. or chplry. to this par., but is now entirely distinct both for civil and ecclesiastical purposes. The village, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Waveney. At Bruninghurst Farm are the ruins of a Cluniac priory cell to Castle-Acre, founded by William de Huntingfield, in the reign of Stephen. It subsisted till the Dissolution, when the site was granted to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £440, and the vicarial for £50. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £122. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles, containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1841. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The par. consist of three manors, viz. Walsham Hall, Mendham King's Hall, and the Priory. Sir Shafto Adair, Bart., is lord of the last two, and W. S. Holmes, Esq., of the former.

MENDIP HILLS, a range of rugged heights in the northern div. of co. Somerset, between the rivers Axe and Yeo, and stretching from near Shepton Mallet to the coast. The hills, which consist chiefly of mountain limestone and Old Red sandstone, are broken with caverns and chasms, and were once covered with a dense wood. They are rich in lead, iron, calamine, manganese, red ochre, and other minerals. Professor Ansted has recently (1862) discovered, at St. Cuthbert's, in the Mendip Hills, about three miles from Wells, a deposit of lead-producing débris of old mines and lead washings of ancient miners, filling up the bed of a stream that flowed in former ages. This metallic slime, of exceeding richness, amounts, he says, to 600,000 tons, extends over 25 acres, to the depth of 30 feet, and is computed to be worth half a million of money for the lead which it contains.

MENDLESHAM, a par. and small town in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Haughley railway station. Stonham is its post town. It is situated near the East Union section of the Great Eastern railway, and is chiefly agricultural. The town, which consists mainly of two long streets, parallel with each other, was formerly a market town, but the market has long been discontinued. The land is productive, and the air salubrious. The road from London to Norwich, viâ Ipswich, passes through the eastern portion of the parish. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £540, and the vicarial for £580. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £550. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a noble structure, with a lofty square embattled tower containing five bells. The N. and S. porches are embellished with grotesque sculptures. The register dates from 1558. There is a brass of J. Knyvet, in armour, bearing date 1417. The church was given by William Rufus to Battle Abbey. There are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans. The parochial charities produce about £200 per annum, realised from land, besides other smaller charities. The charities formerly produced a more considerable sum, but, from some unexplained cause, have been reduced to the above. An ancient silver crown, weighing sixty ounces, was found here in the 17th century, and in 1758 a gold ring, with a runic inscription. Charles Tyrell, Esq., is lord of the manor. A pleasure fair is held on the 2nd October.

MENEAGE, a district in the western part of co. Cornwall, between the Lizard and Looe Pool.

MENEGWINS, a hmlt. in the par. of Gorran, co. Cornwall, 5 miles S.E. of Tregony.

MENHENIOT, or MENHYNNET, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 2½ miles S.E. of Liskeard, its post town. It is a station on the Cornwall and West Cornwall railway. The village is wholly agricultural. Menheniot formerly belonged to the Carminows, and had a Lepers' hospital, and a seat of Richard Earl of Cornwall, at Tenereck. The surface is hilly, but the soil is exceedingly fertile. The lower grounds are watered by two small rivers. Copper and tin are found, but not worked at present. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £804, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a spired tower. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, which goes to a school. There are National schools for both sexes, also an infant school. William of Wykeham was once vicar of this parish. Joseph Hambly, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on 23rd April, 11th June, and 28th July for cattle.

MENLOUGH, or MENLO, a vil. in the par. of Oranmore, in the bar. of Galway, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Galway. It is situated on the left side of the river Corrib. Menlough Castle is the seat of Sir Thomas Blake, M.P. Near the village a quarry of black marble is worked.

MENMUIR, a par. in the div. and co. of Forfar, Scotland. It contains the hmlt. of Tigerton, and is bounded by the pars. of Lethnot, Strickathrow, Brechin, Careston, and Fearn. It extends 6½ miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 4 miles. The southern portion of the parish is flat, and forms the vale of the Cruick water; while to the E. are the heights of White and Brown Caterthun, and to the N. spurs of the towering heights of the Binchinnin Grampians. The par. is traversed by the road from Kirriemuir to Fettercairn. The soil is rich and fertile, and the land in a high state of cultivation. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in weaving. This par. is in the presb. of Brechin, and synod of Angus and Mearns. At Bathall, in the neighbourhood, is a mineral spring, formerly of great note. The minister has a stipend of £158. The parish church, which is large, was erected on the site of St. Ardan's, in 1842. Besides the parish church there is a Free church, also parochial schools. Menmuir came from the Collaces to the Carnegies.

MENNYTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Westow, wap. of Buckrose, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of New Malton. It is situated on the Scarborough railway and the river Derwent.

MENSTHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Elmsall, West Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of Doncaster.

MENSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Otley, upper div. of the wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Otley. The village, which is small, is situated under Rumbold's Moor. It was called in ancient documents Mensington. Divine service is frequently performed in a room in the village. There is also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. S. H. Fawkes, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The population is partly employed in wool-combing.

MENSTRY, or MENSTRIE, a vil. in the par. of Togie, co. Clackmannan, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Clackmannan, and 2 from Alva. It is a station on the Alva section of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. It is situated at the base of the Ochil hills, on the road from Stirling to Dollar. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in blanket and woollen weaving.

MENTEITH. See MONTEITH, co. Perth.

MENTHORPE-WITH-BOWTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hemingbrough, wap. of Ouse and Derwent, East Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Selby. At Menthorpe Gate is a station on the Selby and Market Weighton branch of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated on the river Derwent.

MENTMORE, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 3½ miles S. of Leighton Buzzard, its post town. It is situated near the North-Western railway and Grand Junction canal, and contains the hmlt. of Ledburn. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. About a third of the land is arable, the remainder meadow and pasture. The surface is hilly, and the soil clayey. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is an annuity of £10 to the poor, the bequest of Mr. Pratt.

MENUPTON, or MANUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Clun, co. Salop, 5 miles S. of Bishop's Castle.

MENWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Hampsthwaite, lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 11 miles N.W. of Knaresborough. There is a bequest for educational purposes now producing £36 per annum.

MENZIE-HILL, in the par. of Eaglesham, co. Renfrew, Scotland. There is a mineral spring of excellent quality.

MENZIES, or MEENGIS, CASTLE, in the par. of Weem, co. Perth, Scotland. It is an ancient edifice situated in a well-wooded spot.

MENZION-BURN, a rivulet in the par. of Tweedsmuir, co. Peebles, Scotland. It takes a north-easterly course, and falls into the river Tweed.

MEOLE-BRACE, a par. in the borough of Shrewsbury, and hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 1½ mile S. of Shrewsbury, its post town. The par. includes the tnshps. of Hokoe-Gate, Nobold, Newton, and Edgebold. Sharpstone hills, Bomere-Pool, and Lyth Hill, are spots a mile distant from the village, and noted for their scenery. The stream which flows through the village abounds in trout. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £425. The church is a small modern structure with a tower containing one bell. The charities consist of almshouses for nine poor widows. The Kingsland lunatic asylum and the Shrewsbury union poorhouse are in this parish. John Bather, Esq., is lord of the manor. Meole Hall is the principal residence, and in the grounds of which are traces of Meole Castle.

MEOLSE, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of West Kirby, hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 8 miles N.W. of Birkenhead railway station. It is situated between the rivers Dee and Mersey.

MEOLSE, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of West Kirby, hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 9 miles W. of Birkenhead, and 10 N.N.W. of Great Neston. It is a small bathing-place near Hoylake. Most of the resident population are employed in the fishery along the coast. The Duke of Schomberg encamped with his army in 1690 at a place called the Mells.

MEOLS, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Southport, its post town, and 7½ N.W. of Ormskirk. The par., which is very considerable, is divided into two tnshps., North Meols and Birkdale. It is bounded on the N.W. by the Irish Sea, near the mouth of the river Ribble. It contains the chplries. of Crossens and Southport—the latter a modern bathing-place—besides 10 hmlts. The inhabitants are principally employed in handloom silk-weaving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £844. The parish church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a stone structure with a spired tower containing a clock and two bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments to the families of the Hesketh and Fleetwoods. In addition to the parish church are the following churches, viz. Christ Church, at Southport; Trinity;* St. James's, Birkdale;* and Crossens, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £678 to £200. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum, of which £18 go to the grammar school. There is a school for infants. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists, have each a chapel. North Meols Hall, formerly the seat of the Hesketh, is now converted into a farmhouse. Manor courts are held annually by Charles Scarisbrick, Esq., and the Rev. Charles Hesketh, who are the lords of the manor and principal landowners. An annual fair is held on the nearest Monday and Tuesday to the 20th August, for cattle, pigs, &c.

MEON, EAST, a hund. in the Petersfield div. of co. Hants, contains the pars. of Colemore, East Meon, Froxfield, Prior's Dean, Privett, and Steep, comprising 26,560 acres.

MEON, EAST, a par. chiefly in the lower half of the hund. of East Meon, but partly in the hund. of Meon-Stoke, co. Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Petersfield station, its post town. The parish is of large extent, comprising 11,380 acres. It contains the vils. of Meon-Stoke and West Meon. About 8,000 acres are arable, 700 meadow and pasture, 1,350 woodlands, 1,277 downs, and the remainder in common and waste. An Enclosure Act was passed in 1839 for taking in certain lands. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the curs. of Froxfield and Steep annexed, £903, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a cruciform structure with a Norman tower surmounted by a steeple containing six bells. It contains an ancient font, similar to that in Winchester Cathedral, sculptured with symbolical figures representing the expulsion of Adam and Eve from Paradise, and their subsequent instruction in the arts of husbandry and spinning. There is a National school. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor. Westbury House is the principal residence.

MEON-STOKE, UPPER AND LOWER, a hund. in the Droxford div. of co. Hants, contains the pars. of Brandean, Exton, West Meon, Meon-Stoke, Corhampton, Soberton, Warnford, and part of Upham, comprising an area of 23,640 acres.

MEON-STOKE, a par. in the above hund., Droxford div. of co. Hants, 5 miles N.E. of Bishops-Waltham, and 4 S.W. of Petersfield. Droxford is its post town. The par. includes the vil. of Newtown, and is nearly separated by a small rivulet, which flows through several villages, and eventually discharges itself into Southampton Water. The greater part of the land is arable, the remainder downs or common. The village, which was partially burnt in 1740, is neatly built. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £280. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Soberton annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £568, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells, originally six. There is an E. window, in which is the rose of William of Wykeham, by whom this part of the building is said to have been erected. There is also a district church at Newtown, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100. There is a National school. The wardens and fellows of Winchester College are lords of the manor. On the north-eastern boundary of the parish is a Roman camp called Old Winchester, where a Roman lamp was discovered in 1834, also several barrows containing Roman pottery and calcined bones.

MEON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Meon-Stoke, co. Hants, 7 miles N.E. of Bishop's Waltham. Droxford is its nearest money-order office. The village is considerable, and chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £729. The living is a rect.* with the cur.* of Privett annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £602, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a stone structure with an embattled tower. The windows are all of stained glass. The register dates from 1640. The Independents have a chapel. The National school for both sexes was erected in 1852. John Dunn, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MEOPHAM, a par. in the hund. of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles S. of Gravesend, its post town. It is a station on the branch line of the South-Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, but partly in common and woodland, with some hop-grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £435, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a spired tower containing five bells. The church was partly rebuilt by Archbishop Simon de Meopham, who died in 1333, and from whom the parish derives its name. It was completed in 1396 by Archbishop Courtenay, who founded four almshouses near it. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Baptists, with a vestry and schoolroom attached.

MEPAL, a par. in the hund. of South Witchford, co. Cambridge, 6 miles W. of Ely, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Chatteris railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the rivers Old and New Bedford, and is wholly agricultural. The land is principally in pasture and common. The tithes of Mepal have been commuted for a rent-charge of £270. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £280, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, in which are many relics of great antiquity. The register dates from 1790. The charities produce about £173, of which £160 is realised from poor's land, and £15 to a school. There are two dame-schools. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship.

MEPPERSHALL, or MEPSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Clifton, co. Bedford, 3 miles S. of Shefford, its post town, 6 S. by W. of Biggleswade, and 12 S.E. of Bedford. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The plaiting of straw is carried on to some extent. Here are the remains of an ancient chapel, with an enriched Norman doorway, now converted into a barn. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £500, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is a cruciform structure, with a tower. The charities consist of a share with Ampthill. The church has brasses of J. Mepertyshale in armour, bearing date 1440. There is a National school. The trustees of Mrs. Barbara Kane and Mrs. Pen Woodburn are lords of the manor.

MERCASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Muggington, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 6 miles N.W. of Derby. It had a church at Domesday survey. Many ancient coins have been found here.

MERCHISTOUN CASTLE, adjoins the hmlt. of Boroughmoor, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile S. of Edinburgh. It is a mansion of great antiquity, and has been modernised by Lord Napier, whose ancestor, the celebrated astronomer and inventor of logarithms, was born in it in 1550. A curling club meets here.

MERCHLYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Gyffin, co. Carnarvon, near Conway.

MERE, a hund. in co. Wilts, contains the pars. of Kingston-Deverill, West Knoyle, Mere, and parts of Maiden Bradley and Stourton, comprising an area of 17,290 acres.

MERE, a par., post and market town, in the above hund., co. Wilts, 4 miles from Gillingham railway station, and 21 W. by N. of Salisbury. The name of this place is derived from the Saxon word Mæra, signifying "bounds, or limits," and indicates its situation on the borders of Wilts, Dorset, and Somerset, which counties are here in conjunction with each other. The par., which is situated at the S.W. extremity of the Downs, contains the tythgs. of Chadderwick, Zeals, and Woodlands. It formerly had a castle, built by Richard Earl of Cornwall, in 1253, to which duchy the manor still belongs. The site is now called Castle Hill, but all traces of the fortress have vanished. From a chalk hill in the neighbourhood rises the Ashfield water, which turns several mills in its course, and eventually joins the river Stour. The town, situated on the road from Salisbury to Wincanton, is small, and the houses irregularly built. It is well lighted with gas, and contains a literary institute, reading-room, bank, penny bank, established in 1859, and an ancient building used as the market-house. There are manufactories for flax-spinning and bed-ticking, and a silk-throwing mill. The town anciently sent two members to parliament, but was disfranchised on the plea of poverty. Courts leet and baron are held in October for the Duchy of Cornwall, and by the Dean of Salisbury, at which constables and tythingmen are chosen for the town and hundred. The soil is chalk alternating with clay. To the N.W. of the town are vestiges of a Danish encampment, called "White-street camp," from a hill on which it is situated. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £330, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael the Archangel, is a spacious structure, in excellent preservation, with a square embattled tower, crowned with lofty pinnacles, containing six bells. On each side of the chancel is a sepulchral chapel, and in the belfry is a carved oak ceiling. The interior of the church has a brass to Sir T. Beddiscombe, bearing date 1390. Under a niche over the porch is the figure of a saint, which appears to be of greater antiquity than the church. There is also a district church at Zeal's Green, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £97. The parochial charities produce about £113 per annum. There are National and British schools for both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel; and there is a Roman Catholic chapel at Bonham House. A cemetery was opened in 1856. During its formation an earthen vessel was discovered, in which were found 400 Roman coins of ancient date. The Prince of Wales is lord of the manor. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on 17th May, and 10th October.

MERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Rostherne, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2½ miles N.W. of Nether Knutsford, and 9½ S.E. of Warrington. The township, which is small, is situated on the high road between Northwich and Altrincham, and is wholly agricultural. There are two schools for the education of fifty boys and the same number of girls, entirely supported by Mrs. Brooke. New Hall, the principal residence, is a red brick mansion, approached through a towered and arched gateway. In front of the mansion is a lake about 50 acres in extent, and from which the township derives its name. Thomas John Langford Brooke, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MERE, a hmlt. in the par. of Whitwood, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Wakefield.

MERE-HOSPITAL, an ext. par. place in the lib. and city of Lincoln, co. Lincoln.

MEREHOUSE, or MURHOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Baschurch, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

MERE-TOWN, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Mere, co. Wilts, 4 miles from Gillingham, and 21 W. of Salisbury.

MEREVALE, a par. partly in the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, and partly in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 1 mile W. of Atherstone, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the Coventry canal, near the river Anker. There are traces of a Cistercian priory founded by Robert de Ferrers in 1148. Coal mines are worked in this parish. The surface is hilly and the soil is strong clay. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £64. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient structure, and was formerly a chapel at the gate of the aforementioned priory. The interior of the church contains an old rood-loft, three stone coffins, and several monuments and brasses to the Stratford and Dugdale families. Merevale Hall, which has been recently rebuilt, is a stone building situated on lofty ground 400 feet above the sea-level. It is surrounded by a well-wooded park stocked with deer.

MEREWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Littlefield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 7 miles W. of Maidstone, its post town, and 2½ from Wateringbury railway station on the North Kent line. It is a small agricultural village situated on the high road from Tunbridge to Maidstone. The par. includes the hmlt. of Old Hay, and is bounded on the N. by the Hurst woods. Mereworth came from a crusader of the same name to the Fitzalans, Beauchamps, Nevilles, and Fanes. The land is partly in orchards and hop-grounds, and there are some tracts of grazing land. The surface is boldly undulating, and the soil a light-coloured mould resting on a substratum of Kentish ragstone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £822 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £634. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was rebuilt by John Earl of Westmoreland, in 1744. It has a spired tower containing six bells, and an E. window and monuments of the Fanes, with three canopied brasses of Sir John de Mereworth bearing date 1365. The register dates from 1661. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes erected at the expense of Viscount Falmouth, who resides at Mereworth Castle. The castle is situated in an extensive park with an avenue 3 miles in length. The interior of the castle has a gallery of choice pictures. The castle was built after Palladio's "Villa Capra" by Campbell, the editor of "Vitruvius Britannicus." The Viscountess Falmouth is lady of the manor.

MERFORD, a lordship in the par. of Gresford, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 3 miles N.E. of Wrexham. At Roft's Camp is a fine view.

MERIADOG, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asaph, hund. of Yale, co. Denbigh, 1 mile S. of St. Asaph. It is situated on the river Clwyd. In this township are many limestone caves and veins of barytes; some of the former are from 30 to 40 feet in height, and contain fossils, bones, &c.

MERIDEN, a par. in the Solihull div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 5½ miles from Coventry, its post town, and 2½ from the Hampton Junction of the North-Western and Derby railways. The parish, which is small, is situated in a valley on the old road from London to Holyhead, and near Meriden Cross, which formerly marked the centre of England. The village of Meriden of late years has greatly improved, and contains many neatly built residences. The land is fertile and in a state of good cultivation. On Meriden Hill is an extensive quarry of red sandstone, and there is also a quarry of white freestone for building. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1785. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £268. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower. The interior of the church contains a brass of Elizabeth Rotton. A parochial school has been erected by voluntary contributions, the site of which was presented by the Earl of Aylesford with a donation of £150. There is also a boarding school at Strawberry-bank House. The Society of Archers hold their meetings at Forest Hall, in which is the horn said to have been used by Robin Hood. Meriden Hall and Meriden House are the principal residences. A short distance from the village are the mansion and park of the Earl of Aylesford, who owns the chief part of the parish.

MERING, an ext. par. place in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 7 miles N.E. of Newark. It is situated on the river Trent, and adjoins the parish of Girton.

MERIONETHSHIRE, a maritime and the most mountainous co. of North Wales, bounded on the N. by Carnarvon and Denbigh, on the S. by Cardiganshire, on the E. by Montgomeryshire, and on the W. by the Irish Sea. An immense ravine separates Merionethshire from Carnarvon on the N., and the river Dovy separates it from Cardigan on the S. It is in the form of an irregular triangle, and covers an area of about 600 square miles, or 385,291 statute acres, of which about one half is common or waste, the remainder arable and pasture. It has an extreme length of about 43 miles, and a breadth of 35 miles. The coast line extends about 38 miles, and is chiefly sandy, having along it Traeth Mawr, where 700 acres have been reclaimed from the sea; Traeth Bach; Harlech Castle; Mochras Creek; the bathing village of Barmouth, at the mouth of the Mawddach, opposite Sarn Badrig reef; Towyn, at the mouth of the Disynwy, where is Sarn-y-Buch reef, and the favourite bathing place of Aberdovey, at the Dyfi's mouth. It is divided into five hunds., viz. Ardudwy, Edernion, Estimaner, Penllyn, and Talybont with Mowddu, which are again divided into 37 pars.—Merionethshire, or, as it was originally called, Meirionyddshire, is the only Welsh district which retains its ancient name with the "shire" added; this name was derived from Meirion, the son of Tibiawn, a British chieftain who rescued this part of the country from the Irish in the 5th century. The Romans called it Mervinia, and it was a seat of the Ordovices in Britannia Prima. It was made shire ground by Henry VIII., but was previously divided by Roderick Mawr between the kingdoms of Powys and Aberffraw. Until the reign of Henry II. Merionethshire is not connected with any historical events of importance, and the invasion of Corwen by that king was effectually stopped by Owain Gwynedd in 1165. Harlech Castle was the scene of Owain Glyndwr's rebellion; it was afterwards taken by the Lancastrians, and was for a long time subsequently the home of outlaws, until Queen Mary issued a commission which ultimately led to the restoration of order and the extirpation of the banditti. In the troubles of Charles I. the possession of Harlech Castle was fiercely contested.—The general appearance of the country, when contrasted with other counties in Wales, may almost be said to be bleak and dreary, but is nevertheless grand in the extreme from the lofty mountains, inaccessible crags, sea views, cataracts, and rivers which abound. The mountains of Arran-y-Gessil, Arran Penllyn, Cader Ferwyn or Berwyn, Moel Ferna, Diffwys, Tynyrallt, Rohallt, Carnedd-y-Filiast, Rhinog Fawr, Craig Dwrg, Moel Gwyn, and Cnich, exceed 2,000 feet in height; while the Cadr Idris reaches 2,914 feet, and Arran Mowddy, the highest in the county, is 2,955 feet above the level of the sea. The most picturesque of these mountains is the Cadr Idris; it is rather difficult of ascent. On its summit are two rocky points of equal height, and from it may be seen the Wrekin, in Shropshire. The sides are barren, but produce several rare species of plants, and are adorned with several small lakes. The principal rivers are the Dee, anciently called Deva, the Maw or Mawddach, and the Dovy or Dyfi. The Dee has its source in Merionethshire, whence, passing north-eastward through the Vale of Edernion, it passes by Corwen into Denbighshire, not far from Llangollen. The Maw, rising about the middle of the county, flows southward till it joins with the Avon, where it becomes tidal as well as navigable. The Dovy rises near Bala, then runs south-westerly, and falls into the Irish Sea at Aberdovey; this river is also navigable from Machynlleth. Besides these rivers are the Disynwy, which rises near Cadr Idris, and runs between the Maw and Dovy into the Irish Sea, the Dwyryd, Glaslyn, Glyn, Eden, and Cynfael. There are numerous lakes throughout the county, the largest being Bala or Llyn-Tegid. Talyllyn, Elider, Treweryn, Y-cwm-bychan, Bodlyn, Cwm Howel, Glyn, Arrenig, Y-cae, are the names of some of the smaller ones, which in all number more than fifty. There is excellent fishing, salmon being caught in all the principal rivers, and trout with other kinds of fish in the lakes. Grouse and partridges are the prevailing game.—The climate is cold, and the soil various, with some fertile spots in the valleys. The substratum is chiefly composed of the slate rocks of the Silurian series, which predominate in North Wales, with trap and greenstone in the higher peaks. Limestone is quarried in abundance, and the lime made from it is the principal manure of the county. Copper and lead mines are worked near Barmouth and Towyn at the mouth of the Disynwy. Peat, which is found in the valleys, is the chief fuel of the inhabitants. The people are quite primitive; they make their own clothes, and live in the simplest manner, porridge, butter-milk, and flummery being their chief diet. The population in 1851 was 38,843, which in 1861 had increased to 38,963. The inhabitants, who mostly speak only Welsh, are chiefly employed in agricultural pursuits. Wheat is not grown in sufficient quantities to supply the demands of the district, but oats are grown in large quantities, and flocks of sheep and herds of small black cattle are raised in abundance and sold to the English drovers. The genuine Welsh pony is still found here, though the breed is nearly extinct in other parts of Wales, and they with the goats find excellent pasturage on the hills. The cabins and farm buildings are generally very poor. The shipping interest of the county is considerable, the ports being Traethbach-Barmouth and Aberdovey. There is rather an extensive trade in timber, woollens, and flannels. Knit-stockings, coarse cloths, and kerseys are manufactured in various parts, particularly at Bala, Dolgelly, and Mallwydd.—The county returns one member to parliament; there are no parliamentary boroughs. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant, sheriff, and 24 magistrates, and is in the North Wales circuit, and the London military district. The assizes and sessions are held at Bala and Dolgelly. The county gaol is at Dolgelly, and there are also prisons at Bala and Corwen. Merionethshire is partly in the diocese of Bangor, and partly in that of St. Asaph, in the province of Canterbury. The county is divided into four poor-law unions, Bala, Corwen, Dolgelly, and Festiniog, and contains 48 parishes and townships.—The chief roads are from London by Shrewsbury to Corwen and Bangor, to Bala and Carnarvon, and to Dolgelly and Barmouth. There are five ancient market towns—Bala, Dolgelly, Corwen, Harlech, and Dinas-y-Mowddy; two others have not very long been established—Barmouth and Towyn. At Bala, Dolgelly, and Corwen, County Courts are held. The charities amount to nearly £900, and there are numerous Sunday and National schools, including 16 free schools. There is also a savings-bank, with some £30,000 from depositors. At Bala there are colleges for Independents and Calvinistic Methodists.—The county abounds with magnificent views, and there are many remains of the highest interest and of great antiquity. The principal ruins are Harlech Castle, Cymmer Abbey, near Dolgelly, and two or three smaller castellated buildings. The ruin of an ancient Welsh chieftain's house may be seen at Llys-Bradwen, and near Llanfihangel-y-Pennant are the remains of a castle said to have belonged to the last Llewellyn, Prince of North Wales, and which was taken from him just before the final conquest of Wales. There is a Roman road through the county, near which are several tumuli or barrows. Near Sarn-Helen are other monuments of antiquity, and not far from Trawsfynnydd is a grave, said to be that of Porus, marked by a stone with a Roman inscription. Sepulchral urns and Roman coins have been found in various parts of the county. Between Barmouth and Harlech is a stone fort and many other remains of British antiquity. There are several seats in the county, including those of Davies of Bronhaulog, Wynne of Peniarth, Thurston of Talgarth, Vaughan of Nannau and Hengwrt, Mostyn of Cors-y-Gedol, and numerous others.

MERKLAND LOCH, a lake in co. Sutherland, Scotland, 8 miles N.E. of Assynt. It is situated on the S.E. border of Eddrachillis, and extends 3 miles in length by 1 mile in breadth, above Loch Shin.

MERRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Spaxton, co. Somerset, 4 miles W. of Bridgwater.

MERRINGTON, a par. in the S.E. div. of the ward of Darlington, co. Durham, 4 miles E. of Bishop-Auckland, its post town. The village, which is large, is situated on an eminence near the North of England railway. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Chilton, Ferry Hill, Helt, and Merrington. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is hilly, and in some parts the soil is light and gravelly, resting upon limestone and coal, and in others clay on hard blue whinstone. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £285, and the impropriate tithes belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Durham for one of £646, besides £74 belonging to other impropriators. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £211, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The parish church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a square tower containing two bells. It was rebuilt in 1850. There is a district church at Ferry Hill, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £276. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. There is a National school.

MERRINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Preston Gubbals, hund. of Albrighton, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, within the liberties of which borough it is included. It formerly belonged to the Mucklestons.

MERRION, a post-office vil. in the par. of Donnybrook, in the bar. and co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Kingstown railway. It is situated on the S. side of Dublin Bay, and is resorted to as a bathing-place in the summer season. Merrion Castle, Merrion Hall, and Elm Park, are the chief seats of this locality.

MERRIOTT, a par. in the hund. of Crewkerne, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Crewkerne, its post town. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. There are extensive canvas works adjoining the village, giving employment to a large number of hands. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £312, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure with a square tower containing a clock and five bells. The church has recently been thoroughly restored, chiefly at the expense of the rector. The register dates from 1647. The parochial charities produce about £10 10*s.* per annum, which is distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's Day. There is a National school, endowed with an annuity of £9, for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. There are two Dissenting schools, and places of worship for the Wesleyans, Baptists, and Plymouth Brethren. John Rodbard Rodbard, and Edward Rodbard, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

MERROW, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Woking, co. Surrey, 2 miles N.E. of Guildford, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Leatherhead to Guildford, under Merrow-Down, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common and woodland, and contains several plantations. The Guildford race-course is situated within this parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £221. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a spired tower. It was rebuilt in 1842 on the old foundation. The E. end of the S. aisle is set apart as a burial-place for the Onslow family. There is a National school. Earl Onslow is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MERRY MAIDENS, a Druid temple, near St. Buryan, co. Cornwall. The circle is 25 feet in diameter, surrounded by 19 stones, each 4 feet high.

MERRYN, ST., a par. in the hund. of Pyder, E. div. of co. Cornwall, 2 miles W. by S. of Padstow, and 7 N. by W. of St. Columb Major. The parish, which is situated near Trevose-Head and Catacluse Cliff, is bounded on the W. and N. by the Bristol Channel. The coast is lined by high rugged cliffs, and the surface is strikingly varied, the prevailing rocks being crystalline and slaty, with veins of lead and antimony. There are quarries of roofing slate, and of a dark-coloured trap rock almost equal to marble. Under the Catacluse Cliff is a small quay, constructed in 1794 for the accommodation of coasting vessels. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410, and the vicarial for £250. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £257, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Merryn, is an ancient structure, partly rebuilt of Catacluse stone. It contains an antique font of trap stone, curiously carved with figures of the Apostles, brought from the old church of St. Catherine, near Harlyn, of which there are still some ruins. There are places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. The principal seats are Harlyn and Trevose, the latter belonging to the Molesworths. The feasts are kept on the Sundays next before 10th March and 7th July. A fair is held on the Monday preceding 22nd June.

MERRYSTONE, and MERRYSTONE WEST, vils. in the par. of Old Monkland, co. Lanark, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Glasgow. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the mines.

MERSE, an extensive district on the eastern part of the Scottish border, co. Berwick, Scotland. It derives its name from its situation on the march or border, and extends 20 miles in length, with a breadth of 10. The chief part of the district lies along the river Tweed, E. of Lauderdale, and another part in the co. of Roxburgh. It is fertile, and in a good state of cultivation. It gives name to the synod of Merse and Teviotdale, containing the presbs. of Dunse, Chirnside, Kelso, Jedburgh, Lauder, and Selkirk, all of which pars. have Free churches, with the exception of Chirnside and Lauder.

MERSEA, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 11 miles S. of Colchester, its post town. It is situated at the eastern end of the Isle of Mersea, and is bounded by the rivers Colney and Blackwater on the E. and S., and Pyefleet Channel on the N. The village consists of a few farmhouses and cottages. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £427. The surface is in general flat, but fertile and well wooded. The island is joined to the main by Strode Causeway, across Pyefleet Creek. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £400, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, has a square embattled tower of stone containing two bells, which, being situated on high ground at the eastern part of the island, formerly served as a landmark to mariners. The register commences in 1720. The charities consist of a bequest of £200 in the Three per Cent. Consols for the education of poor children of the parish to be nominated by the rector. There is a National school.

MERSEA, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 10 miles S. of Colchester, its post town. It is situated at the mouth of the river Blackwater, and is a coastguard station. West Mersea comprises the greater portion of the Isle of Mersea, which is about 5 miles in length by 2 in average breadth, and is connected with the mainland on the W. by a causeway called the Strode. It is supposed to have been the residence of the Count of the Saxon Shore, or some other Roman officer of distinction, owing to the discovery of a tesselated pavement in 1730. It was frequently the landing place of the Danish pirates, who on one occasion were besieged here by Alfred the Great. It was given by the Confessor to St. Audouin's Monastery at Rouen, and at the Dissolution came to the D'Arcies, of St. Osyth. The surface is undulating and richly wooded. Near to West Mersea are two small islands, one of them called Cobmarsh. The trade in oysters has of late years much declined. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £230. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a neat edifice, with a tower containing five bells. The charities produce about £102, of which £90 go for church and causeway repairs. There is an endowed Church of England school. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Independents, to the latter of which a school-room is attached. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500, and the vicarial for £230.

MERSEY ROAD, a station on the Manchester, Garston, and Liverpool railway, next to Garston.

MERSEY, THE, a river in the N.W. of England, forming the boundary between the cos. of Cheshire and Lancashire, and second only to the Thames in commercial importance, being the channel by which vessels approach Liverpool, the second port in England. It is formed by the junction of the rivers Goyt and Thame, which unite their streams at Stockport; and, after receiving the waters of the Irwell, Bollin, and Weaver, falls into the sea a little below Liverpool, by way of the Victoria Channel, which has from four to twelve fathoms water between the Burbo and Formby Flats. At its entrance, which is marked by the Black Rock Light, its channel is deep and narrow, but expanding, a little higher up, into a wide sandy estuary, the shores of which have been converted into spacious docks. [See LIVERPOOL.] Several artificial cuts have been made to facilitate the navigation, so that small craft can ascend as far as Runcorn.

MERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Ashford, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Smeeth railway station on the South-Eastern line. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Stour. The land is partly in hop-grounds, but the greater part arable and pasture, in nearly equal proportions. The South-Eastern railway passes through the western portion of the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £630 10*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £555, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a neat structure, with a tower at the S. side. It contains several monuments of the Hatch family. The parochial charities produce about £71 per annum, of which £10 go to the support of Dame Knatchbull's schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The principal residence, called Hatch or Le-Hatch, has been in the possession of the Knatchbull family from the reign of Henry VIII. A fair for pedlery, &c., is held on the Friday in Whitsun-week.

MERSTHAM, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Reigate, co. Surrey, 3½ miles N.E. of Reigate, its post town. It is a station on the South-Eastern railway. There is a tram railway to Wandsworth belonging to the Brighton Company. Pilgrim's Lane passes through on the way to Canterbury. There are some excellent quarries of stone called Reigate stone. The land is chiefly arable and meadow, with some fine orchards and gardens. At Feather's Inn is a well 210 feet deep. Lime is burnt here, and chalk marl dug. The Brighton railway intersects the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £574. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £476, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, was erected in the reign of Henry VI., and has a tower surmounted by a wooden spire. It contains some monuments of the Joliffe family, and an antique font. There are also four brasses of the Chuebryggs, the earliest bearing date 1473. The charities share with Reigate. There is a subscription school for both sexes.

MERSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Shorne, hund. of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4½ miles S.E. of Gravesend, its post town. The hamlet consists of a few labourers' cottages. This place is parochial in its ecclesiastical jurisdiction, but in other respects part of Shorne. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £90. The church, which is in ruins, is included within a plantation of about five acres, called Chapel-wood. In the vicinity are traces of ancient fortifications.

MERSTON, a par. in the hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 3 miles S.E. of Chichester, its post town, and 2 S. of the Drayton railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the Arundel and Portsmouth canal, and on the road from Chichester to Bognor. The bed of the above canal is dry and disused. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £263, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is of great antiquity.

MERSTON, a deanery in co. Somerset. See MARSTON MAGNA.

MERTHER, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 6 miles S. of Grampound, its post town, and 5 E. of Truro. The village, which is small, is situated on St. Clement's Creek, an inlet of the river Mopus, which is crossed by Trevilian Bridge, connecting this parish with that of Probus. Excellent building-stone is quarried in this parish. It is the spot where Sir Ralph Hopton surrendered to the parliamentary general, Fairfax, in 1646. A brisk trade in done in coal, timber, and lime, the creek being navigable for coal and stone barges up to Trevilian Bridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £55, in the patron. of the parishioners. The church is an ancient structure, with a wooden bell-turret containing three bells. A portion of the communion plate bears the date 1576. There is an old register chest containing parish documents dating from 1688. There is a parochial school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £20. There is a chapel for the Wesleyans in Merther-lane. Hals, the county historian, had a seat at Tresawen, in this parish. There is a ferry from Malpas to Merther. In this parish is the entrance to the mansion of Tregothan, approached by a level carriage way 3½ miles in length. It is at present the seat of Viscount Falmouth, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford, whose tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. A fair is held on the second Monday in February.

MERTHYR, a par. in the hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles W. of Carmarthen, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Cowin. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £158, in the patron. of the Prince of Wales. The church is dedicated to St. Martin.

MERTHYR, a hund. in co. Brecon, contains the pars. of Aberyscir, Battle, Llandefailogfach, Llandilo-vane, Llanfihangel-nant-brane, Merthyr-Cynog, Trallong, and parts of Garthbrengy, St. John the Evangelist, and Llanthew.

MERTHYR-CYNOG, a par. in the above hund., co. Brecon, 8 miles from Brecon, its post town. It is situated on the river Honddhu, a branch of the river Usk, among the mountains. The par. contains the chplry. of Dyffrin Honddu, and the hmlts. of Yscir-Vawr and Vechan. At Alltarnog is a camp, and two pillar crosses at Mynachty. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £90. The parish church is dedicated to St. Cynog. There is also a district church at Dyffrin-Honddu, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £66. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Independents and Calvinistic Methodists have each a place of worship.

MERTHYR-DOVAN, a par. in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.W. of Cardiff, its post town. It is situated near the Bristol Channel. The parish, which abounds in hills, is small. The village consists of a few farmhouses and cottages. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £109. The church is dedicated to St. Dovanus. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

MERTHYR-MAWR, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles S.W. of Bridgend, its post town. It is situated on the river Ogmore, near the coast, and was formerly held by the Siwards and Stradlings, who had a seat here. It is a small rustic place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £69. The church is dedicated to St. Teilaw. Merthyr House is the principal residence, in the grounds of which are two sculptured crosses.

MERTHYR-TYDFIL, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 17 miles from Brecon, and 20 from Abergavenny. It has stations on the Vale of Neath and Tâff Vale railways. There are also several tramroads from the ironworks, mines, and collieries in this rich mineral district to the basin of the Glamorganshire canal, which traverses the country from Merthyr-Tydfil to Cardiff, where it terminates in a floating harbour, opening into Penarth Roads. The town of Merthyr is situated near the northern boundary of Glamorganshire, at the head of the vale of Tâff, celebrated for its rich and thick veins of coal, in juxtaposition with parallel veins of argillaceous iron ore, which penetrate the mountains to a great depth, and yield, upon an average, thirty-five parts of metal out of one hundred. Previous to 1755, it was an inconsiderable village, at which time the late Mr. Bacon obtained a lease of ninety-nine years from Lord Talbot, of Hensol, of the mineral ground, about 8 miles long by 4 broad, at the rate of £200 per annum. He erected a furnace at Cyfartha, and supplied the government with cannon until 1783, when he disposed of this mineral region in bases, having previously realised an immense property. Since this period it has gradually increased in population, numbering in 1851, 63,080, and in 1861, 83,844 inhabitants, including the neighbouring works of Penydarren, Cyfartha, and Dowlais, and the vil. of Coed-y-cumar, with the adjoining par. of Aberdare, which are included within the borough. Although the metropolis of the iron trade, and the producer of almost incalculable wealth, it was till within the last few years a dirty, neglected place, badly supplied with water and unpaved. As may be expected, the usual consequences of such a state of things manifested themselves in the high mortality as compared with the neighbouring towns, and in the frequent recurrence of fever, small pox, and cholera. Great improvements have, however, been recently made, and the streets are now paved and lighted with gas, and extensive waterworks are in course of construction. The town is situated 500 feet above the sea-level, and is drained by the river Tâff, which flows through it. The central part is almost wholly composed of long rows of workmen's cottages, without architectural adornment of any kind, but on the S. side of the town a suburb of neat villa residences has sprung up. It has no public buildings of any interest, the only places worth mention being the theatre, banks, philosophical society, several book clubs, and three market-places. The members of the Temperance societies are very numerous, as are also the Odd Fellows, both of which fraternities frequently parade the streets in holiday attire. The life and trade of Merthyr are wholly absorbed in the numerous ironworks in the vicinity, which are the most extensive in any part of England, including the two vast concerns of Dowlais and Cyfartha, which are like townships in themselves, sprung solely from the iron manufactory under the spirited direction of Sir John Guest, Lewis, and Co., and the Messrs. Crawshay; the former establishment producing above 1,000 tons of iron bars, rails, and rods per week, employing upwards of 4,000 hands, and the latter about 900 tons of cast iron per week, the greater part of which is converted into malleable iron. Besides the Cyfartha, which are said to be the neatest and best arranged works in all South Wales, the Messrs. Crawshay possess the Hirwain Works, situated about 6 miles from Merthyr. The Pen-y-darren Iron Company also produced about 500 tons of malleable iron per week, but these works have been recently closed from pecuniary difficulties, a serious blow to the town and trade of Merthyr generally. The first locomotive steam-engine was constructed here in 1805, by Messrs. Vivian and Trevethick, who tried it on the Tâff Vale line, or rather tramway, and the experiment was so far successful that the engine proceeded as far as Pontypridd, and there came to a stand. At a short distance from the town on the side of Mynydd Aberdare, stands Cyfartha Castle, the modern residence of Mr. Crawshay, and about three miles to the N., on the top of a mountain, are the ruins of the ancient Castle of Morlais, said to have been the seat of the King of Brecon, but dismantled by the parliamentary army in the reign of Charles I.—The petty sessions for the upper div. of the hund. of Caerphilly are held in the town, which is a polling-place for the county elections. By the late Act for amending the representation of the people, Merthyr-Tydfil was constituted a borough in conjunction with the adjoining parish of Aberdare and the village of Coed-y-cumar, in the parish of Vainor, with the privilege of returning one member to parliament. The borough is under the superintendence of a stipendiary police magistrate, appointed by Act of Parliament of the 10th of George IV. The cleaning and lighting of the streets are under the superintendence of a local board of health. It is also the head of new County Court and superintendent registry districts.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc of Llandaff, val. £675. The church is a plain structure, with an inscribed slab in the outer wall, representing "Arthur," a brother of St. Tydfil, to whom it is dedicated. The new church of St. David is also a neat building, erected in 1846. There are also two district churches, viz. at Pont-y-Rhun and Cyfartha, the livings of which are perpet. curs. The various denominations of Protestant Dissenters have places of worship, and there is a Roman Catholic chapel. The state of education is advancing rapidly in this neighbourhood, and most of the young people can now read and write, which was not the case some twenty years ago. There are National, infant, and denominational schools, but the Sunday-schools are the most regularly attended, numbering above 6,000 scholars.—Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs for cattle are held at Merthyr on the 14th May, and at a place called Twyn-y-Waun, in this parish, on the first Mondays in July and August.

MERTON, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 1 mile N.W. of Mitcham, 5 miles W. of Kingston, and near the Wimbledon station on the London and South-Western railway, which passes close to the village. Merton Bridge is its post town. It is supposed to have been the place where the murder of Cynewulf, King of Wessex, took place, in 784, and where a battle was fought between the Danes and Saxons in 871. It is spelled in Domesday Book Meretune, and was formerly held by King Harold II. A mitred Austin abbey was founded here in 1115 by Gilbert-le-Norman, sheriff of Surrey. Henry I., in 1121, granted to the community a charter of incorporation, and the manor of Merton towards the erection of the church of St. Mary, where Hubert de Burgh fled for sanctuary from Henry III. A parliament was held at the priory in 1236, at which the Statutes of Merton were passed. On that occasion the prelates tried to bring in the Roman or Civil Law, but were met by the barons with the well-known reply, "Nolumus leges Angliæ mutari." Here was concluded the peace between the king and the barons, by Gaulo the papal legate. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the calico-print and copper works, and some few in hat-making. The village, which consists chiefly of one street, is situated on the small river Wandle, over which a bridge was built in 1633, uniting this parish with those of Wimbledon and Mitcham. Most of the houses are modern.—The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £145. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient Norman edifice of flint, with a low-spired tower containing three bells. It was built by the founder of the abbey in the 12th century, and bears the arms of England, with those of the priory, in the chancel window. The interior of the church contains a painting by Luca Giordane and several dilapidated tombs. The churchyard contains a tomb to Francis Nixon, who first introduced calico printing in this neighbourhood. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce about £133 per annum, of which £96 were left by Rutlish for apprenticing poor children. There are National and infant schools, also an Independent chapel. Merton House was left by Lord Nelson to Lady Hamilton, and gives the title of viscount to the present Earl Nelson. Thomas à Becket and Walter de Merton, founder of Merton College, Oxford, were educated in the convent under its first prior. At the Dissolution the revenue of the abbey was valued at £1,039 5s. 3*d.* During the civil war of Charles I. the buildings were dismantled by order of parliament, but they appear to have been restored subsequently, as the priory was advertised to be let in 1680, when it was described as containing several large rooms and a fine chapel. The only vestiges are part of the outer walls, constructed of flint and rubble, which some years ago were nearly perfect, but have recently been much damaged by the copper works erected on the abbey site. Church House, in this parish, was once the residence of Garrick, and subsequently of Sheridan, who was frequently visited here by George IV., when Prince of Wales.

MERTON, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 6 miles S. of Great Torrington, its post town, 5 N. by W. of Hatherleigh, and 13 from Eggesford station on the North Devon railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Muir, and is wholly agricultural. At a farm are the ruins of Potheridge House, the birthplace of General Monk, who rebuilt the mansion. The soil is clayey. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £365. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £388. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure, with a tower containing four bells. The charities consist of a clothes club and 5s. per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Bible Christians have a place of worship. Lord Clinton is lord of the manor.

MERTON, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S. by W. of Watton, its post town, and 10 N. of Thetford. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The Merton Hall estate comprises the whole of the parish, as well as the adjoining ones of Sturston, Tottington, Stanford, and part of Thompson. The soil, which is poor, consists of a light sand with a subsoil of clay and marl, but through the perseverance of the neighbouring farmers has been considerably improved. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £201 14*s.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £174. The church, which is situated in the park, is dedicated to St. Peter. It is an ancient structure, with a circular tower containing three bells. The church has some stained windows and a font-cover of carved oak, presented by Lord Walsingham in lieu of the old one. There is one brass in good preservation, and others much dilapidated. The charities produce about £20 per annum, chiefly the rent of the town estate. Merton Hall, the principal residence, is an Elizabethan red brick mansion, situated in a wooded park, and is the seat of Lord Walsingham.

MERTON, or MARTIN, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 3½ miles S.W. of Bicester, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Oxford. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ray, and is joined by a causeway, 2 miles in length, to the village of Ambrosden. A branch of the Roman road traverses the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1763. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £90, in the patron. of Exeter College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is of great antiquity, and has a square tower, formerly surmounted by a spire. On the top of the tower is a decorated border in fine preservation. There is an old Elizabethan manor-house, now converted into a farmhouse. Sir Edward Turner is lord of the manor.

MERTON, or MERTOUN, a par. in the co. Berwick, Scotland. It is bounded on the N. by the par. of Earlston, and on the other sides by the co. Roxburgh. It extends in length about 5 miles eastward, with a breadth varying from 1¾ mile to 4¼ miles. The parish abounds in hills, and the soil is rich, and the land in an excellent state of cultivation. The parish is watered by the river Tweed, which sweeps along the whole western and southern boundary. The Melrose, Newton, and Maxton stations on the Edinburgh and Kelso railway are within easy distance. This par. is in the presb. of Lauder and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister has a stipend of £259. The parish church was erected in 1658, and was restored in 1820. There is a parochial school. Dryburgh Abbey, Merton House, and Bemersyde House, are the principal residences. The latter belongs to Haig of Bemersyde, and has been in the possession of that family since the time of Malcolm IV.

MESHAW, or MESHETT, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 6 miles S.E. of South Molton, its post town, and 14 N.W. of Crediton. The village, which is small, is situated near the road leading from South Molton to Crediton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £110. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £197. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a stone structure, with a tower containing four bells. It was rebuilt in 1838. The interior contains tombs of the Courtenays. There is a National school for both sexes. There is a place of worship for the Bible Christians. W. S. Preston, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MESHIE, a small rivulet in co. Inverness, Scotland. It flows northward to the river Spey, at a point nearly opposite Laggan church, in Badenoch.

MESSING, a par. in the Witham div. of the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 3 miles E. of Kelvedon, its railway station and post town, and 6 S.E. of Coggeshall. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Blackwater, and is wholly agricultural. Messing is said to have derived its name from two Saxon words, signifying the "field of trampling," which originated from an engagement between Queen Boadicea and the Romans, causing terrible carnage. On the site is a farm, called Harborough Hall, where several Roman vases have been found. The surface is elevated, and the neighbourhood adorned with many houses. The soil is light and moderately fertile. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £430. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £317. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a red brick tower containing a clock and three bells. It has been enlarged to a great extent, and has two new transepts, and upwards of 518 free sittings. The font is carved. The E. window is of painted glass, representing the six Christian Graces; and the oak panelling of the chancel is of James I.'s time. There are two brasses. The register dates from 1690. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school. The Earl of Verulam is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the first Tuesday in July.

MESSINGHAM, a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Kirton-in-Lindsey, its post town and railway station, and the same distance E. of Butterwick-Ferry. The village, which is large and well formed, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes part of East Butterwick, at which place there is access to the Hull and Gainsborough steamers on the Trent. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Bottesford, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £598, in the patron. of the Bishop and Dean and Chapter of Lincoln alternately, who are the appropriators. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a tower. It was partly rebuilt in 1818, at an outlay of nearly £2,000. There is a National school of recent erection for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a library and reading-room. William Smith, Esq., is lord of the manor. A pleasure fair is held on Trinity Monday.

METFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S.E. of Harleston, its railway station and post town, and 7 N.W. of Halesworth. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of various quality. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450. The living is a don. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £69, in the patron. of the parishioners. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church has a carved font of great antiquity. There is a place of worship for Independents. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, exclusive of lands worth £80 per annum left for repairing the church, and for parochial uses. There are Sunday and day schools, principally supported by the parishioners. Captain C. Rayley, R.N., is lord of the manor.

METHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 5 miles E. by S. of Howden. At a short distance from the line of the ancient Roman way which passes through this township a Roman pottery was discovered, including fragments of urns and other vessels.

METHERINGHAM, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 11 miles N. of Sleaford, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Stixwould railway station. It is situated near Methering-ham Brook, a branch of the river Witham, which bounds the parish on the E. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The ancient cross has been rebuilt, around which a market is held on Saturdays. The surface is undulating, and the higher grounds command a view of Lincoln Cathedral and the surrounding country. The soil in the western part of the parish is light, and in the eastern fenny. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300, The church is a large ancient structure dedicated to St. Wilfrid. It was partly burnt in 1599, and was restored in 1701. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Henry Chaplin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

METHIE, an ancient par., now joined to Inverarity, co. Forfar, Scotland.

METHIL and KIRKLAND, vils. in the pars. of Markinch and Wemyss, district of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland. It is a decayed burgh of barony, and has one of the finest tidal harbours on the S. coast of Fifeshire if it were not choked by rocks. A chapel-of-ease was erected in the village in 1838 at an outlay of £1,050. This village adjoins that of Kirkland, which, together with the bathing-place of Dubbieside, have been formed into a quoad sacra parish.

METHLEY, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Wakefield, its post town. It has stations on the Lancashire and Yorkshire and North Midland railways. The parish, which is 3 miles in extent, is situated near the confluence of the rivers Aire and Calder. The village is well built though irregular. Some of the houses are ancient. A considerable trade is carried on in malt. There are collieries producing coal of a fine quality. The soil is generally fertile, and the lands are in a high state of cultivation, chiefly arable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £908, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is a stone edifice, with a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles and a well-proportioned spire, and contains three bells. Over the S. door is a statue of King Oswald, which is of great antiquity. The interior of the church contains an old register chest, font, and several monuments of the Saville family and of the Earl of Mexborough. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There are National and Sunday schools for both sexes; also places of worship for the Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, and Primitive Methodists. Methley Hall, originally a castellated edifice surrounded by a moat, was rebuilt by the late Earl of Mexborough, and now is a noble mansion. The Earl of Mexborough is lord of the manor. At the enclosure of the parish the tithes were commuted for land.

METHLICK, a par. in the district of Ellon, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It extends about 8 miles in length from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 5 miles. The par. is bounded by Fyvie on the W., New Deer on the N. and N.E., and Tarves on the S.E. and S. The land is of a hilly nature, and of recent years a large portion has been brought under cultivation. The soil consists of a yellow loam with a gravelly and rocky bottom. The parish is intersected by the river Ythan, the banks of which are studded with plantations. The village, which is 6 miles N. of Old Meldrum, is of rural appearance. At a short distance from the village the river is crossed by an iron bridge. This par. is in the presb. of Ellon and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £159. The parish church was erected in 1780, and was restored in 1840. Besides the parish church there is a Free church, also a parochial school and library. Drs. Cheyne and C. Maitland were born in this parish; the former was author of "Philosophical Principles of Natural Religion," and the latter the introducer of vaccination into North Britain. About 2 miles distant from the village is Haddo House, the seat of the Earl of Aberdeen, who is the sole landowner. Annual fairs are held on the Thursday following the 11th May, and on the day in November after Peterhead, chiefly for hiring servants.

METHOP WITH ULPHA, a tnshp. in the par. of Beetham, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 5 miles W. of Milnthorpe railway station. It is situated at the mouth of the river Kent, on Morecambe Bay, and contains Holm Island.

METHVEN, a par. in co. Perth, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Almond Bank, Ballwherne, Bellstown, Bragrum, Gibbiestown, Glack, Meckven, Scrogiehill, and Woodend. It is a station on the Perth, Almond Valley, and Methven railway. It is situated on the Pow and Almond waters, and extends 5 miles from W. to E., with a breadth of from 3 and 4 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Moneydie, Redgorton, Tibbermore, Gask, and Fowlis-Wester. The parish is extensively wooded, a large portion being cut yearly as coppice. The surface, which is moderately even, is varied by gently rising grounds and hollows. The land is in a high state of cultivation. The parish is traversed westward by the road from Perth to Crieff, on which road the village of Methven is situated, 5 miles N.W. of Perth, and 11 N.E of Crieff. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in cotton weaving, paper-making, &c. Sandstone and greenstone are quarried. This par. is in the presb. of Perth and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister has a stipend of £284. The parish church was erected in 1783, and was restored and enlarged in 1825. Besides the parish church there are a Free church and an United Presbyterian church; also parochial and other schools. There are a public library and an agricultural association in the village. About three quarters of a mile E. of the village is Methven Castle, which is seated on an eminence, and has within its grounds the spot where Bruce was defeated by the English, under the Earl of Pembroke, in 1306. The castle was held by the Mowbrays in 1323, after which period it came to the Stuarts, of whom Walter, son of Robert II., founded a collegiate church in 1433. Fairs are held on the Monday in May before Amubree, the first Thursday in August, and on the fourth Thursday in October.

METHWOLD, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.W. of Brandon, its post town. It is situated on the river Wissey, and near the Great Eastern railway. The village, which stands on the high road from Lynn to Bury St. Edmund's, was formerly a market town, and had a priory cell to Castle-Acre, called Slewesholme, or Slusham, of which there are still slight remains. There is an extensive rabbit warren. The inhabitants are exempt from serving on juries out of their own parish, and are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The parish, which is large, was until recently a ferny and sandy heath, but is now reclaimed. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,102 10*s.* and the vicarial for £340 and a rent-charge of £32 5*s., payable to the Rector of Feltwell. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £340, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. George, has a square tower, containing a clock and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There is a school for boys supported by the Duchy of Lancaster. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. A fair is held on 23rd April for cattle.

METTINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles E. of Bungay, its post town, and 4 W. of Beccles. It is an irregularly built village situated on the road from Bungay to Beccles, and near the S. bank of the river Waveney, and is wholly agricultural. There are ruins of Mettingham Castle, consisting chiefly of the gate and walls erected by John de Norwich about 1340, who founded a chantry in it, which subsequently was converted into a college for a master and 13 chaplains. At the Dissolution the revenue amounted to £202 7*s.* 5*d., when the site was given to the Uffords. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £140. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a round tower. The charities produce about £100 per annum, for church, poor, &c. The Rev. J. C. Safford is lord of the manor.

METTON, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles S. of Cromer, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The parish is small, comprising only 662 acres, two-thirds of which is arable and the remainder pasture. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Felbrigge, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square embattled tower. The nave is separated from the chancel by a carved screen.

MEUX, a tnshp. in the par. of Waghen or Wawn, wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 5 miles E. of Beverley. A Cistercian abbey was founded here in 1150 by William le Gros, Earl of Albemarle. At the Dissolution its revenue amounted to £445 10*s.* 5*d.*

MEVAGH, a par. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the vils. of Carrickart and Glen. The par. is 6 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 3 miles. The surface lies between Sheephaven and Mulroy Bay, and includes Rossgul Point. It is mountainous in character, Lough Salt Mountain attaining an altitude of 1,541 feet. Several loughs are within the limits, and the river Lackagh passes along by the S.W. The road from Dunfanaghy to Ramelton passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Raphoe. An old palace is situated at Carrickart. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, Sunday-schools, parochial and other day schools. Petty sessions are held in the village.

MEVAGISSEY, a par., seaport, and market town, in the E. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 6 miles S. of St. Austell, its post town, and 1 mile S.E. of Chapel Point. It is a small fishing and seaport town, situated on the English Channel near Porthmellin. The bay of the same name is sheltered on three sides by lofty hills, which form a natural harbour of great convenience. The par. includes the hmlts. of Penwarne, Tregiskey, and Trelaven. Mevagissey for centuries past has been famed for the large quantity of pilchards taken in its bay; as many as 16,000 hogsheads were taken in 1724, but the quantity of late years has not been nearly so great. The inhabitants chiefly depend, either directly or indirectly, on the fisheries. There is an import trade of coal, salt, timber, &c. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £200. The church, dedicated to SS. Mavan and Issi, is an ancient structure, and had formerly a tower which was pulled down. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. In 1849 this parish was so ravaged by cholera that the inhabitants moved into tents while it was thoroughly cleansed. Market day is on Saturday. A fair is held on St. Peter's Day.

MEWAN, ST., a par. in the hund. of East Powder, co. Cornwall, 1 mile W. by S. of St. Austell. It contains the hmlts. of Burganlo and Trewoon, and the celebrated tin mine of Polgooth, which is partly in this parish. The rocks are chiefly granite and felspar, with veins of copper and tin, and in some places traces of silver and gold. The village is considerable but primitive. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £275. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £284. The church is dedicated to St. Newan.

MEWSTONE, several rocks of this name off the coast of co. Devon. The most dangerous are those at the mouth of Salcombe harbour, and those at the eastern entrance of Plymouth Sound.

MEXBOROUGH, a par., partly in the lib. of St. Peters, but chiefly in the S. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Rotherham, its post town, and 2 E. of Swinton. It is a station on the South Yorkshire railway. It is the ancient Maisebel, where the memorable battle was fought between the Saxons and the Britons under Aurelius Ambrosius, in which the latter were victorious. The par., which is extensive, is situated on the N. side of the river Don, and contains the tnshps. of Old and New Mexborough. The Dean and Dove canal passes through the parish and joins the Don just above the village, which has of late years considerably improved, its population having increased from 500 in 1806 to 3,000 at the present time. A portion of the land has been recently enclosed for building and other purposes. The substratum contains clay for earthenware, for which the place has long been celebrated. There are numerous stone quarries, coal mines, a pottery, extensive iron works, a brewery, and the Don Glass Company, employing many hands. Boat building is also carried on. The land, which has been enclosed and cultivated, is rich, but there is still a considerable extent of common. The impropriation belongs to the Archdeacon of the East Riding, whose tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £570, and who has a glebe of 36 acres. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £150. The church, which has recently been restored, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Saville family, also fragments of stained glass bearing their arms. The register dates from 1562. The parochial charities produce about £5 5*s.* per annum, which goes to Messrs. Horne and Calverly's almshouses. There are National and British schools, each having a Sunday-school attached. The Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. The par. comprises two manors, Mexborough and Denaby, separated by the river Don. This place gives the title of earl to the Mexborough family. There are traces of several aggers in this parish, supposed to have been thrown up by the Romans to strengthen their works at Templeborough.

MEYARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwyddelwern, co. Merioneth, 2 miles N. of Corwen.

MEY, EAST and WEST, vils. in the par. of Canisbay, co. Caithness, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Canisbay. Here was situated Mey Castle, a stronghold of the earls of Caithness, which has given name to the loch, which is about 3 miles in circumference.

MEYNELL-LANGLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Langley, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 4 miles W. by N. of Derby. This tnshp. is exempt from tithes, although not separately rated to the poor. Godfrey Meynell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MEYRICK, a mountain in the par. of Minnigaff, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It rises about 2,500 feet above sea-level.

MIAGHAILT, LOCH, a small lake in Kilmuir par., in the island of Skye, Scotland. It discharges its waters through a subterranean passage into the sea.

MIALAGH, or BEAL, a small river of co. Cork, Ireland, rises under Owen's Hill, and after forming the cataract of Dunamare falls into Bantry Bay.

MIAWST, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarthney, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles E. of Carmarthen.

MICHAEL CARHAYES, ST., a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 4 miles E. by S. of Tregony, its post town, and 7 S.W. of St. Austell. The parish, which is small, is situated on the shore of the English Channel, by which it is bounded on the S. It includes the small port called Luny, or Veryan Bay, and contains the hmlts. of Carhayes-Barton and Polgrain. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with St. Dennis and St. Stephen's, £659. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone structure, with a lofty castellated tower. The interior contains, besides the sword of Sir Hugh, who was at Bosworth Field, several monuments to the Trevanions. There is a school, chiefly supported by the Trevanions.

MICHAEL CHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Lower Wormelow, co. Hereford, 1½ mile N. of Tretire, to which parish it is joined, and 5 miles N.W. of Ross, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated in a valley, and is watered by the Garran Brook. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The land in general is of inferior quality, the soil being a stony loam, alternated by a red clayey earth. The Black mountains are seen at a distance of about 3 miles. Stone is quarried of a light green colour. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £22. The living is a rect. annexed to that of St. Margaret's, Tretire, in the dioc. of Hereford, joint val. £182. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a small belfry containing two bells.

MICHAELCHURCH-ESKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, co. Hereford, 14 miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Pontrilas railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Eskley, a branch of the river Munnow, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a sandy loam on a subsoil of Old Red sandstone. The parish is sheltered by the Black mountains, which lie at a distance of about 4 miles. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Tretire, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, supported by R. W. Barton, Esq., whose mansion and park are in the neighbourhood. This parish is in the manor of Ewyas.

MICHAELCHURCH-ON-ARROW, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, co. Radnor, 6 miles S.W. of Kington, its post town, and 4 W. of Cardiff. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Ely, a branch of the Arrow. There are ruins of a Norman castle. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Brilley, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

MICHAEL CHURCH, ST., a par. in the hund. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 5 miles S. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Taunton. The parish, which is inconsiderable, comprising only 50 acres, is situated near the Exeter railway, and on the Taunton canal. It is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small structure, with a low square tower. The interior of the church has monuments to the Slade family of Maunsel House. Sir F. W. Slade is lord of the manor.

MICHAEL-ON-WYRE, ST., a par. in the hund. of Amounderness, co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Garstang, its post town. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the navigable river Wyre, the mouth of which forms a harbour. It contains the tnshps. of Copp, Inskipp, Rawcliffe, Wood Plumpton, Eccleston, and Elswick. The par. is partly in Garstang, Fylde, and Preston unions. A portion of the land is moory, and a small quantity in woodland, the remainder is arable and pasture in nearly equal proportions. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents, under an Enclosure Act in 1816. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £550. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a structure of Henry VIII.'s time, erected on the site of a much older one, said to have been one of three erected in this district shortly after the introduction of Christianity. In addition to the parish church, are the following district churches, viz. at Copp, Out-Rawcliffe, Inskip, and Wood Plumpton. The last-named is the most ancient, having been erected in 1640. Copp church was built in 1700, and Rawcliffe in 1838. There are National and other schools.

MICHAEL-PENKEVIL, ST., a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.E. of Truro, and 5 W. by S. of Tregony. The village, which is small, is situated at Mopas Ferry on St. Clement's Creek. The manor anciently belonged to the Penkevil family, from whom the parish takes the suffix to its name, and subsequently came through the Courtenays, Carminows, and others, to the Boscawens of Tregothnan. The surface is rugged, and the subsoil a slaty rock, with traces of copper. There are two old seats known as Tregonian and Nancarrow. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £156. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and buttresses, and adjoins the park. It contains a monument by Rysbrach, to Admiral Boscawen, who died in 1761, and one to the "rich" Carminow. There is a school supported by the Earl and Countess of Falmouth.

MICHAEL'S MOUNT, ST., an ext. par. place in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, a quarter of a mile S. of Marazion. It is a remarkable granite rock, about 1 mile in circumference, and 250 feet high, in Mount's Bay, and connected with the shore by a kind of causeway of sand and rocks, which are submerged by every rising tide, and are dry only at low water. It is called by Ptolemy Ocrium, and is supposed to have been the island Iclis, or Iktas, of the Greeks, noticed by Diodones Siculus as the place near the promontory of Belerium to which the tin, when refined, was brought in carts by the Britons, to be exchanged with the Phœnician merchants. Its British name was Careg-ludgh-en-loos, rendered into the Cornish, Cara-Couz-in-Clouze, signifying "the grey or hoary rock in the woods," a tradition apparently confirmed by the discovery of a submarine forest, extending for some miles around the base of the mount, and covered with gravel and sand. The sublimity of the spot caused it to be selected by the ancient Britons as a favourite resort for worship; and shortly after the introduction of Christianity it became a place of pilgrimage, and was visited in the 5th century by St. Keina, a princess of British royal blood, who founded a hermitage, which subsequently became the site of a Benedictine priory, to which Edward the Confessor granted the whole island, with the castle and other buildings. It was made by Robert, Earl of Mortaigne, a cell to the abbey of St. Maria de Pericula, in Normandy, and was seized in 1194 by Henry de la Pomeroy for Prince John. Upon the suppression of alien priories, Henry V. gave it to King's College, Cambridge; but in 1471, being surprised by John de Vere, in a pilgrim's disguise, it was recovered by Edward IV., and presented to Syon Abbey. It was seized by the Cornishmen during the rebellion of 1548, and in the civil war of the 17th century, having been fortified for the king, it was taken in 1646 by Colonel Hammond, the Parliamentary general. After the Restoration it became the property of the Arundells, Bassets, and others, from whom it has descended to the St. Aubyns of Devonport. The mount, which has more the appearance of a work of art than of nature, is exceedingly rugged, consisting of large masses of granite overhanging its base, and crowned with an embattled and turreted building called the chapel tower, which has been restored, and now forms part of the residence of Sir J. St. Aubyn, Bart., whose dining-room is formed out of the refectory of the ancient priory, and is adorned with carvings of field-sports, from which it is known as the "Chevy-chase" room. On the slope, but towards the top, are two batteries, and an old lantern beacon. The houses are situated at the bottom of the rock, where is a fishing-pier; but the population of the whole island is scarcely above 150 persons. A considerable portion of the surface, which comprises about 70 acres, is in rabbit-warrens; the remainder either a barren crag, or covered with a sparse herbage, scarcely sufficient to pasture a score of sheep for the whole year. It has also some plantations of fir scattered over its surface, and many rare plants are met with. The mount itself consists of a hard granite, in which transparent quartz is the preponderating substance. Among the minerals found are tin, copper, antimony, lead, mica, felspar, fluor spar, malachite, topaz, wolfran, and the triple sulphuret of copper. There is also slate interspersed with granitic veins. Sir Humphrey Davy, who was a native of Penzance, has celebrated St. Michael's Mount in his poem of "Mount's Bay."

MICHAEL, ST., or MIDSHALL, or MITCHELL, a vil., partly in the par. of St. Enoder, and partly in that of Newlyn, hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 6 miles N. by E. of Truro, and 36 W. by S. of Launceston. The ancient name of this place was Modeshole, at which time it was a market town, and a place of considerable importance. It was subsequently constituted a borough, and sent two members to Parliament from the reign of Edward VI. till disfranchised by the Reform Act. It is now an inconsiderable village, consisting only of a few houses, but is the place where petty sessions are held. There is no church. A fair is held on the 25th October for sheep.

MICHAEL, ST., a par., partly in the borough of St. Alban's, but chiefly in the hund. of Cashio, or liberty of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 1 mile N.W. of St. Alban's, of which it forms a populous suburb. The parish, which is small, lies on the S. bank of the river Ver, or Colne. The parish church, though situated in the town of St. Alban's, and within the walls of the ancient city of Verulam, is without the limits of the borough. The living is a vic.,* val. £300, in the archdeac. of St. Alban's and dioc. of Rochester. The Earl of Verulum is impropriator of the great tithes. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a venerable structure, erected by Ulsinus, the sixth abbot, and has a square embattled tower and a chancel, the latter built principally of Roman tiles. In it the Lord Chancellor Bacon is interred under a marble tomb.

MICHAEL, ST., a par. in the bars. of Barrymore and Cork, co. Cork, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Cork. The surface is hilly, but the soil good, with limestone subsoil. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Michael. There are several schools.

MICHAEL, ST., a par. in the bars. of Kilkea and West Narragh, co. Kildare, Ireland. It is situated on the Grand Canal and river Barrow, and contains part of the town of Athy, which see.

MICHAEL, ST., a par. in the bar. of Pubblebrien and city of Limerick, co. Limerick, Ireland. It is situated on the river Shannon, and contains part of the city of Limerick, which see.

MICHAEL, ST. See MILE END ST. MICHAEL, co. Essex.

MICHAEL, ST. See KIRK MICHAEL, Isle of Man.

MICHAEL, ST. See CORK CITY, Ireland.

MICHAEL, ST. See VALE, Channel Islands.

MICHAEL, ST. See WINCHESTER, co. Hants.

MICHAEL, ST., BEDWARDINE. See BEDWARDINE, co. Worcester.

MICHAELSTONE-LE-PIT, or LLANFIHANGEL-YNYGWAELOD, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S.W. of Cardiff, its post town, and 11 from Cowbridge. The parish, which is small, is situated near the coast. The land abounds in limestone, with lead. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £65. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

MICHAELSTONE, LOWER and UPPER, hmlts. in the par. of Michaelstone-super-Avon, hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles from Neath, and 14 from Bridgend.

MICHAELSTONE-SUPER-AVON, a par. in the hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.E. of Neath, its post town, and 14 from Bridgend. It is situated on the river Avon, and contains the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Michaelstone, partly in Aberavon borough. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the tin and coal works. The village is considerable, but much scattered. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £112, in the patron. of the English Copper Company. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

MICHAELSTONE-SUPER-ELY, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles W. of Cardiff, its post town, and 8 from Lantrissant. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Ely, and has traces of a Norman castle. The village comprises only eight houses. The living is a rect. annexed to that of St. Bride-super-Ely, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

MICHAELSTONE-Y-VEDW, a par. partly in the upper div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, and partly in the hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.W. of Newport, its post town, and 7 from Cardiff. It is situated on the river Rumney, and contains Llan-vedw. The parish is of small extent, but the village is neatly built. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £500. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £75 per annum, of which £64 goes to a school, endowed by the late Rev. Dr. Tate.

MICHAELSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.W. of Camelford, its post town. It is a small agricultural par., situated on the river Camel, and contains the hmlt. of Treveighan. The road from Camelford to Bodmin passes through the parish. The surface is undulating, and the soil light, but fertile. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and meadow, and about 30 acres of woodland and plantation. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £270, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The church has tombs of the Lowers of Trevinin. There are National and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans, Bible Christians, and Association Methodists, have places of worship. At Helsbury, in this parish, are the mound and some earthworks of an ancient castle, called the Beacon.

MICHELDEVER. See MITCHELDEVER, co. Hants.

MICHELHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Hailsham, co. Sussex, 2 miles from Hailsham, and 7 N. of Eastbourne. It is situated on the river Cuckmere, and has the remains of a priory for Augustine Canons, founded by Gilbert D'Aquila in the reign of Henry III., and converted into a farmhouse. The revenue at the Dissolution was £160, when the site was given to the Sackvilles. There is a tower remaining and a bridge of eight arches over the river.

MICKFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.W. of Debenham, 6½ N.E. of the Stowmarket railway station, and 1 mile E. of Stoneham, its post town. The parish is small, and wholly agricultural. The soil is a strong fertile loam on a substratum of blue and white clay. The surface is elevated, but level. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small structure, with a square embattled tower on the S. side, faced with flint. The interior of the church has a brass of P. Preston, bearing date 1616. The register dates from 1609. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. Sir William Middleton and Alexander Adair, Esq., are lords of the manor.

MICKLEBRING, a hmlt. in the par. of Braithwell, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Rotherham, and 5 W. of Tickhill.

MICKLEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Lythe, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 6 miles W. of Whitby. It is situated near the sea-coast.

MICKLEFIELD, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Sherburn, Upper div. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 2¼ miles S. of Aberford, 6 N.W. of Ferry-Bridge, and 5 from Milford Junction, its post town. It is a railway station on the Leeds and Milford Junction branch of the North-Eastern line. The township, which is situated close to the road to Wetherby and on the line of the Leeds and Selby railway, is chiefly agricultural. There are collieries and lime quarries. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Sherburn, in the dioc. of York. The church is a modern structure, erected at the expense of Thomas Davidson Bland, Esq., the lord of the manor and chief landowner. The National school adjoins the church, and is for children of both sexes.

MICKLEHAM, or LITTLEBOROUGH, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Copthorne, co. Surrey, 2½ miles N. of Dorking, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Leatherhead. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Mole under Box Hill and Mickleham Downs. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Micleham, at which time it was held by Bishop Odo. It consists principally of one street of well-built houses and a few scattered villa residences. During the summer months the bed of the river may be crossed in certain places. From the top of Box Hill, so called from the box trees planted on its southern declivity by the Earl of Arundel, in the reign of Charles I., a fine view is obtained. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £425. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £440. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was built prior to the conquest, and was restored in 1823. It has a low square tower crowned with a spire, and contains a clock and three bells. The interior is beautifully fitted up, and the chancel divided from the nave by an oak screen. The pulpit is of oak with carved panels, and there are several stained windows. The register dates from 1549. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. In the vicinity of Boxhill, about 1½ mile S.E. of the village, are numerous places called "Swallows," which have communication with the river Mole. Norbury Park, the principal residence, is situated on rising ground, the river Mole flowing through its grounds. The Roman way Stane Street from Sussex passed over Mickleham Downs, and there are remains of an ancient chapel at Chapel Farm.

MICKLEHURST, a hmlt in the par. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 4 miles N.E. of Ashton-under-Lyne. It is situated near the river Thame.

MICKLEOVER, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 3 miles S.W. of Derby, its post town. The par. includes the chplries. of Littleover and Findern, at which places are chapels-of-ease. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and the making of lace, and some in weaving of silk and velvet. The village, which is considerable, is neatly built. The tithes were commuted under Acts of Enclosure in 1768 and 1790 for land and a money payment. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Littleover and Findern annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £562. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a low embattled tower, containing three bells. The Wesleyans and Unitarians have places of worship. The charities produce about £87 per annum, of which £60 is the endowment of a free school founded by John Alsop in 1715. The Limes and the Pastures are the principal residences.

MICKLE-ROOE, one of the Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland. It is in the par. of Delting, and in the vicinity of St. Magnus Bay, off Rooe Sound. It extends 3 miles in length by 2 in breadth. There are numerous caves along the shore.

MICKLETHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Thursby, ward and co. of Cumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Wigton. It is in conjunction with the hmlt. of Parton, which together form a tnshp.

MICKLETHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bingley upper div. of the wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 1 mile N. of Bingley, and 3 S.E. of Keighley. The inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufacture.

MICKLETHWAITE-GRANGE, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, half a mile S.W. of Wetherby.

MICKLETON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles N.E. of Chipping-Campden, and 3 from the Campden station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. Broadway is its post town. The par., which includes the hmlts. of Clopton and Hidcote-Bartrim, is wholly agricultural. The surface is hilly, comprising a portion of the Cotswold Hills. The soil is a deep clay, producing heavy crops of grain. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £144, and the vicarial for one of £105. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Ebrington, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £299, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a stone structure with a spired tower, containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £309, of which £50 goes to the free school, founded and endowed by Richard Porter in 1513. Mickleton House is the principal residence, where Graves, the author of "Spiritual Quixote," was born. Sir Anthony Keck, the eminent lawyer, was born in this parish. Lady Steele is lady of the manor.

MICKLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Romald-Kirk, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Barnard-Castle. It is situated on the river Tees. The greater portion of this township consists of a high moorland tract, extending along the S. side of Lunedale to the borders of Westmoreland. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1803. Divine service is performed every alternate Sunday evening in the chapel-of-ease. There is a free school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

MICKLE-TRAFFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Plemonstall, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 3½ miles from Chester, its post town, and 2 S. of Dunham.

MICKLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Ovingham, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Stocksfield, and 10 S.E. of Hexham. It is a station on the Newcastle and Carlisle section of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated near Mickley Grange, and on the turnpike road leading from Hexham to Newcastle. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. The soil consists of clay and loam. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £62. The church was erected in 1824. There is an endowed school with accommodation for two hundred children, erected at the expense of the owner of Mickley colliery, and is under government inspection. W. B. Wrightson is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MICKLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Prees, co. Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Market-Drayton. It is situated near the river Tern.

MICKLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Azerley, par. of Kirkby Malzeard, in the West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Ripon, its post town. It is situated on the river Ure. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £80, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is a modern structure.

MID-CALDER, a par. in the district of West Edingburghshire, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. See CALDER, and the like, for LAVANT, LOTHIAN, &c.

MIDDLE, a par., partly in the libs. of Shrewsbury, but chiefly in the Albrighton div. of the hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 8 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Baschurch railway station. It is situated on the Shrewsbury and Ellesmere road, and is chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and there is a small lake of about ten acres, called Marton Pool. The par. includes the tnshps. of Balderton, Hadnall, Marton, Newton, and Sleap. The soil is clay and loam alternating with red sand. Here are the ruined tower and walls of a castle, built by Lord L'Estrange, and formerly belonging to "Wild" Kynaston, whose cave is to be seen in Nescliffe Rock. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,100. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £1,003. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure with an ancient tower, containing a clock and three bells. The chancel, which was restored in 1855, has a stained window, and an old brass, bearing date 1564. There is also a district church at Hadnall, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £72. The parochial charities produce about £92 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, chiefly supported by the rector. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor.

MIDDLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ystradyfodwg, hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 8 miles S.W. of Merthyr-Tydfil.

MIDDLE, or ST. ANDREW'S, a par. in the city of Glasgow, co. Lanark, Scotland. See GLASGOW.

MIDDLE-ASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Steeple-Aston, hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 1 mile N. of Steeple-Aston, and 5 miles N. of Westbury. The township contains only two or three farmhouses, and a few cottages. The greater part of the common is now enclosed. There is a fire-engine society, the engines being stationed at Steeple-Aston. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

MIDDLEBERE, a hmlt. in the par. of Holy Trinity, co. Dorset, near Wareham.

MIDDLEBIE, a par. in the district of Annandale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Eaglesfield, Kirtlebridge, Watersbeck, and the ancient pars. of Carruthers and Pennerscugh. It extends in length about 9 miles S.W., with an extreme breadth of 4½, and is bounded by the pars. of Fundergarth, Langholm, Half-Morton, Kirkpatrick-Fleming, Annan, and Haddam. The surface is moderately even, though along the centre and to the N.E. are considerable elevations. Red sandstone and limestone abound. The soil chiefly consists of stiff and loamy clay, and above one-fourth of the land is in a good state of cultivation. The parish is traversed by the road from Glasgow to Carlisle, and by the main trunk of the Caledonian railway. The village of Middlebie is situated on the river Kirtle, 6 miles N.E. of Annan, and 3 miles from Ecclefechan. It has a station at Kirtlebridge on the Caledonian railway. Here was the Roman station Blatum Bulgium, also a middle station between Netherby and Castleover in Eskdalemuir. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in cotton weaving. This par. is in the presb. of Annan and synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £219. The parish church was erected in 1821. At Waterbeck is an United Presbyterian church. There are two parochial schools, also a circulating library. Dr. Currie, of Liverpool, author of "The Life of Burns," was born in this parish. Near the church are traces of a Roman camp, in which Roman coins have been found.

MIDDLE-CHURCH, in Paisley, a par. in the district of Renfrew, Upper ward, co. Renfrew, Scotland. See PAISLEY.

MIDDLE CHURCH, a par. in the town and co. of Perth, Scotland. See PERTH.

MIDDLE-CLAYDON, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks. See CLAYDON, MIDDLE, and the like, for other places, with this prefix.

MIDDLE DROVE, a station on the Wisbeach and Lynn branch of the Great Eastern railway, 5 miles from Wisbeach.

MIDDLEHAM, a par. and post town in the wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Leyburn railway station, 9 W. of Bedale, and 10 S.W. of Richmond. It is situated on the S. side of the river Ure, and near Middleham Moor, where many first-class horses have been reared and trained for the field and the race-course. Middleham formerly belonged to Kilpatrick the Dane, and has the ruins of a castle, built by Robert Fitz-Ranulph. The remains of this once-imposing edifice stand upon a rocky eminence near the town, and comprise the Norman keep, surrounded by a quadrangular building, measuring 210 feet by 175, and flanked by a square tower at each angle. In it the great Earl of Warwick kept Edward IV. as his prisoner, till the king, having effected his escape, obtained the decisive battle of Barnet, in which the Earl was slain, and the castle forfeited to the king, who bestowed it on his brother Richard Duke of Gloucester, whose son Edward, afterwards Prince of Wales, was born in it. The village, formerly a market town, is built on a gentle eminence rising from the river Ure, and is said to have derived its name from its situation in the centre of a number of hamlets. It is well lighted with gas, and contains many neat residences. The petty sessions for the wapentake of West Hang are held here, as also a court-leet, annually, at the White Swan Inn. Wool-combing affords employment to a few persons, but the majority are engaged in agriculture. The living forms a deanery of itself, and is a royal peculiar, valued in the king's books at £15 9*s.* 4½*d., but the title is in future to be discontinued. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £400, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Alkeld, is an ancient edifice with an embattled tower, containing six bells. The church has some stained windows recently inserted, also several mural tablets, and a brass, bearing date 1727. The church was made collegiate by King Richard III. in 1476 for a dean, sub-dean, and six canons. The charities produce about £29 10*s.* per annum. There is a Church of England school for both sexes, built in 1837 by voluntary contributions. Also a Church Sunday-school. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. Colonel Thomas Wood is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Fairs are held on 30th March and on the 5th and two following days of November for horses, cattle, and sheep, this last being one of the largest fairs in the N. of England.

MIDDLEHAM, BISHOP'S, co. Durham. See BISHOP'S-MIDDLEHAM.

MIDDLE-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Box, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Corsham.

MIDDLEHOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Diddlebury, hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Church-Stretton. It is situated under Wenlock-Edge.

MIDDLEMARSH, a tythg. in the par. of Minterne-Magna, hund. of Cerne, co. Dorset, 3 miles N. of Cerne-Abbas, and 12 N.W. of Dorchester. It had formerly a seat of the Abbots of Cerne, and subsequently of the Napier family.

MIDDLE-MEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Little Baddow, co. Essex, 5 miles E. by N. of Chelmsford.

MIDDLENEY, a tythg. in the par. of Drayton, hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 2½ miles S.W. of Langport. It is situated on the small river Isle.

MIDDLE QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Linton, or Kirk-Levington, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 4 miles S.E. of Longtown. It is situated near the river Line.

MIDDLE-QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Ireleth, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Ulverstone. It is a considerable village, situated near the river Dudden.

MIDDLESBOROUGH, a par., seaport, and market town, and municipal borough, in the W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Stockton and 7½ from Redcar. It is a principal station on the Stockton and Darlington railway, being connected with the main line by a short branch of 4 miles, which terminates in a spacious depôt and a harbour for shipping coal. It is situated at the river Tees' mouth, and is bounded by the North Sea, with a view eastward of the range of hills, including Roseberry Topping. The par. contains the tnshp. of Linthorpe, with the hmlts. of Airsholme and Newport, also the Port of Cleveland. It had formerly St. Hilda's Benedictine Cell to Whitby Abbey, founded by Robert de Bruce in the reign of Henry I. In 1801 the town of Middlesborough had but a population of twenty-five, which, in 1831, had increased to one hundred and fifty-four, and from that period it has so rapidly increased, that the population at the present time is over 14,000. The discovery of the iron-stone in the Cleveland district by Mr. Vaughan in 1850, and the completion of the railway into Middlesborough, have made this place one of the most important manufacturing centres in the kingdom. The total number of blast furnaces erected in the N. of England in the first forty-five years of the present century, was only thirty-seven, but since the iron of Cleveland was worked, thirty-six blast furnaces have been built in and around Middlesborough alone. From this great manufacturing centre, the very air of which is a mere dilution of soot, the Stockton and Darlington railway runs to Saltburn, passing en route through such a succession of iron works and iron factories as no other spot of the same size probably in all the world can show the equal of. The most remarkable fact, however, is, that notwithstanding the evidences of ancient mining operations, from the heaps of scoria scattered around in some places, as at Grosmont, grown over with oaks, the growth of centuries, which testified to the richness of the ore—all practical men united in condemning the ore as useless, till Mr. Vaughan, in 1850, stumbled over a boulder of pure iron, which led him to look for the ironstone, and then it was found to be everywhere. Since that time the iron has been sent to every known part of the world; and it is now admitted, that this hitherto despised bed of ironstone is fine in quality and boundless in quantity. The bed, in fact, extends from the Tees to the Humber, and is fifty or sixty miles broad. In 1863, while sinking a well for the supply of their immense ironworks, the Messrs. Bolckow and Vaughan struck on a new salt bed at a depth of 1,300 feet below the surface, and the vein, as far as at present worked, is 112 feet in thickness. It has not yet been wrought as a source of profit, but may eventually prove a valuable addition to the mineral wealth of this district. A new dock of great magnitude was completed in 1842, in which are several staiths communicating with a platform and the railway, by which means vessels can be loaded and unloaded independent of the fluctuation of the tide. The quantity of coals shipped during the year is considerable. There are extensive building yards for sailing and steam-ships, also other works for the manufacture of dock-gates, bridges, iron sleepers, &c. On the river are saw and flour-mills, breweries, maltings, a tannery, pottery, and other manufactories. The town, which has recently been created a borough, is governed by a mayor elected annually. It is well paved, lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water, under an Act passed in 1841. It contains several good streets, the chief of which run N., S., E., and W. at right angles. There is also a market square, with the townhall in the centre. There are two banks, a savings-bank, literary institution, custom house, and Corporation Hall, where the magistrates hold their meetings. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £34. The church, dedicated to St. Hilda, is a neat structure with a spire, containing one bell. The church was erected in 1839. The Wesleyans, Independents, Roman Catholics, and Primitive Methodists have places of worship, and the Friends a meeting-house. The cemetery of the old Benedictine Priory is still used, but all vestiges of the chapel have disappeared. Market day is Saturday.

MIDDLESCEUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Mary's, Carlisle, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 9 mile N.W. of Penrith, and 6 E. by N. of Hesket-Market. It is situated on a branch of the river Caldew, and is joined to Braithwaite.

MIDDLESEX, the metropolitan co. of England, including London. It forms part of the valley of the Thames, on the bank of which it is situated, and of the geological tertiary basin of London, being bounded on the N. by the hills of Hertfordshire, on the E. by Essex, from which it is divided by the river Lea; on the S. and S.E. by Surrey, and a very small part of Kent, from both which it is divided by the river Thames; and on the W. by Buckinghamshire, from which it is divided by the river Colne. It extends between 51° 23′ and 57° 42′ N. lat., and between 2′ E. long., and 32′ W. long. It is the smallest of all the English counties except Rutland, containing only 282 square miles, or 180,136 statute acres. Its form is irregular, stretching from the Lea near Waltham Abbey in the N.E., to the Thames opposite Chertsey in the S.W. 28 miles, and in the opposite direction from near South Mimms in the N.W., to the Isle of Dogs in the S.E., an extreme breadth of 18 miles. It is much built over, containing in 1861 no fewer than 279,153 inhabited houses, 13,379 uninhabited, and 3,451 public buildings. In amount of population it is exceeded by Lancashire alone, and in density of population far exceeds any other county, having about 7,000 inhabitants to the square mile. According to the census of 1801, the population, including that part of the metropolis which is locally within its limits, amounted to 818,129; in 1851, to 1,886,576; and in 1861, to 2,206,485, showing an increase of 319,909 in the last decennial period. Its surface, which is now so richly cultivated, comprising above 150,000 acres of arable, meadow, and pasture, besides gardens and orchards, was formerly a barren wilderness. In the earliest period of authentic history the northern part of the county was a vast forest, connected with those of Epping and Waltham on the E., and Windsor Forest on the W.; extending also northwards to Enfield Chase, and southwards to the fenny lands without the walls of London, still designated by the names of Moorfields and Finsbury, or Fensbury. The whole of this forest was abundantly stocked with deer, and other wild animals, many of which survived till the 16th century, and solitary remnants of which may still be occasionally met with in the less frequented districts; and small patches of primeval wood which have never been grubbed up. At this time the Thames not being, as at present, kept within its channel by artificial embankments, frequently overflowed the lower grounds, and occasionally changed its bed, as shown by the irregular deposition of gravel in various places, and the uniform covering of loam which is found above it. From the original Iberians, or Britons, whose bone and stone implements are occasionally turned up, the country appears to have been invested at a very early time by the Belgic tribe of the Tranovantwys, "the people beyond the stream," so called by the southern Britons from the situation of their country to the N. of the wide expanse of water then formed by the Thames. At the time of the Roman invasion (B.C. 54), this people, whose name was corrupted by Cæsar into Trinobantes, possessed two considerable cities, or fortified places; one occupying the eminence between the Thames and the Fleet brook, now the centre of modern London, and the other Camalodunum, or Colchester, in Essex, then the most important of the two stations. Owing to their intestine divisions the Trinobantes were unable to maintain a lengthened resistance, and were the first to submit to the Roman arms. After the complete subjugation of the island, this county was included in the division Flavia Cæsariensis, and the British town of Londinium, formed into the Roman settlement of Augusta, even then a place of great importance, though not dignified with the name of a colony. The Romans had another station, Sulloniacæ, in this county, at Brockley Hill, between Edgware and Elstree, and, according to some antiquaries, also Pontes; but this last was more probably in Berkshire. Until very recently, traces of Roman camps were visible in Hornsey Wood Fields, near Islington, at Stanmore, and at Shepperton, near the place where Cæsar crossed the Thames. These camps were formed to guard the line of Roman road, one of which, the ancient Watling Street, ran from Dowgate on the N. bank of the Thames, along the line of the modern Watling-street to Aldersgate, and thence in a north-westerly direction through Sulloniacæ (Brockley-hill) to Verulamium (St. Alban's); another, the Ermine Street, ran from Londinium northward by the camp at Islington to Enfield, thence diverging to Clay-hill, and so into Hertfordshire. A third Roman road led from Londinium, in the line of the present great western road, by Pontes, into Surrey and Berkshire, while another led eastward, along Old-street, through Bethnal-green, to Old Ford where it crossed the Lea into Essex. These Roman roads, diverging from Augusta, formed the highway of commerce and civilisation, and laid the basis of the after prosperity of the great city of London. This county was one of the earliest conquests of the Saxons, who planted it about the middle of the 6th century, and then named it Middle-Seaxe, or the territory of the Middle Saxons, from its relative situation to the three more powerful surrounding kingdoms of the East, West, and South Saxons, to the first of which it was a dependence for near three centuries, till the whole country was united under Egbert. In the division of the kingdom under Alfred, while the neighbouring counties of Essex and Herts were included in the Danelagh, Middlesex was retained as part of the English territory, and placed under the Alderman of Mercia. It has subsequently been the scene of the most eminent events, including the decisive battle of Barnet, but these belong not to the provincial but to the general history of England. Although an inland shire, Middlesex enjoys most of the advantages of a maritime province, being washed for 40 miles of its southern boundary by the tidal river of the Thames, which communicates with the North Sea and the English Channel. This noble stream, now the highway of commerce, bearing on its peaceful waters forests of masts, the property of all nations, derives its name from the Iberian language which was spoken on its shores before the first settlements of the Belgic Britons had displaced the primitive inhabitants. Its banks are in general low, and in some places even marshy, but much of the overflowed lands has been reclaimed, and within the last few years gigantic works for the embankment of the N. and S. sides of the river have been undertaken in connection with the metropolitan main drainage, which has been executed at the cost of several millions, and comprehends above 65 miles of tunnel, carried for the most part under streets and buildings in defiance of the most arduous difficulties conceivable. Above the port of London, the river is crossed by many bridges, connecting this county with Surrey, as London, Southwark, Blackfriars, Waterloo, Westminster, Vauxhall, Battersea, New, Battersea, Old, Putney, Hammersmith Suspension, Kew, Richmond, Kingston, Hampton Court, Chertsey, and Staines, besides Walton, now in ruins, and several railway bridges, which last are stupendous structures, connecting the railway systems of the N. and S. of England. There is also a tunnel under the Thames at Rotherhithe, excavated by Brunel from 1825 to 1843. Up to London Bridge the Thames is navigable for sea-going vessels of the largest tonnage, and the space between that bridge and the junction of the Lea forms the port of London, which has above half the whole commerce of England. The river in its upper part above the port of London, is only navigable for small steamers and barges, and requires locks to keep up the water, the lowest of which is at Teddington, between Kingston and Richmond bridges. The other rivers are the Lea, which touches the county below Waltham Abbey, and tracing the eastern boundary, joins the Thames at Blackwall. It is made navigable in its whole course by a series of artificial cuts. On the channels of the Lea, which are not used for navigation, are several mills. The Colne, which traces the western boundary, is only partially navigable, frequently flowing in several channels like the Lea, which enclose a number of islands, and turn many mills. Two channels from this river communicate with the Thames, one at Hampton Court, the other between Shepperton and Sunbury, while a third stream joins the Cran near the powder-mills at Hounslow. The Brent, which is a considerable stream, having a course of near 20 miles, rises just within the northern border of the county between the Hampstead and Stanmore hills, and after crossing a corner of Hertfordshire, flows by Finchley and Hanwell to the Thames at Brentford, where it has been made navigable for barges in its lower part. The Cran, or Yeddingbrook, rises between Harrow and Pinner, and after a circuitous course of 20 miles, in which it turns the powder-mills at Cranford, joins the Thames at Isleworth. The New River, an artificial cut made in the reign of James I. for the supply of pure water to the metropolis, enters the county on the N. side between Enfield and Cheshunt, and runs nearly parallel to the Lea, in a very winding course, to the spacious reservoirs at Hornsey, where it is allowed to filter, and thence conveyed by covered ducts to reservoirs in various parts of London. Until a recent period there were many other streams of more or less note, as the Fleet, formerly navigable to Holborn Bridge, the Walbrook, Langbourn, and Bayswater, but these are now converted into water-courses, and swallowed up by the metropolitan sewers. The principal canal is the Grand Junction, which enters the county from the N.W., and following the valley of the Colne to West Drayton, thence turns to the E. and crossing the Cran, joins the Brent near Hanwell, coinciding with the channel of that river till it joins the Thames at Brentford. From this canal at Bull Bridge, near Cranford, an important branch, called the Paddington canal, branches off to the E., and, passing through the central part of the county, terminates in the Paddington basin, where the Regent's canal continues the water communication along the N. and E. sides of the metropolis, by the Regent's Park, Islington, Hackney, Mile-End, and the Commercial-road, to the Thames at Limehouse. This last is nearly 9 miles long, and has several short branch cuts or basins in its course. The whole rainshed of the county is carried off by the Thames, into which the other rivers and streams discharge their waters, the surface having a general inclination from the borders of Hertfordshire, where a range of hills rises about 400 feet above the level of high water in the river.—The principal elevations are those of Hampstead, Highgate, Brockley, Hendon, Highwood, Harrow, and Barnet. The three first, though not more than 400 feet above sea level, are the highest in the county, and command extensive prospects. The vast plain skirting the road on the S. from Brentford, through Hounslow, to Longford, is nearly an entire flat, about 10 feet higher than the level of high water in the Thames; as is also the plain between Staines and Twickenham, while an extensive tract of meadow and pasture land, lying on the banks of the river Lea, is frequently flooded in winter, and sometimes in summer; and the whole of the Isle of Dogs, containing 500 acres, is below high water, and would be overflowed by every tide, were it not for the security of its banks.—Notwithstanding the large proportion of low and marshy ground in the vicinity of the metropolis, the climate is remarkably healthy, owing to the greater part of the soil being naturally dry, and the more moist situations being well drained, which prevents the waters from becoming stagnant. Another cause of the dryness and freshness of the air is said to be the fires and furnaces of London, in which no less than 3,000,000 tons of coal are annually consumed. The air being thus rarefied by heat, constantly ascends, carrying off the noxious vapours, and making way for a fresh supply to come in from every side. This causes that refreshing breeze which is experienced on Primrose-hill, and other eminences in the immediate vicinity of the metropolis. The valley of the Thames is likewise remarkable for the rarity of severe thunder storms, and the mildness of the winds, which seldom blow with sufficient violence to shake the grain out of the ripe ears of the standing corn. The prevailing winds are from the S.W. and N.E., which blow alternately about ten months of the whole year; and when the wind changes through the E. to the S., it is generally accompanied by heavy falls of rain. The hills to the N. shelter the more fertile lands in the plain from the effects of the biting N.E. winds in the spring, and render the climate well adapted for the production of every kind of agricultural produce, particularly vegetables and fruits, for which the London market furnishes an unlimited demand. Almost the whole of the land not built over in the parishes of Brentford, Chiswick, Hammersmith, Deptford, and Isleworth, is laid out in orchards, market-gardens, and nursery-grounds, about 3,000 acres of orchard running along the river towards Twickenham. The next most profitable farming is grass land, which affords two good crops every year, and lets from £4 to £6 per acre. The value of hay so near the metropolis is very great, and the abundant supply of labour enables the farmer to take advantage of a few days of fine weather to secure his crop. The most extensive meadows lie to the S.W. and E. about London, the Isle of Dogs, and along the banks of the Thames, where the fattening of cattle and the feeding of stock for the London market are extensively carried on. The marsh pastures on the banks of the Lea, bordering on Essex, are reckoned good for recruiting the strength of horses when they require rest and green fodder after having been over worked. Grass lambs and Dorset house lambs are bred for the early season, but not so much as formerly. There are no particular breeds of cattle and horses peculiar to Middlesex, but the short-horned and Alderney cows are largely kept for milk and calves; and cart and riding horses of superior strength and action are reared for the market. A considerable number of pigs and hogs is purchased by the distillers and millers to fatten; and round Uxbridge rabbits are extensively bred. The arable portion of the county lies chiefly along the banks of the Colne, on the borders of Buckinghamshire, and between the line of the Great Western railway and the Thames. The chief crops are wheat, barley, peas, beans, turnips, and clover for fodder. The farms are in general from 100 to 200 acres, but in the N.W. part of the county, including what was formerly Hounslow Heath, the holdings are more extensive, sometimes occupying from 300 to 1,200 acres. They are held on lease of 14 or 21 years, and every improvement in the management of the soil is readily adopted. The labourers' wages average from 12*s.* to 15*s.* per week, and the land lets from £2 to £3 per acre. Some of the farmhouses are old, timbered structures, but in general the farm-buildings and implements are of the best description. The system of cultivation is greatly modified by the short distance from an inexhaustible source of manure, and vast tracts of land formerly barren, have recently been reclaimed, as Hounslow Heath, Finchley Common, and Enfield Chase. The Isle of Dogs, formerly overflowed by the tides, is now secured by banks, and is reputed to be the richest grazing land in the county. It is divided and drained by ditches, which communicate with the Thames at low water by means of sluices.—The soil, when improved, may be described as consisting of a fertile sandy loam, intermixed with shells, flints, and gravel, on a substratum of blue or London clay, which prevails throughout the county. In a few places, as at Hampstead, Highgate, Muswell Hill, and Harrow, Bagshot sand occurs, containing fossils; and on the borders of Herts and Bucks the plastic clay crops out from beneath the London clay, as at Enfield Chase and Harefield, near Uxbridge. The thickness of the London clay varies from 45 to 240 feet, and rests upon a stratum of plastic clay of similar thickness. On several of the hills, where the soil is naturally thin and unproductive, as at Hampstead, Muswell Hill, and Highgate, the ground is nevertheless of great value on account of the fine situations for building. The mineral productions of this county are few, but the upper stratum is admirably adapted for the manufacture of bricks and tiles, which are made to an enormous extent, particularly in the districts of the W. and N.W. of London, where thousands of acres of the surface are dug out to a depth of from 4 to 10 feet. The average yield is 1,000,000 bricks to the acre for every foot in depth, and the profit from £4,000 to £20,000 per acre. After the brick earth has been used, the land is again levelled, ploughed, and laid down in grass, and by the aid of London manure, is converted into excellent arable land.—The manufactures are chiefly connected with the metropolis, and include silk weaving, which is extensively carried on in the parishes of Spitalfields, Shoreditch, and Bethnal Green, employing about 12,000 hands; clock and watch making at Clerkenwell, employing 4,000; cotton spinning, 1,200; woollen and worsted mills, 257; also the gunpowder mills at Twickenham, known as the Hounslow Mills; the ordnance small-arms factory at Enfield; extensive distilleries in the vicinity of London, which yield a revenue equal to that of all other distilleries in Great Britain; the breweries, too, are of great extent, as are also the soap and candle factories, chemical works, naval stores, &c. But these have been already described in connection with London (which see).—Besides the prodigious amount of the imports and exports of the port of London, innumerable small cargoes of coal, grain, malt, and merchandise of various descriptions are conveyed to the towns and villages by means of the inland barges on the Thames and the Lea. The river navigation, however, above the port of London, has recently declined owing to the more rapid transmission of goods by rail, so that some fears are entertained as to the feasibility of maintaining the locks in the upper portion of the stream.—The London and North-Western railway commences at Euston-square, and, after passing through a tunnel at Primrose-hill, traverses about sixteen miles of the country in a north-westerly direction by Willesden, Sudbury, Harrow, and Bushy, to Watford in Herts. The Great Western railway has its London terminus at Paddington, and traverses thirteen miles of this county by Ealing, Hanwell, and Southall, to West Drayton. The Great Northern has its terminus at King's Cross, and runs for fourteen miles by Hornsey and Barnet, to Hadley. The Great Eastern railway intersects only a small angle of the county, commencing at Shoreditch, and passes by Mile-End and Bow, across the Lea into Essex, whence the Cambridge section re-enters Middlesex near Tottenham, and continues just within its boundary to Waltham, throwing off a branch line near Edmonton to Enfield. The Midland Counties railway is now being continued to London, having previously used the Great Northern line to King's Cross. Besides the main lines, there are other short connecting lines and extensions, as the Metropolitan, Blackwall, North London, and West London extension, which facilitate the transmission of passengers and goods into the centre of London, which has now established its rank as the grand centre of railway concentration and radiation to the whole empire.—Second only in importance to the railways are the numerous roads, which radiate from the metropolis as a common centre to all parts of the kingdom, occupying a considerable part of the surface of this small county. The principal lines of road follow the direction of the old Roman ways. The south-western road proceeds along the old Silchester way to Brompton, and, passing by Brentford and Hounslow, crosses the Thames into Surrey near Staines, the ancient Pontes, finally leading to Salisbury and Exeter. Another section branches off near Hyde Park-corner, and crosses the Thames at Putney Bridge, going to Portsmouth; while a third section, branching from it at Hounslow, crosses the Colne at Colnebrook, and ultimately leads to Bath and Bristol. The north-western road proceeds along the old Watling Street, leaving London by Hyde Park-corner, and passes by Kilburn, Edgware, and Brockley Hill, the ancient Sulloniacæ, whence Watling Street turns off to St. Alban's, but the modern road continues through Stanmore to Watford in Hertfordshire. The north-eastern road proceeds along the old Ermine Street, leaving London at Shoreditch, and passes by Tottenham, Edmonton, and Enfield Wash, into Hertford and Cambridge shires. Between these two last-named lines of road runs the Great North road, which leaves London by Islington, and passes through Highgate and Barnet to South Mimms in Hertfordshire. The Oxford and Birmingham road leaves Oxford-street at Hyde Park-corner, and, passing through Acton, Hanwell, and Uxbridge, crosses the Colne in Buckinghamshire. The main eastern road commences from Cornhill, and follows the line of the old Roman way, by Whitechapel church to Bow Bridge, where it crosses into Essex, going to Romford, the ancient Durolitum, and to Colchester, the Roman Colonia. Another section of the same road leaves London by Shoreditch Church, and passing through Hackney, crosses the Lea at Lea Bridge, into Essex. The southern and south-eastern roads proceed from Middlesex by the metropolitan bridges through

Surrey. Besides these main roads there are others of little less consequence, as the Harrow road, passing through Paddington and Harrow to Rickmansworth; the Edgware-road, commencing at Hyde Park-corner, and passing through Paddington and Edgware to St. Alban's, where it joins the Great North road; the "Green Lanes," leading by Stoke Newington and Winchmore Hill to Enfield. Along all these roads, for at least ten miles out of London, numerous scattered villas and genteel residences, surrounded by gardens and lawns, have been erected for the convenience of wealthy citizens; and on a near approach rows and terraces of houses line either side of the way, interspersed with plantations of flowering shrubs and flower gardens.—Besides the metropolis, the great centre of attraction, there is throughout this county no great town or centre of population, though Brentford is considered the county town for the election of members of parliament and coroners for the county. The other market towns are Uxbridge and Staines for Corn, and Southall for cattle and sheep, also South Mimms and Barnet, celebrated for its horse and cattle fair. The other small towns or important villages are Edgware, Enfield, and Hounslow, formerly market towns, Acton, Bayswater, Bedfont, Bow, Bromley St. Leonard's, Brompton, Camden Town, Chelsea, Chiswick, Clapton, Dalston, Ealing, Edmonton, Finchley, Fulham, Hadley, Hackney, Hammersmith, Hampstead, Hampton, with the royal palace of Hampton Court, Harefield, Harrow-on-the-Hill, Hendon, Highgate, Hornsey, Isleworth, Islington—including Ball's Pond, Canonbury, Highbury, and Holloway, which are portions of the parish—Kensington, Kentish Town, Kilburn, Pinner, Poplar, Ruislip, Southgate, Stepney, Great Stanmore, Teddington, Tottenham, Twickenham, and Winchmore Hill. But all these places may be considered as suburban to the metropolis, "to which the whole county, indeed, forms, as it were, but a small demesne, filled with splendid mansions, comfortable seats, and elegant villas, and laid out in gardens, pastures, and enclosures of all sorts for its convenience and support." The metropolis contains the chief seats of the crown, legislature, government, ecclesiastical authorities, and a university; but a full description of these will be found under the article LONDON. The county is governed by a lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum, by two sheriffs chosen by the City of London, 33 deputy-lieutenants, and about 320 magistrates, besides police magistrates. It returns fourteen members to parliament in the place of eight before the Reform Bill, viz. four for the City of London two for the City of Westminster, two each for the new boroughs of Finsbury, Marylebone, and the Tower Hamlets, and two for the county at large, for which last the place of election is Brentford, and the polling-places Bedfont, Bethnal Green, Enfield, Edgware, Hammersmith, Hampstead, King's Cross, London (City), Mile-End, Uxbridge, and Westminster. For civil purposes it is divided into six hundreds, viz. Edmonton in the north-eastern part of the county, Elthorne in the W., Gore in the N., Isleworth in the S., Spelthorn in the S.W., and Ossulstone in the S. and E., this last being further divided into the Finsbury, Holborn, Kensington, London, and Tower divisions. Exclusive of the 105 parishes comprised within the cities of London and Westminster, there are 90 parishes and 23 extra parochial places or liberties, some of which belong to the Duchy of Lancaster or the Lieutenant of the Tower of London, who exercise separate jurisdiction. The City of London forms a county of itself, with independent jurisdiction, as does also the City of Westminster. But for the more important criminal causes all are under the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, at the Old Bailey, London, which sits monthly. Less heinous criminal offences are tried at the Sessions House, Clerkenwell, where also the county gaol and House of Correction are situated, also a separate court sits eight times a year at the Guildhall for the City of London, which is under the police jurisdiction of its own aldermen. The parts adjacent to the metropolis are watched by the metropolitan police, and have police offices and stipendary magistrates, but the remainder of the county is under the police jurisdiction of the county magistrates. The City of London has a body of police of its own, under the direction of the lord mayor and court of aldermen, and the metropolitan police are under the jurisdiction of two commissioners. It is included in the home military district, and for civil suits is within the immediate jurisdiction of the superior courts sitting in the metropolis. For ecclesiastical purposes it is wholly within the diocese of London, and is divided between the archdeaconries of London and Middlesex, comprising the rural deaneries Ealing, Enfield, Fulham, Hampton, Harrow, St. Pancras, Staines, and Uxbridge. The numerous churches and magnificent public buildings within the county will be described under London, Westminster, or the parishes in which they are situated. —The public parks include Hyde Park, St. James's, Regent's Park, and Victoria, with the cemeteries of Abney Park, East London, Kensington, Kensal Green, and Highgate. The royal palaces are Buckingham, St. James's, Kensington, and Hampton Court, with Bushy Park. Besides the royal palaces and a vast number of magnificent residences in the metropolis, there are numerous seats in this county distinguished for grandeur or elegance, as Fulham Palace, of the Bishop of London; Chiswick, of the Duke of Devonshire; Sion House, of the Duke of Northumberland; Richmond Gardens, Whitehall, of the Duke of Buccleuch; Osterley Park, of the Earl of Jersey; Bentley Priory, of the Marquis of Abercorn; Rose Bank, of the Marquis of Londonderry; Caen Wood, of the Earl of Mansfield; Gunnersbury, of Baron Rothschild; and Strawberry Hill, formerly the residence of the accomplished Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford; Holland House, of Lord Holland; Harefield Place, where Milton acted his Comus; and Wyer Hall at Tottenham; these three last named mansions are considered remarkably perfect specimens of ancient domestic architecture. The remains of antiquity include foundations of ancient Roman buildings, part of the walls of ancient London, Roman and British camps, implements, coins, religious houses, and bridges. [See article LONDON.]—In various parts of the county are springs of mineral water, some of which have been in great repute for their medicinal properties, as Acton, Bagnigge and Sadler's Wells, Clerkenwell, Hampstead, Hoxton, Tottenham, and White Conduit House; but none of them are now much frequented, except perhaps Hampstead, which is strongly chalybeate.

MIDDLESHAW, a post-office vil. in co. Dumfries, Scotland, near the town of Lockerby.

MIDDLESMOOR, a vil. and chplry. in the tnshp. of Upper Stonebeck, and par. of Kirkby-Malzeard, Upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Pateley Bridge, its post town, and 15 W. by N. of Ripon. It is situated on the river Nidd, on the border of an extensive moor. The village, which is small, is built on the summit of a hill overlooking the valley of the Nidd. In the vicinity are many subterranean passages and stalactite caves. The soil is clayey, on a subsoil of clay and rock. The population has recently been decreasing. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £117, in the patron. of the Vicar of Masham. The church is a stone edifice, erected in 1484, with a square tower containing one bell. In the interior are several monuments and an antique font. The charities comprise a rent-charge of £20, bequeathed by Simon Horner in 1809 for education. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a free school for boys and girls, partly endowed. A fair is held on the 14th September for cattle, sheep, and lambs.

MIDDLESTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Auckland St. Andrew, S.E. div. of the ward of Darlington, co. Durham, 3 miles N.E. of Bishop-Auckland. There is a coal mine belonging to the Black Boy Coal Company.

MIDDLETHIRD, a bar. in co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded in part by the Atlantic ocean and the bar. of Decies-without-Drum. It contains the pars. of Dunhill, Islandicane, Kilbride, Kilburne, Killoteran, Kilronan, Lisnakill, Reisk, and parts of Drumcannon, Kilmeadan, Newcastle, and Trinity without.

MIDDLETHIRD, a bar. in co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its boundaries are the bars. of Eliogarty, Slieveardagh, Iffa. and Offa, Clanwilliam, and Kilnemanagh. It is 12 miles long and the same in width at the broadest part. It contains the pars. of Ardmayle, Ballysheehan, Baptist-Grange, Barretts-Grange, Boytonrath, Brickendown, Colman, Cooleagh, Coolmundry, Dogstown, Drangan, Erry, Fethard, Gaile, Horeabbey, Kilbragh, Kilconnell, Killeenasleena, Kiltinan, Knockgraffon, Magorban, Magowry, Mora, Oughteragh, Peppardstown, Railstown, Rathcool, Redcity, St. Johnstown, St. Patricksrock, Tullamain, and parts of Cloneen, Dangandargan, Donaghmore, Graystown, Holycross, Relickmurry, and St. John Baptist.

MIDDLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashby, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Horncastle.

MIDDLETHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary Bishopshill, Ainsty of York, co. York, 2 miles S. of York. It is situated on the river Ouse, and contains Middlethorpe Hall. The village, which is small, is united to the North Riding for electoral purposes.

MIDDLETON, or MIDLETON, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles E. of Cork. It is a station on the Cork and Youghal railway. The par. is 2½ miles long by 2 broad, and contains, besides the larger part of the town of Middleton, the vil. of Ballinacurra. The surface consists generally of a fertile soil. It is traversed by the road from Cork to Waterford. The town is situated between the rivers Curra and Lewis, on an inlet from Cork harbour, called the river Middleton, or Anachora, here crossed by a stone bridge, and on the road from Cork to Waterford. It consists of one main street, with several smaller ones branching from it. The houses are generally of neat appearance. Middleton was formerly a parliamentary borough chartered in the time of Charles II., and returned two members to the Irish parliament till the Union, when it was disfranchised. It has a thriving trade, chiefly in corn, and there is a large distillery. The principal buildings are the market-house, court-house, bridewell, assembly rooms, fever hospital, dispensary, and union poor-house. There is a chief police station. General sessions are held in June and November, and petty sessions once a fortnight. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £708, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was rebuilt in 1825 by the late Board of First Fruits. It is situated in the town, and has a spire. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, one of which is in the town, besides the Convent of the Presentation with a large school attached. The public free school or college was founded in 1709 by Lady Elizabeth Villars. There are several day schools in the parish. Cahirmore Castle, formerly a seat of the Fitzgeralds, is now the residence of Lord Middleton's representative. This place was formerly called Castrachore, from Castre ni chore, i.e. "castle of the ford." A Cistercian abbey was founded here in 1182, and granted, together with Castleredmond, to the Broderick family in 1670, to whom Middleton gives title of viscount. Remains of the old church are seen here, likewise ruins of an hospital and the ancient Castleredmond. Middleton is the head of a Poor-law Union, containing 21 electoral divisions in co. Cork. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 14th February and May, 5th July, 10th September and October, and 22nd November.

MIDDLETON, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 1 mile S. of Sudbury, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Stour, and is wholly agricultural. The manor belonged to Earl Algar of Mercia, in the reign of Edward the Confessor. There are extensive chalk-pits. The surface is level, diversified by eminences. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £557. The church is an ancient structure, with a modern spire, containing one bell. The interior, which has been restored, contains an altar-piece of the "Annunciation," by Schiavone, also some stained-glass windows.

MIDDLETON, and NORTH MIDDLETON, vils. in the par. of Borthwick, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 7 miles S. of Dalkeith, and 13 S.E. of Edinburgh. They are situated on the old road from Edinburgh to Galashiels, and are entirely agricultural.

MIDDLETON, a par. and market town in the hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles W. of Oldham, 5 S. of Rochdale, and 6 N. of Manchester. It is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, and the Manchester and Rochdale canal passes within a mile of the town. The par., which is extensive, comprises the tnshps. of Ainsworth, Ashworth, Birtle-cum-Bamford, Great Lever, Hopwood, Middleton, Pilsworth, and Thornham. The manor was in early times in possession of the Bartons, and passed by marriage to the family of Assheton, to which belonged Sir Richard Assheton, who commanded the Middleton archers at the battle of Flodden. It is now chiefly the property of William Wagstaff, Esq., who is the present lord of the manor, and who holds courts leet and baron in October. In the time of the Commonwealth the parish is said to have contained 500 inhabitants, and till the end of the last century was only a small village, but since 1791, when it obtained a charter for holding a weekly market, it has rapidly risen into an important manufacturing town. It is situated in a fertile vale on the Irk, and extends into the parish of Prestwick-cum-Oldham. It is nearly a mile in length along the road from Manchester to Rochdale, and is well paved, drained, and lighted with gas. It is supplied with water from the Heywood waterworks. The affairs of the town are managed by a board of commissioners under a special local Act. Petty sessions are held fortnightly on Wednesdays at the sessions room. The chief trade of the town and neighbourhood is silk weaving, chiefly for the Manchester and Spitalfields houses; also cotton spinning, weaving, and bleaching; there are also extensive dye works, including the calico-printing works of Silas Schwabe and Co.: these last are some of the largest in England, employing upwards of 1,000 hands. Iron founding and machine making are carried on, and in the adjoining townships of Hopwood and Thornham are extensive collieries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £950. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a venerable structure with a low square tower. The more modern part was built in 1524 by Sir Richard Assheton and his wife Anne. In the interior is a wooden screen divided into seven compartments, in which are carved the shields and armorial bearings of several families connected by marriage with the Asshetons, the ancient lords of Middleton, whose burial-place was the S. aisle; there are also several brasses, an ancient font, and S. and N. windows in the chancel, decorated with ancient stained glass. In addition to the parish church there are two churches in the town—Holy Trinity, Parkfield, and Rhodes chapel-of-ease. In the parish are also the following district churches, viz. at Ainsworth or Cockey, Ashworth, Birch, Birkle, and Great Lever, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £136 to £33. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, Swedenborgians, and Lady Huntingdon's Connexion. The grammar school was established under royal charter dated August 11th, 1572, by Alexander Nowell, D.D., Dean of St. Paul's, London, who founded and endowed thirteen scholarships in Brazenose College, Oxford, for the benefit of this and other schools in the county. Two additional scholarships were subsequently founded in the same college by Samuel Radcliffe, D.D. There are also three National and three infant schools in connection with the Church of England, besides denominational and Sunday schools attached to the several places of worship. The annual wakes are held on the last Monday but one in August, a horticultural show on the same day, and an agricultural show is held in September yearly. Friday is market day.

MIDDLETON, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Lynn Regis, its post town. It is a station on the Ely, Lynn, and Dereham section of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the Middleton Slop Drain, which runs to the Wash at Lynn. About 1 mile E. are the remains of Middleton Tower, erected by the Lords Scales in the reign of Henry VI. The portion of the tower remaining is the brick turreted gateway, 54 feet by 27. The road from Lynn to Norwich passes through the parish. The surface is hilly, and the soil clay and marl. There are quarries of good Carr stone for building. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £432, and the vicarial for £313. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £315. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower, containing one bell. The charities consist of a fuel allotment. There is a chapel for the Wesleyans. In the vale of the Nar, 1 mile S., are the ruins of Blackborough Priory for Benedictine nuns, founded in the reign of Henry II. Amongst the ruins were discovered in 1834, three stone and two wooden coffins, containing perfect skeletons; also tesselated pavements, a gold seal ring, and other antiquities. Lewis Wolthincop Jarvis, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MIDDLETON, a district par. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 2¼ miles S.E. of Chirbury, and 6 N.W. of Bishop's Castle. Shrewsbury is its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The district includes Middleton, Priest-Weston, Rovington, and Wilmington tnshps., also part of Church-Stoke par., Montgomeryshire. On Stapeley Hill is "Medjice's Fold," a Druidical circle 30 yards in circumference. Several of the stones are still standing, one in particular, 6 feet high, but the majority of them have disappeared. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Chirbury. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a neat structure with a turret, containing one bell. There is a National school. Miss Stokes is lady of the manor.

MIDDLETON, a par. in the hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 3 miles E. of Bognor, its post town, and 3 S. of the Yapton railway station. The par., which is small, is situated on the coast of the English Channel, near Middleton Ledge rocks, and contains the hmlt. of Elmer. At the time of the Domesday Survey it was a considerable village, but has suffered greatly by encroachment of the sea. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £130. The church was erected in 1849 in lieu of the old one, which was destroyed by the encroachments of the sea.

MIDDLETON, a par. in the Tamworth div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 4½ miles S.W. of Tamworth, its post town, and 3 from Kingsbury railway station. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated on the Birmingham and Fazeley canal, which passes through the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is clay and gravel. The greater portion of the land is arable, with some woodland. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a neat structure with a square tower. The interior of the church contains several monuments of the Willoughby family, who take from this place the title of baron. Also one of Lord Ridgway, and two brasses of Judge Bingham, bearing date 1476. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a parochial school. Lord Middleton is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MIDDLETON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, Lonsdale ward, co. Westmoreland, 5 miles N.E. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, its post town. It is a station on the Ingleton branch of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the E. side of the river Lune, near Middleton Head. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A battle is stated to have been fought between the English and Scots, near the old bridge, where many human bones have been found. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkby-Lonsdale. The church, dedicated to the Holy Ghost, is a stone structure, built in 1634, containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum. There is an endowed parochial school for both sexes. Grimes Hill is the principal residence, being a stone mansion of recent erection, situated near the church.

MIDDLETON, a par. in the Bainton-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 8½ miles N.W. of Beverley, its post town, and the same distance S.W. of Driffield. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the Wolds, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £917. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a stone structure with a square tower, containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

MIDDLETON, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 1 mile W. of Pickering, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the line of the Whitby railway, and on the high road between Pickering and Kirby Moorside. The par. includes the tnshps. of Aislaby, Cawthorn, Cropton, Hartoft, Lockton, Middleton, Rosedale, East-Side, Turnhill, and Wrelton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of red sandstone and limestone, and the nether lands of strong clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £100. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. There are chapels-of-ease at Cropton and Lockton. The parochial charities produce about 10*s.* per annum. There is a parochial school, which is partly endowed, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Thomas Mitchelton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MIDDLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothwell, lower div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of Leeds, its railway station and post town, and 6 N. of Wakefield. The tnshp. contains the hmlt. of Bell Isle, and is wholly agricultural. There are numerous coal mines, from which is a tram-road to the Bradling wharf at Leeds, also quarries of excellent building stone. About a quarter of the township is covered with indigenous wood. The village, which is considerable, is built upon an eminence commanding extensive views of the surrounding country. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £125, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rothwell. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is a stone edifice with a spired tower, and was erected in 1846. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The principal residence is Middleton Lodge.

MIDDLETON, or MIDDLETON-ONE-ROW, a par. in the S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 5 miles E. of Darlington, its post town, and 3 from Yarm. It has a station on the Stockton and Darlington railway. It is situated on the river Tees, near Dinsdale Spa, and of late years has become a favourite watering-place. The soil consists of clay and loam. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £73 12*s.* 7*d.*, and the rectorial for £78 5*s.* 11*d.* The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £91. The church is dedicated to St. George. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, which goes to the school. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The foundations of Pountey's Bridge, thought to have been the first built across the Tees, are still visible. On the summit of a hill, near the bridge, is an artificial mount, encompassed by a fosse, supposed to be the site of a hermitage. Henry A. W. Cox, Esq., is lord of manor.

MIDDLETON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Saxmundham, and 2 E. by S. of Yoxford, its post town. The village, which is situated on the river Badingham, is wholly agricultural. The tithes, which were wholly appropriated to Leiston Abbey, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £373 17*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect. annexed to that of Fordley, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a thatched roof and spired tower, containing five bells. The interior of the church contains two brasses, bearing dates from 1510. The parochial charities produce about £3 9*s.* per annum. There is a church school and a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

MIDDLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ilkley, upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Ilkley, and 7 N.W. of Otley. It is situated on the river Wharfe, and includes a large portion of Middleton Moor. Attached to Middleton Lodge, the ancient seat of the Middletons, is a Roman Catholic chapel.

MIDDLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Belford, N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 1 mile N.W. of Belford. Middleton Hall is the principal residence.

MIDDLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Cottingham, hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 6 miles N.E. of Rothwell, and 2 S.W. of Rockingham. It is situated near the river Welland.

MIDDLETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.E. of Warrington. It is joined to Houghton-on-Arbury to form a township.

MIDDLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.W. of Lancaster. It is situated near the river Lune, on the coast of Morecambe Bay.

MIDDLETON, a tythg. in the par. of Longparish, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Andover. It is situated on the river Anton.

MIDDLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 1 mile E. of Oswestry.

MIDDLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bitterley, co. Salop, 2 miles N.E. of Ludlow. It is situated on a branch of the river Teme. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect.* of Bitterley, in the dioc. of Hereford. Sir William R. Boughton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

MIDDLETON, a tythg. in the par. of Freshwater, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 9 miles S.W. of Newport.

MIDDLETON, a vil. in the par. of Orwell, co. Kinross, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Kinross.

MIDDLETON-BY-WIRKSWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 1 mile N.W. of Wirksworth, its post town, and 2 miles S.W. of the Cromford railway station. The village is extensive, and a portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the marble quarries. This tnshp., in conjunction with Ible and Ironbrook Grange, forms a chplry. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Wirksworth. The church was erected in 1844, at an outlay of £1,200. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Independents, have each a place of worship. A school has recently been erected.

MIDDLETON-CHENEY, or CHENDUIT, a par. in the hund. of King's-Sutton, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.E. of Banbury, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Brackley. The village, which is extensive, is divided into two parts, upper and lower. It was here that the Earl of Northumberland defeated the Roundheads in 1646. Petty sessions are held at the Dolphin Inn monthly. An extensive trade is done in lace, and a few of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1769. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £423, in the patron. of Brazenose College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure with a pinnacled and spired tower containing a clock and six bells. The tower is ornamented with sculpture, and the S. porch has an ogee roof. The interior of the church contains several ancient monuments, and a piscina in good condition. The parochial charities produce about £62 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists, have places of worship. Miss Horton is lady of the manor.

MIDDLETON-GRANGE, an ext. par. place adjoining the chplry. of Aston-by-Sutton, co. Chester, 3 miles E. of Frodsham. It is situated on the river Weaver.

MIDDLETON-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, co. Stafford, 5 miles W. of Uttoxeter.

MIDDLETON-HALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ilderton, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Ilderton, and 1½ mile S. of Wooler.

MIDDLETON HALL, a demesne in the hunds. of Elvet and Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles E. of Carmarthen. It is situated near the river Teivi, and was built by Cockerell for Sir W. Paxton. The old seat of the Mydddletons is still standing in the grounds, also the Nelson pillar.

MIDDLETON-IN-TEESDALE, a par., market and post town, in the S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 10 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle. The par., which is extensive, is situated on the river Tees, and is bounded on the N. and E. by the pars. of Stanhope and Lynesack, and on the W. and S. by the cos. of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Yorkshire. It comprises the tnshps. of Middleton, Egglestone, Newbiggin, Forest and Frith. It is a polling-place for the S. division of the county. Courts leet and baron are held annually for the manor. The town, which consists of two irregular streets, is built on the sides of the hills, which surround an extensive green. It has a townhall, market-house, and savings-bank. In this parish are some lead mines belonging to the London Lead Company, which are worked by levels or hushings. About 2 miles above the town is Wynch Bridge, 70 feet in height and 2 in width, said to be the oldest suspension-bridge in Europe, and higher up the river are the cataracts of High Force and Cauldron Snout. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, valued in the king's books at £25 17*s.* 1*d., and in the patron. of the crown. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient structure with detached tower containing three bells. There is also a district church at Egglestone, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The charities produce about £38 per annum. There is an endowed parochial school. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists, have each a place of worship. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in April, 7th July, and second Thursday in September.

MIDDLETON-MALZOR, or MILTON, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 3½ miles S.W. of Northampton, its post town. The parish, which is small, is situated on the canal, and near the line of the Northampton railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £340. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is a neat structure with a spired tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £52 per annum. There is an infant school, also a place of worship for the Baptists. — Blake, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MIDDLETON, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, co. Northumberland, 8 miles S.W. of Morpeth. It is situated on Hart Burn and the river Wansbeck.

MIDDLETON, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Ilderton, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Wooler. It belongs to the Earl of Tankerville.

MIDDLETON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 5 miles S.W. of Tenbury, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Leominster. The parish, which is small, is irregularly built, and wholly agricultural. Apples are grown here extensively. The soil consists of clay, upon a subsoil of clay and stone. Old redstone is quarried here. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Kimbolton, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about 10*s.* per annum. Moor Abbey and Withers are the principal residences.

MIDDLETON-PRIORS, a tnshp. in the par. of Priors-Ditton, co. Salop, 6 miles S. of Wenlock. It is situated near Middleton-Baggot.

MIDDLETON-QUERNHOW, a chplry. in the par. of Wath, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York,

5 miles N.N.E. of Ripon. The village is small, and most of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and meadow and pasture.

MIDDLETON-SCRIVEN, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 5½ miles S.W. of Bridgnorth, its post town, and 16 from Shiffnal. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated 1 mile off the road from Bridgnorth to Cleobury-Mortimer. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The soil consists of marl and clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £115, besides a glebe of 33 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £170. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The fittings of the interior are of oak, and it has several stained windows. The Manor House is the principal residence.

MIDDLETON, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Ilderton, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S. of Wooler.

MIDDLETON, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 10 miles W. by S. of Morpeth.

MIDDLETON-STONEY, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 3 miles N.W. of Bicester, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Oxford. The village is small. It was formerly a market town, and had a castle belonging to William Longsford, which afterwards came to the Lacys. There are now but slight traces of the castle, but a mound of great elevation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £416 10s. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £600. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated in Middleton Park, and is of great antiquity. It has a square embattled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Villierses, and adjoining the N. side is a chapel used as a burial-place for the Jersey family. There are schools for both sexes, also an infant school, all of which are supported by the Countess of Jersey. The mansion of Middleton Park, erected on the site of an older building, which was destroyed by fire in 1753, is one of the principal seats of the Earl of Jersey, who is lord of the manor.

MIDDLETON, STONY, a chplry. in the par. of Hathersage, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 5 miles N.E. of Bakewell. The village, which is small, and chiefly inhabited by limeburners and miners, is situated on a branch of the river Derwent in Middleton Dale. Lord Denman has a seat here surrounded by plantations which break the monotony of the otherwise dreary pass of 2 miles long. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Hathersage. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an octagonal edifice rebuilt in 1759. There is a place of worship for Unitarians. The charities produce £23 per annum, of which £3 belongs to Turie's school.

MIDDLETON-TYAS-WITH-KNEETON, a par. in the wap. of E. Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Richmond, its post town, and 5 from Catterick. The parish, which is large, is situated on the great road leading from Catterick Bridge, across the river Swale, to Pierce Bridge, crossing the Tees into the county of Durham. The par. includes the tnshp. of Moulton, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is clay on a limestone subsoil. The impropriation belongs to the Hartley family. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £705, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1541. There is a parochial school for both sexes supported by voluntary contributions. Middleton Lodge, East Hall, and Morris House, are the principal residences. Leonard Lawley Hartley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MIDDLETON-UPON-LEVEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Rudby-in-Cleveland, W. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.E. of Yarm, its post town. It is situated on the eastern bank of the river Leven. The houses, which are few, are much scattered. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Rudby-in-Cleveland, in the dioc. of York. The chapel, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a small edifice, with a turret containing one bell. Viscount Falkland is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MIDDLETON-WITH-SMERRIL, a tnshp. in the par. of Youlgreave, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 1½ mile S.W. of Youlgreave, and 3 miles S.W. of Bakewell. In the neighbourhood is a Druidical circle called "Arborlowe's ring," and several barrows, in which Celtic antiquities have been found. Also the manor of the late Thomas Bateman, Esq., who formed a museum for the antiquities of the county. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the lead mines now in operation near the village. The land is partly in common. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans.

MIDDLETOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Alderbury, hund. of Cawrse, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.E. of Welshpool. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Welshpool branch of the Cambrian railway.

MIDDLETOWN, a par., and market town in the bar. of Tiranny, co. Armagh, Ireland, 9 miles S.W. of Armagh. It has a station at Tynan on the Ulster railway. The parish, which is small, is situated near the Ulster canal. The town, which is only a considerable village, was founded in 1770 by Bishop Sterne. It contains a market-house, police station, dispensary, fever hospital, and a large distillery. The business is chiefly in grain. Petty sessions are held in the town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £106, in the patron. of the Rector of Tynan. The church was built in 1793, partly by a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, a free school founded by Bishop Sterne, with an income from endowment of £70, and other schools. In the vicinity are the remains of Crifcairn and Adrgonnell castles. Wednesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in each month.

MIDDLEWICH, a par., post and market town, in the hunds. of Northwich and Eddisbury, co. Chester, 20 miles E. of Chester, 6 from Northwich, and 2 from the Winsford station on the London and North-Western line of railway. It is supposed to be the site of the Roman station called Condate, but the earliest notice of it is in the reign of Edward the Confessor, when it was held by the Earl of Mercia under the king. After the Conquest it was annexed to the earldom of Chester, and subsequently to the crown, under which it is held by the present lessee. The par. comprises the chplries. of Kinderton, Newton, Minshall, Vernon, Byley, and twelve tnshps. It is watered by the rivers Weaver, Wheelock, Croes or Crooke, and the Dane, which last here crosses the Grand Trunk or Trent and Mersey canal. The town of Middlewich is situated in the centre of the wiches or salt towns, hence the origin of its present name. It is lighted with gas, and contains several narrow streets with many thatched houses, although of late years it has been much modernised. The townhall is a modern erection. The upper part of the building is used for the holding of petty sessions and for public meetings, also by the literary and scientific institution and the savings-bank, while the lower part of the hall is used for provisions on market days. There are silk and cotton mills giving employment to a large number of hands, also corn mills. In the vicinity of the town are several brine springs, from which salt is made. About three parts of the land is in pasture and one-fourth arable. Constables are appointed at the court-leet of the lessee of the manor. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150. The parish-church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a noble structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Venables. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There are also two district churches, viz. Byley with Lees and at Minshull Vernon, the livings of which are perpet. curs, val. £100 each. There is a large National school for both sexes, erected in 1854. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in the months of February, April, and October.

MIDDLEWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Dawlish, co. Devon, 6 miles S.E. of Chudleigh.

MIDDLEZOY, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 6 miles S.E. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 4½ N. of the Athelney station. The memorable battle of Sedgmoor, between the forces of James II. and of the Duke of Monmouth, took place in the valley to the N. The village, which is small, is situated on the navigable river Parret, and on the high road to Bridgwater. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A portion of the parish has been assigned as a district to the new church at Boroughbridge. The soil is clayey on a subsoil of limestone. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1798. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £133, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. It contains a brass inscribed to the memory of an officer of the king's troops who fell in the battle of Sedgmoor. The register dates from 1756. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which is held an endowed Sunday-school. Richard Meade King, Esq., is lord of the manor. Trunks of oak and yew trees are frequently dug up in the marshes.

MIDDOP, a tnshp. in the par. of Gisburn, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliffe, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Colne, and 10 miles S.W. of Skipton. The township is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £70. The church is a modern edifice.

MIDDRIDGE and MIDDRIDGE-GRANGE, tnshps. in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 8 miles N. of Darlington, 4 S.E. of Bishop Auckland, and 2½ E. of Shildon. The township of Middridge-Grange partly belongs to Heighington parish. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists and a National school.

MID-FEARN, a station on the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway on the borders of cos. Ross and Sutherland, Scotland, 2½ miles from Bonar Bridge and 12 N.W. of Dornoch.

MIDGEHOLM, an ext. par. place in Eskdale ward, co. Cumberland, 7 miles E. of Brampton. This place gives name to the coal pits across the borders of Northumberland.

MIDGHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Thatcham, hund. of Faircross, co. Berks, 7 miles E. of Newbury, its post town, and 1½ mile from Woolhampton station on the Newbury line of railway. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Kennet, and on the Kennet and Avon canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient edifice, rebuilt by John Hillersdon in 1714. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Thomas Thorpe Fowke, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are a National school, supported by subscription, and almshouses, erected by the late William Poyntz, Esq.

MIDGHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Fordingbridge, co. Hants, 1 mile S. of Fordingbridge.

MIDGLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 5½ miles W. of Halifax, its post town, and three quarters of a mile from the railway station at Luddenden-foot. The township, which is straggling, is situated on the Manchester canal and railway, and includes parts of the vils. of Mythomroyd, Luddenden, and Luddenden-foot. The township of Midgley forms a portion of the N. side of the vale of Calder. A great part of it, being mountainous moorland, is uncultivated. There are some cotton and worsted mills, also a paper mill. At Charlesworth is a thick seam of plate coal, but from its depth and the want of sufficient drainage, it is difficult to work. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £170, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone edifice, with a square tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, which is distributed in bread among the poor widows weekly. The Independents, Wesleyans, and New Connexion Methodists have places of worship at Midgley. Thomas Riley, Esq., of Ewood Hall, is lord of the manor.

MIDGLEY, a vil. in the tnshp. of Shitlington, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Barnsley.

MIDHOPE, a vil. in the chplry. of Bradfield, par. of Ecclesfield, N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.W. of Peniston. Sheffield is its post town. It is situated on the river Dun, near Midhope-Over. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1818. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £70. There is a National school.

MIDHOPE, an ancient mansion on the N.W. border of the par. of Abercorn, co. Linlithgow, Scotland. It was formerly the seat of the earls of Linlithgow.

MIDHOPE BURN, a small river in co. Linlithgow, Scotland; runs in Linlithgow par., and flows 7 miles N.E. to the Frith of Forth at Nethermill.

MIDHURST, a par., post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Easebourne, Chichester rape, co. Sussex, 6 miles from Petworth, and 10½ N. by E. of Chichester. It is a station on the Midhurst and Petersfield branch of the London and South-Western railway. The town, which is ancient, is situated on the river Rother, connected, by means of the Rother navigation, with the rivers Arun, Wey, and the Thames. It is a polling-place for West Sussex. It was a large town prior to the Conquest, but is not mentioned in Domesday Survey. On the W. bank of the river Rother, near the church, rises a mound, on which was an ancient castle, formerly the seat of the Bohuns, who held the manor for many years, and in whose time it was created a minor barony or lordship. In 1547 King Edward VI. was entertained here with great splendour. It subsequently passed through several noble families, and finally became the property of the Earl of Egmont, its present owner. From Edward II.'s time Midhurst returned two members to parliament till the passing of the Reform Act, but since it has returned only one, with new bounds extending to the adjoining parishes, within a circuit of 4 miles, viz. Midhurst, Chithurst, Cocking, Didling, Easebourne, Graffham, Heyshot, and the adjoining parts of North and South Ambersham, Bignor, Wool-Lavington, Bepton, Woolbedding, Lynch, Stedman, Iping, Trollon, Sellham, and Lodsworth. The town is governed by a bailiff, who is returning officer, and is elected annually at the court-baron of the lord of the manor. It is well lighted, paved, and supplied with water. The streets are clean, and the houses generally well built. It contains a townhall, mechanics' institute, and savings-bank. Petty sessions are held every alternate Thursday for the lower division of the rape of Chichester, and the county court every alternate month at the townhall. Midhurst is the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising 26 parishes, 24 of which are in the county of Sussex, and 2 in that of Hants, but the poorhouse is situated at Easebourne. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £170. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, has a low embattled tower containing six bells. It has a stained window, also effigies, &c., of the Montagues of Cowdray House. The church has been entirely restored and enlarged at great expense. The register dates from 1563. The parochial charities produce about £179 per annum, of which Ognell's Charity for poor persons produces £145. There is a National school for both sexes, and formerly an endowed grammar school, but which is now disused. There are places of worship for the Calvinists and Baptists. Cowdray Lodge is the principal residence. It is situated in an extensive wooded park, in which are the ivy-mantled ruins of Cowdray House, destroyed by fire in 1793. The Earl of Egmont is lord of the manor. Market day is Thursday, chiefly for corn. Fairs are held on the 6th April, 29th October, and Whit-Tuesday, for cattle.

MIDLEM, or MIDHOLM, a vil. in the par. of Bowden, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Melrose. It is situated on the road from Selkirk to Kelso. There is an Original Secession church, also a parochial school.

MIDLETON. See MIDDLETON, co. Cork, Ireland.

MIDLEY, a par. in the lib. of Romney-Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 2 miles N. of Lydd, and 3 S.W. of New Romney, its post town. It is a small agricultural place, containing only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £129. The church is in ruins.

MIDLOE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 3 miles N.W. of St. Neot's. It is situated near the river Kym.

MIDMAR, a par. in the district of Kincardine O'Neil, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It contains the old par. of Kinnairney, and extends about 7 miles from E. to W. in length, with an extreme breadth of 5½ miles. It is bounded on the S. by the co. of Kincardine, and on the other sides by the pars. of Kincardine O'Neil, Cluny, and Echt. The surface is hilly, comprising a portion of Fare Hill. About one-fourth of the parish is in moss and moorland, and upwards of 1,000 acres under plantation; the remainder is in good cultivation. The soil is chiefly clay, alternating with sand and loam, upon a subsoil of gravel, but the underlying rocks are granite and whinstone. The vil. of Midmar is about 7 miles N.E. of Kincardine O'Neil, and is situated in the centre of Mar, under Fare Hill, which rises 1,793 feet above sea-level. It is traversed by the road from Aberdeen to Tarland. The Banchory station on the Deeside railway is in the S. part of the parish. This par. is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Neil, and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown and Sir W. Forbes, Bart. The minister has a stipend of £223. The parish church was erected in 1787. It contains a tomb of Professor Meston, the poet. There are an United Presbyterian church and a parochial school. At Corrachie Vale is the Queen's Chair, and a three-syllable echo. It was in this parish that Murray routed Queen Mary's general, Huntley; and in the vicinity are traces of Druidical circles, also of a cairn where a Douglas fell in the battle between Wallace and Cumming.

MIDNEY, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Somerton, co. Somerset, 13 miles S.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated near the bridge over the river Carey.

MIDSOMER-NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Chowton, co. Somerset, 10 miles S.W. of Bath, its post town, 8 N.W. of Frome, and 2 W. of Radstock. The village is situated in a valley betwixt the branches of the Somer rivulet, from which the parish derives its name. The par. includes the hmlts. of Welton, Clapton, Clandown, and Downside. There are several good shops in the village, which is lighted with gas, also breweries and malthouses, and a market hall for corn and cattle, opened in 1860. The soil varies according to position, it being in the valleys clay, and in the more elevated places light earth, with white lias stone a few inches below. There are several collieries in the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £275, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The parish church, dedicated to St. John, is a stone structure with a square tower containing eight bells and a clock. It was rebuilt in 1830 on the site of the older one. In a niche in the tower is a statue of Charles II., by whom three of the above-mentioned bells were presented. The interior of the church contains several tablets, and in the chancel is a stained window. In addition to the parish church, there are two district churches, viz. at Downside and Clandown, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* val. £101 and £18 respectively. The register dates from 1697. Mrs. Harris's school, founded in 1721, with an annuity of £50 for the education of forty boys, is now united with the parochial school for both sexes. An infant school was erected in 1830, and a schoolroom was built in 1840 in which the Sunday-school is held. In the old endowed schoolroom a reading-room and library has been established. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Courts leet are held twice a year by the Duchy of Cornwall, to which the manorial rights of Midsomer-Norton belong. Welton, the other manor, is held by the Dean and Chapter of Christchurch, Oxford. The market for corn and cattle is held on the first Tuesday in each month, and a cattle fair on the 25th April.

MIDTOWN-ARDMALIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Cloncha, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Malin. It is situated not far from Malin Head.

MID-VILLE, a parochial tnshp. in the E. div. of the hund. of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.E. of Boston, its post town, and 4 E. of New Bolingbroke. The township was rendered independent of any parish by Act of Parliament in 1812, on occasion of an extensive drainage of the fen lands. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £81, in the patron. of trustees. The church is a brick structure with a bell turret.

MIEN WATER, a feeder of the river Annan, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It rises above Middlebie, and joins the Annan below Ecclesfechan.

MIGDALE, a loch in the par. of Criech, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 1 mile E. of Bonar-Bridge. It is situated near Dornoch-Frith, and is about 2 miles in length by 1 in breadth.

MIGLO, a head stream of the Eden, co. Fife, Scotland. Its course is eastwardly through the par. of Strathmiglo.

MIGVIE, an ancient par., now joined to that of Tarland, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

MIKRY ISLAND, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Leith. It forms a shoal in the Frith of Forth.

MILBORNE-CHURCHSTONE, a tythg. in the lib. of Dewlish, co. Dorset, 3 miles N.W. of Bere Regis.

MILBORNE-PORT, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, co. Somerset, 3 miles E. of Sherborne, its post town, and 8 S. of Wincanton. It has a station on the London, Yeovil, and Exeter section of the South-Western railway. It is situated on the old London road to Exeter, and on the line of the Salisbury and Yeovil railway. The par. includes the tythg. of Kingsbury-Regis and the hmlt. of Milborne-Wick. Milborne-Port was a place of importance prior to the Conquest. It is a borough, and was formerly a market town by prescription, returning two members to Parliament from the 26th to the 35th of Edward I., when it ceased to exercise the power till 1628, and continued to be represented till disfranchised by the Reform Act. A court-leet is held in October, at which two of the nine capital bailiffs preside, and appoint two sub-bailiffs, all being under the supervision of the chief constable of Somerset. The magistrates hold their meetings every Wednesday and one Monday in the month. The town, which is still considerable, is irregularly built, containing many detached houses. It is situated on the road from Yeovil to Shaftesbury, at the foot of a hill adjoining the river Ivel. The Guildhall is an old building, with a Norman doorway and the remains of a market cross: The county court is held at Wincanton. A brisk trade is done in gloves and leather dressing, which has superseded the coarse linen trade formerly carried on. The soil is of various kinds, but generally fertile. Stone of an inferior quality is quarried for rough buildings and for mending the roads. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £525, and the vicarial for £210. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £233. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a cruciform structure with a quadrangular tower, containing eight bells. The church has been thoroughly restored, and the churchyard enlarged and reconstructed. The parochial charities produce about £39 per annum. There are National, British, and Sunday schools for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship, to which schools are attached. The Board of Guardians meet on Wednesdays at the union poorhouse in Wincanton. Fairs are held on the 5th June and 28th October.

MILBORNE ST. ANDREW, a par. in the lib. of Dewlish and hund. of Piddletown, co. Dorset, 8 miles S.W. of Blandford-Forum, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Bere Regis. Milborne, which was formerly a market town, is now a small agricultural village. The par. contains the tythg. of Milborne-Churchstone, and was given by Athelstane to Milton Abbey, but at the Dissolution came to the Mortons, Pleydells, &c. Wire buttons are manufactured here. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150, and the vicarial for £235. The living is a vic.* with that of Dewlish annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £234. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure. It has a Norman doorway, which has been recently restored. The interior has tombs of the Mortons, Pleydells, &c. Cardinal Morton, Archbishop of Canterbury, in the reign of Henry VII., was born in this parish. The register dates from 1660. There is a parochial school. In the parish is an oblong double-intrenched camp, seven acres in extent. Dewlish House is the principal residence. A fair for cattle, &c., is held on the 30th November.

MILBORNE-STILEHAM, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Bere-Regis, co. Dorset, 7 miles S.W. of Blandford. It adjoins Milborne St. Andrew.

MILBOURN, a tythg. in the par. of St. Paul, Malmesbury, hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 1 mile N.E. of Malmesbury.

MILBOURNE WITH MILBOURNE GRANGE, a chplry. in the par. of Kirkby Thore, co. Westmoreland, 6 miles N. of Appleby. It is situated on the line of the Roman Maidenway, near Milbourne Fells or Forest. It includes the hmlts. of Milbourne Grange and Gullom Holme. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £95. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a structure of the early part of the 14th century. The charities produce £5 per annum, which goes towards the support of a school. At this place a Roman altar was found, and at Green Castle are traces of a British camp.

MILBURN AND MILBURN GRANGE, tnshps. in the par. of Ponteland, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles W. of Ponteland, and 9 N.W. of Morpeth. The townships are situated on the river Pont, and were given by Simon-de-Diveliston to Hexham Priory. After the Dissolution, they came through the Horsleys to R. Bates, Esq., of Milburn Hall, in whose family they still remain. Coal and limestone are obtained.

MILBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirby-on-the-Moor, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, half-a-mile N. of Boroughbridge. It is situated near the river Ure, which separates it from Aldborough, and which was crossed by a wooden bridge before the Conquest. It is joined to Humberton.

MILCOMBE, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Bloxham, co. Oxford, 5 miles S.W. of Banbury, its post town. It is situated near the river Snere, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1793. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £112. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure with a tower. The charities produce about £22 per annum, realised from town lands. There is a place of worship for Baptists.

MILCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Weston-on-Avon, Alchester div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 2½ miles S.W. of Stratford. It is a station on the Stratford branch of the West Midland railway. The hamlet is situated on the river Avon, and has ruins of the old seat of the Greville family, of whom Lodowick Greville was pressed to death for the crime of murder in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

MILDEN, or MILDING, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 4 miles E. of Lavenham, its post town, 3 S.W. of Bildeston, and 7 from Sudbury. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. It is situated on the river Brett. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £340. At the rectory is a library of early writers on Divinity, left by the Rev. W. Burkitt. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £320. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains a monument to James Allington, bearing date 1626. The edifice has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum.

MILDENHALL, or MINAL, a par. in the hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts, 1½ mile N.E. of Marlborough, its post town, and 9½ miles W. of Hungerford. It is situated on the river Kennet, and contains the tythgs. of Poulton and Stitchcomb. Near Folly Farm is the site of the Roman station Cunetio, where many coins, tessellated pavements, &c., have been found. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is hilly, consisting partly of chalk downs. The soil is clay and chalk, mixed with flints. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £740. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £756. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The interior of the church is lined with polished oak, and has pews and pulpit of the same, admirably carved. There is a tablet to the Rev. Charles Francis, M.A., who was rector of this parish thirty-three years. The parochial charities produce about £95 per annum, of which £90 goes to Francis's Free Protestant school.

MILDENHALL, a par., post, and small market town in the hund. of Lackford, co. Suffolk, 5 miles N. of the Kennit railway station, and 9 N.E. of Newmarket. At Mildenhall Road is a station on the Great Eastern railway; it is situated on the river Lark, a tributary of the Ouse, and near the line of the Great Eastern railway. The Mildenhall Drain and the Drove pass in the vicinity. The par. includes the hmlts. of Beck Row, Burnt Fen, Holywell Row, West Row, and Wilde Street. It is a polling place for West Suffolk, and a petty sessions town. The manor was given by Edward the Confessor to find the Bury monks in wheaten bread. In 1567 a great part of the town was consumed by fire. The town is lighted with gas and abundantly supplied with water. It has one principal street and several smaller ones, besides detached portions reaching towards the fens on the N.W. It contains several good shops and hotels, also a mechanics' institution, bank, and police station with magistrates' room adjoining, in which the county courts are held monthly. The board of guardians meet at the workhouse weekly. There is a corn mill, also silk factory. A great portion of the surface is fen land. The soil is light and sandy, with a subsoil of chalk and clay. The latter is the fen districts. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £369. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a stone structure with a tower, containing a clock and five bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font, sedilia, and numerous monuments, among which are the effigies of Sir Henry North and family. The church was restored in 1851. The parochial charities produce about £150, £40 of which goes to Hanmer's almshouses. There are four schools for both sexes, two of them entirely supported by the Bunbury family. A Sunday-school is held in the boys' schoolroom. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. On the N. side of the town is a cemetery with a chapel in the centre. Sir Henry Bunbury, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Many British and Roman antiquities were discovered here in 1833. Market day is Friday. An annual fair for wool is held on the 11th October.

MILDRIGGEN, a tributary of the river Bladenoch, rises in the par. of Kirkinner, co. Wigtown, Scotland.

MILE-END, a vil. in the par. of Barony, co. Lanark, Scotland, adjoining Glasgow, of which it is a populous suburb.

MILE-END, or MYLANDE ST. MICHAEL, a par. within the lib. of the borough of Colchester, co. Essex, 1 mile N. of Colchester. It is situated on the line of the Great Eastern railway near Mile-End Common. The greater part of the parish is the property of the corporation of Colchester, to whom it was given by Henry I. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of woodland and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £521. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Abbots' Hall was a seat of the abbots of St. Osyth.

MILE-END, OLD and NEW TOWNS, hmlts. in the par. of Stepney, Tower div. of the hund. of Ossul-stone, co. Middlesex, 2 miles E. of St. Paul's Cathedral, London. Here are stations on the Great Eastern and North London railways. The two towns form one of the most extensive suburbs of E. London, stretching in a line from W. to E. along the principal road to Essex, and forming part of the metropolitan borough of the Tower Hamlets. The New Town covers about a quarter of a mile square to the N. of the Whitechapel-road, and is bounded by the parishes of Bethnal Green and Spitalfields, while the Old Town is 2 miles in length by half a mile broad, and lies between the Commercial-road and the Great Eastern railway. The latter is traversed by the Regent's canal and the Mile-End-road, and is only partially built over. In the rebellion under Jack Cade, in the reign of Henry VI., the insurgents encamped here for some days, threatening the metropolis. At the commencement of the Civil War in the reign of Charles I. earthworks were thrown up here by order of Parliament for the defence of the City, and in 1645 Mile-End was held by the Parliamentary general the Earl of Essex. Many of the streets are well built, but others are only partially paved and lighted with gas, and the houses of an inferior class. There are several handsome ranges of buildings and fine squares in the Old Town, as Henry, Sidney, Arbour, Trafalgar, and Tredegar; also Beaumont Place, where is situated the philosophical institution built by J. Beaumont, Esq., in 1840, at a cost of £6,000. Here are Charington's and other extensive breweries, a large distillery, floor-cloth manufactories, a tobacco-pipe manufactory, rope walks, docks, timber and corn wharfs on the Regent's canal, &c. Besides about a dozen churches and chapels, some of which are spacious, there are numerous public buildings, including the Baptist College, founded in 1810, and situated in the New Town, the Whitechapel Union poorhouse also in the New Town; the City of London and Stepney poorhouses in the Old Town, the former an imposing structure with a chapel and a campanile clock tower 90 feet high, and covering 4½ acres; a court-house for the K. division of the Metropolitan police; Mile-End public offices, commercial gas works; East London lying-in institution; Newy Tozadik, or German Jews' hospital and Asylum; Portuguese Jews' hospital; the Skinners', Vintners', Sailmakers', Drapers', Seamen's, Judge Fuller's, and Fisher's almshouses, with chapels, &c., also numerous foundations and other schools, water works, East London and part of the Tower Hamlets cemeteries; two large cemeteries belonging to the Portuguese Jews, and one to the German or Dutch Jews, in which are interred several of the Rabbins and other distinguished Jews. [See articles LONDON and STEPNEY.]

MILEHAM, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N.E. of Litcham, its post town, and 6 miles E. of the Dunham railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. There are remains of a castle erected by Allan, son of Flaald, and ancestor of the Fitz Alans, earls of Arundel, to whom William I. gave the manor. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £645, 15*s*. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £513. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing four bells, and in the nave is a stained window. There are several monuments of the Pepys, Strange, and Barnwell families. The register dates from 1538. Sir Edward Coke, the eminent lawyer, was a native of this parish. The parochial charities produce about £65 per annum, of which £12 goes to Elwyn's free school. The Rev. C. B. Barnwell is lord of the manors of Mileham and Beeston.

MILES-PLATTING, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Manchester, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N.E. of Manchester. It is a station on the Leeds railway. The hamlet is situated near Collyhurst Hall.

MILESTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kilsaran, bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Castle Bellingham. Milestown House is the principal seat.

MILFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles from Ford, and 6 N.W. of Wooler. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Till, and is the Maelmain of Bede, where the Saxon kings of Bernicia had a seat. S. of the village is Milfield Plain, where Bulmer gained a victory over the Scots a few days before the battle of Flodden. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Milfield Hall is the principal residence. Roman remains have been found at different periods, including an urn containing ashes and burnt bones, discovered in 1823 under an immense heap of stones.

MILFORD, a par. in the hunds. of Christchurch and Ringwood, co. Hants, 4 miles S.W. of Lymington, its post town. It is bounded on the S.E. by the Isle of Wight Channel, and is a coastguard station near Hurst Castle. The par. includes the tythgs. of Key-Haven, Efford, and Pennington. A rivulet, which rises in the New Forest, flows through the parish, and is well stocked with trout and other fish. The surface is varied, and includes about 230 acres of unenclosed common. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £92, and the vicarial for £290. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £279, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The parish church is a stone structure, with a spired tower containing a clock and five bells. There is also a district church at Pennington, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, the produce of land, which is distributed to the deserving poor not receiving parochial relief. There is a National school, also a girls' school. Newlands, Rook Cliff, Efford House, Kivernells, and Ivy Cottage are the principal residences.

MILFORD, a vil. in the tnshp. and par. of Duffield, co. Derby, 2 miles S. of Belper. It is situated on the river Derwent, near the line of the Midland Counties railway. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in cotton spinning, and some in the mines. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

MILFORD, a chplry., seaport town, and borough, in the par. of Steynton, hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 6 miles N.W. of Pembroke, and 285 from London by the Great Western and South-Western railways, which last has its terminus at New Milford, the point of departure for the Irish and Brazilian steamers. The town is situated between two creeks on the right-hand side of Milford Haven, and about 6 miles from its mouth. It is entirely of recent origin, having been commenced in 1784 by the Hon. C. F. Greville, who inherited the property from his uncle, the famous Sir William Hamilton, by whom an Act of Parliament had been obtained for the formation of quays, making roads, regulating the police, &c. The town was designed according to a regular plan, the streets running from E. to W. facing the harbour, to be crossed at right angles by others; but the sanguine expectation of the founder not being realised, the works were discontinued. The portion of the town already finished consists of three parallel streets, ranged along the slope of the hill, commanding views of the harbour, which here spreads into a spacious reach, having the appearance of a lake. The inns, shops, stores, and public buildings are situated in the upper streets, the lower being chiefly occupied as private residences, let at an almost nominal rental. The principal buildings are the church, observatory with an extensive collection of instruments, custom house, and "Lord Nelson" hotel: this last is a spacious building with good accommodation for visitors. Shortly after the town was commenced a dockyard was formed after a plan by Lord Spencer, and several men-of-war were built here, but the dock was subsequently (1811) removed to Pater Church, now called Pembroke Dock. This arrangement, followed by the removal of the Irish post-office and packet establishment, greatly depopulated the place, and reduced trade to stagnation. The re-establishment of lines of steamers to Ireland and Brazil, and the anticipated completion of the great chain of railway communication with Manchester and the northern manufacturing districts, as also with Fishguard and Cardigan, when accomplished, cannot fail to bring commerce to the port, in anticipation of which the Hubberston Docks have been commenced, and it is asserted that the New Milford Docks, and in all probability Newton Noyes Ocean Pier will be carried out as well. One striking peculiarity of Milford is that its climate is nearly twenty degrees milder than in any other part of England. It has recently been made a contributory borough to Pembroke in returning one member to parliament. The jurisdiction of the port extends to the whole haven and along the entire coast from near Laugharne, in Carmarthenshire, to St. David's Head. It is under the control of a lord high admiral and a vice-admiral of the port, a harbour master, and other officials. The whale fishery was formerly prosecuted with considerable success, but is now entirely discontinued. The finest pickled oysters are sent from this port. The shores abound with limestone, which is quarried, and in places veins of copper ore have been found but partially worked. One reason which prevented the government adopting Milford as a naval arsenal, though Lord Nelson declared it the finest and most extensive harbour in the known world, capable of floating more than the whole navy of England in perfect safety, was the difficulty of securing it against hostile assaults; and this objection has not yet been entirely overcome, though the government have recently constructed fortifications at various points, as Popton, South Hook, Blockhouse, Dale, the Stack Rock, and Thorn Island. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, was erected in 1808, chiefly at the expense of the Hon. C. F. Greville, on a site originally intended for the centre of the town. The windows are ornamented with stained glass, and the interior contains a vase of red porphyry, brought from Egypt by Dr. Pococke, and inscribed to the memory of Admiral Nelson; it was presented as a font, but was pronounced too heathenish. There is also the twisted vane of the mainmast of the French admiral's ship L'Orient, blown up at the battle of Aboukir. A vase of Derbyshire marble forms the baptismal font. A little to the E. are the remains of the old chapel of St. Catherine, converted into a powder magazine since the building of the new church. Oyster fishery at Milford has of late been seriously interfered with by the oysters being caught and taken to other districts in order to be laid down in foreign beds. The Deep Sea Fishery Commissioners have recently visited Pembrokeshire, and acting upon their recommendation, and the powers contained in an old local Act, the county authorities have determined to make by-laws for the better preservation of the fishery. When these are carried out it is expected that the Milford Haven oyster fishery will be one of the most productive in the kingdom.

MILFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Witley, second div. of the hund. of Godalming, co. Surrey, 1½ mile S.W. of Godalming, its post town. It is a station on the Guildford, Godalming, and New Portsmouth branch of the South-Western railway. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £90. There is a National school, also a chapel for Independents.

MILFORD, a tythg. in the pars. of Laverstock and St. Martin, hund. of Underditch, co. Wilts, half a mile E. of Salisbury, of which city it is a suburb.

MILFORD, a tnshp. in the chplry. of Little Ness, par. of Baschurch, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, and 1 mile E.N.E. of Great Ness.

MILFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Baswick, E. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 3 miles S.E. of Stafford. It is situated on the Worcester canal.

MILFORD, a vil. in the bar. of Orrery, co. Cork, Ireland, 7 miles W. by S. of Charleville. It is situated on the river Deel.

MILFORD, a vil. in the bar. and co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. by W. of Carlow. It is a station on the Carlow branch of the Great Southern and Western railway.

MILFORD, NEW, or NEYLAND, a vil. in the par. of Llanstadwell, and borough of Milford, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N.W. of Pembroke, and 285 from London by the Great Western and South Wales railways, which last has its terminus at this point, running down to the water's edge for the conveyance of goods and passengers aboard the Irish steamers. The village, which is modern, is situated on a creek of Milford Haven, directly opposite Pater, with its extensive docks, and Hobbs Point.

MILFORD, NORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby Wharf, wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Tadcaster. It is joined to Kirkby Wharf to form a township.

MILFORD, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Sherburn, partly within the lib. of St. Peter's, but chiefly in the upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 1 mile W. of Milford Junction, its post town and railway station, 4½ miles N.E. of Ferry-Bridge, and 6 N. of Pontefract. It is a small agricultural village, situated near the intersection of the Leeds and Selby and North-Eastern railways. In excavating for the Leeds and Selby railway an ancient burial-ground was discovered, supposed to have belonged to one of the four chapels formerly attached to Sherburn, according to Domesday Book. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £104, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is a modern structure and contains one bell. There are National and Sunday schools for both sexes; also places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Lord Ashtown is lord of the manor.

MILITARY CANAL, THE. It extends for 23 miles along the S. coast of Kent, beginning at Sandgate, and, passing round Romney Marsh, terminates at Cliffe End, in Sussex. It is 90 feet broad and 18 deep, and is defended by a parapet, having been intended as a kind of outwork in connection with the martello towers.

MILK HAVEN, a harbour on the coast of Sligo, Ireland, 4 miles N. by E. of Grange. It has 12 feet water, with a sandy bottom.

MILKHOUSE-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Cranbrook, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 1½ mile N.E. of Cranbrook, its post town, and 4 miles S. of Staplehurst railway station. It is now formed into an ecclesiastical district. In the village the manufacture of hop-bagging is carried on. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £120. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone structure with a tower. The church is endowed with £1,000 invested in government securities. The old castle of Sissinghurst, formerly the seat of Sir Richard Baker, author of the "English Chronicle," is now in ruins.

MILK RIVER, a tributary of the river Annan, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It rises under Little Hartfell, and flows 14 miles S.W. past Tundergarth.

MILLAND, a vil. in the par. of Trotton, Chichester rape, co. Sussex, 4½ miles N.W. of Midhurst.

MILLANDVILLE, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. and lib. of Winchester soke, co. Hants, adjacent to Winchester, within which city it is included.

MILLAR'S DALE, a spot on the river Wye, under Raven's Tor, co. Derby, 4 miles N.W. of Bakewell.

MILLARSTON, a vil. in the par. of Paisley Abbey, co. Renfrew, Scotland. It is situated near Paisley, within which borough it is included.

MILLBANK, a vil. in the par. of Ayton, co. Berwick, Scotland, 10 miles E. by N. of Dunse. It is situated on the river Eye near the line of the North British railway, and is chiefly noted for an ancient paper-mill.

MILLBANK, a hmlt. in the par. of Thornhill, wap. of Lower Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Dewsbury. It is situated near the river Calder and the line of the Leeds and Manchester railway. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the Stanfields colliery, and some in the woollen mills.

MILLBANK, a hmlt. and suburban district of London, in the par. of St. John, Westminster, 2 miles S.W. of St Paul's. It is situated between Westminster and Vauxhall bridges, on the N. bank of the Thames, and had a seat of the Mordaunts and Grosvenors. The principal buildings are the Penitentiary, situated beyond the Horseferry, and Holy Trinity Church, at Besborough Gardens, built by Archdeacon Bentinck in 1849. See WESTMINSTER.

MILLBAY, a vil. in Luing Island, par. of Kilbrandon, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated near Loch Melford, and was solely built for the occupation of those employed in the slate quarries.

MILL-BAY, a bay on the E. side of Stronsay, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland.

MILLBREX, a district in the par. of Monquhitter, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 5 miles E. of Turriff. It is situated on a branch of the river Ythan.

MILLBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Liversedge, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Huddersfield. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Almondbury.

MILLBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Cathcart, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Glasgow. It is situated near Pollockshaws, on the banks of the river White Cart.

MILLBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Redbornestoke, co. Bedford, 2 miles W. of Ampthill, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Bedford. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The women are employed in making pillow lace and plaiting straw. The land is principally arable. There was formerly a Benedictine cell to St. Alban's Abbey, which was removed to Beaulieu in Herts in 1119. A chain of hills intersects the parish nearly in the centre. The soil in the S. part of the parish is of a light sandy nature, but in the N. a strong clay. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1795. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £343, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, which is situated on rising ground about the centre of the village, is dedicated to St. Michael. It has a tower containing two bells. The interior of the church has a brass of a priest, and a marble monument by Westmacott to the Hon. Georgiana Fox, youngest daughter of the late Lord Holland, who is also interred here. There is a charity of £6 6*s.* per annum, bequeathed by the late Dr. Allen for the instruction of 10 boys and the same number of girls. There is a National school.

MILLBROOK, a vil. in the par. of Maker, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Plymouth. It was formerly a borough and market town, but is now only a small fishing village. It is situated on Cowsand Bay near Cremil Ferry. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £152. The church was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Maker. On the heights near the village a battery has been erected for the defence of Plymouth Sound, which lies to the S.E.

MILLBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Mainsbridge, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Southampton, its post town. It is a station on the London and S.W. railway. It is situated on the Southampton Water, and contains the hmlts. of Hill, Sidford, and Shirley. It had formerly a considerable trade in coal, timber, corn, and malt, which were conveyed by means of the Andover canal and river Test, which falls into the Southampton Water at Redbridge, but this trade has recently much declined. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the ship-building yard and in the iron works at Shirley, where is also a manufactory for edge tools. The soil is generally light and shallow, resting upon a subsoil of gravel. At Mill Place, within the parish, are brass and iron foundries, and works for the manufacture of marine and locomotive engines. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £487, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a tower containing one bell. There is also a district church at Freemantle, the living of which is a perpet. cur. Pollok, the author of the "Course of Time," was buried here in 1827. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also an infant school. A court is held annually by the lord of the manor at Redbridge. There are traces of a bridge of five arches which formerly spanned the river Test at Redbridge, to which hamlet it has given name; also ruins of a chapel at Shirley.

MILLBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Loughcrew, bar. of Fore, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of Oldcastle. Millbrook House is the principal seat.

MILLBURN, an appellation much used in Scotland for any brook driving a mill, as also the locality washed by the brook.

MILLBURN TOWER, an ancient seat in co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Edinburgh. Liston, the statesman, formerly lived in this house.

MILLCROFT, a vil. in the par. of Minnigaff, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It adjoins Creebridge.

MILLENHEATH, a tnshp. in the par. of Prees, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Whitchurch. It is situated on the river Tern.

MILLERHILL, EASTER and WESTER, vils. in the par. of Newton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, and 1½ mile N.W. of Dalkeith. They are situated on the North British railway, and are chiefly inhabited by colliers.

MILLER'S BRIDGE, a station on the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, near Liverpool.

MILLERSTON, a vil. in the par. of Barony, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is a suburb of Glasgow, and contains a chapel-of-ease and a Free Church preaching station.

MILLFIELD, a station on the North-Eastern railway, next to Sunderland, Easington ward, co. Durham.

MILLFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Inverkeilor, co. Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Arbroath.

MILLFIELD, or MAES-Y-FELIN, a demesne in the hunds. of Moyddyn and Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N.E. of Lampeter-Pont-Stephen, and 28 E.N.E. of Cardigan. It was a seat of the Lloyds, situated near the river Teifi.

MILLFORD, a post-office vil. in the par. of Tullyferne, bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles N. of Letterkenny. It is situated on the bay of Mulroy, and is an improving place, containing a dispensary, and giving name to a Poor-law Union which contains 12 electoral divisions. Fairs are held on the 23rd of each month.

MILLFORD BOG, on the borders of cos. Galway and Mayo, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Dunmore.

MILLHEUGH, a vil. in the par. of Dalserf, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Hamilton. It is situated on the Glasgow and Carlisle road, in the district of Larkhall. There are bleach-grounds.

MILLHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Tiff and Benvie, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Dundee.

MILLHOUSE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Lockerbie, or Dryfesdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 11 miles N.E. of Dumfries. It is situated on the line of the Caledonian railway.

MILL-HOUSE, a vil. in the tnshp. and par. of Darfield, waps. of Strafforth and Staincross, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Barnsley. It is situated near the river Dearne, and on the line of the North Midland railway.

MILLICHOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Munslow, co. Salop, 5 miles S.E. of Church Stretton.

MILLICHOPE, UPPER, a tnshp. in the par. of Eaton, co. Salop, 1 mile W. of Church Stretton.

MILLIGS, a vil. in the par. of Row, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 9 miles N.W. of Dumbarton. It is situated near the shore of the Frith of Clyde. There is a ferry at Portencaple over Loch Long.

MILLIKEN PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Paisley Abbey, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 1½ mile S.W. of Johnstone, and 3 miles W. of Paisley. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It is situated near the river Black Cart. The principal seat is Milliken House, the property of Sir R. J. M. Napier, Bart.

MILLINGTON, a par. in the Wilton-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Pocklington, its post town and nearest railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the Wolds, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is chiefly chalk, and two-thirds of the land arable, the remainder being pasture and woodland. Some good springs exist in the parish. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1768. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Great Givendale, in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is an ancient structure, with a small tower containing two bells. The register dates from 1609. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, of which £5 goes to a school. There is a parochial school in which a Sunday-school is also held. About half a mile N.E. of the village, numerous Roman remains, including the foundations of a circular temple, tesselated pavements, tiles, coins, and various other relics, have been found, giving colour to the suggestion that this was the site of the Roman station Delgovicia, and within a short distance are immense earthworks, from 60 to 90 feet in height, enclosing an area of 4,185 acres.

MILLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rostherne, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 4 miles S.W. of Altrincham, and 4¼ N.W. of Nether Knutsford. The township chiefly consists of a few scattered farmhouses.

MILLMEECE, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1½ mile from Standon.

MILLMOUNT, a hmlt. in the bar. of Cremorne, co. Monaghan, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Monaghan.

MILLO, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunton, hund. of Biggleswade, co. Bedford, 3 miles S.E. of Biggleswade. It is a small agricultural place, and had formerly a chapel-of-ease.

MILL-OF-HALDEN, a vil. in the par. of Bonhill, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Dumbarton. It is situated near the southern end of Loch Lomond, on the river Leven, which runs from the loch down to the Frith of Clyde. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the print and bleach works.

MILLOM, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles from Broughton, its post town, and 2 from Holborn Hill station on the Whitehaven and Furness Junction line of railway. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Dudden, and is a subport to Whitehaven. The par., which is bounded on the W. and S. by the Irish Sea, contains the tnshps. of Upper and Lower Millom, Birker Chapel, Sucken, and Austhwaite, and the chplries. of Thwaites and Ulpha. Millom was formerly an extensive lordship, and came to the earls of Lonsdale through the Boyvills and Huddlestons, the remains of whose castle are still to be seen, having on one of the walls the arms of the Huddleston family in excellent preservation. Formerly the lords of Millom had a special jurisdiction over which the sheriff of the county had no power, including the punishment of death, which was carried into effect at a place called Gallows Field, where a stone has been erected with a suitable inscription. The soil consists of loam and gravel on a substratum of limestone. The mineral productions are slate, iron, and copper ore, but these are not worked to a considerable extent. The village, formerly a market town, stands on the bay formed by the mouth of the Dudden, and famous for cockles, sand eels, and mussels. The market and fair granted by charter of Henry III. have long been disused. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £189, in the patron. of the crown in right of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone structure, with a bell gable containing two bells. Portions of the church have been greatly disfigured by modern alterations. There are several brasses and monuments to the Huddlestone and other families of great antiquity, among which may be mentioned a tomb of alabaster of rare beauty and workmanship; it consists of the effigies of a male and female in recumbent position, with the representation of six angels on either side, each bearing a scroll. This noble and ancient production of art evidently bears signs of fast decay, not so much from the hand of time as from the dampness of its situation. In the churchyard is an ancient stone cross in excellent preservation. There are also two district churches, viz. at Thwaites and Ulpha, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* val. £115 and £65 each. The parochial charities produce about £41 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, and a new one has been recently erected near the church. Lord Lonsdale is lord of the manor. In Upper Millom are several saline springs, called Holy Wells, of a purgative nature.

MILLPORT, a seaport and post town on Cumbrae Island, co. Bute, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Bute, and 5 S.W. of Largs. It is a prosperous bathing-place on the Frith of Clyde, and a creek of the port of Greenock. The town, which is of semi-lunar form, is situated on the S. side of the greater Cumbrae. It has a small but convenient harbour, and a pier constructed at the expense of the late Marquis of Bute. Adjoining the harbour is an excellent anchorage sheltered by two islets called the Allans, which render it safe for vessels during violent storms. There is a steam-packet communication between this town and Ardrossan, Ayr, Greenock, and Glasgow. Seventy years back Millport had but one dwelling—that a fisherman's hut; it consists now of several streets, with a resident population exceeding 1,000, chiefly employed in fishing and weaving. It contains an Episcopal college and church, consisting of a range of buildings crowned with a spire; also a Free church, and a place of worship for the Baptists. The schools are a parochial, Free Church, Episcopalian, and two industrial schools for females. There are a reading-room and public library, and a branch office of the Western Bank.

MILLSHIELDS, a vil. in the tnshp. of Espershields, par. of Bywell St. Peter, co. Northumberland, 9 miles S.E. of Hexham.

MILLS-OF-DRUM, a hmlt. on the Deeside railway, adjoining the boundary between the cos. of Kincardine and Aberdeen, Scotland. It is the first station E. of Banchory.

MILLSTONE-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Swinnerton, co. Stafford. It is situated near Newcastle-under-Lyme.

MILLSTREET, a small post and market town in the par. of Drishane, bar. of West Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 25 miles W. of Cork, and 170 from Dublin. It is a station on the Killarney Junction railway. The town stands on a small feeder of the river Blackwater, and on the road from Mallow to Killarney, surrounded by lofty hills. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, bridewell, infantry barracks, and a dispensary within the Kanturk Poor-law Union. There is a police station, and petty sessions are held once a month. The O'Leary of Coomlegane and Wallis of Drishane are the proprietors. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on 6th January, 1st and 12th March, 1st June, 1st September, 1st and 26th December.

MILLTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Aslackby, wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Folkingham.

MILLTIMBER, a station on the Deeside railway intervening between Murtle and Culter, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Derryaghy, bar. of Upper Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, not far from Belfast.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Tartaraghan, bar. of West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Charlemont. It is situated on the bank of Lough Neagh, and contains a church.

MILLTOWN, a post-office vil. in co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Belturbet.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Garvaghy, bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Dromore. It is situated on the road from Dromore to Castlewellan.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Auchterarder, co.

Perth, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Muthill. It is situated on the river Ruthven.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Pass-of-Kilbride, bar. of Fartullagh, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Rochfort-bridge. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Galway. There are a police-office, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a dispensary within the Mullingar Poor-law Union.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Donaghmore, bar. of Ratoath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Dunboyne. The neighbouring seats are Milltown House, Robertstown House, and Robertstown Cottage.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kilmactalway, bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Newcastle. It is situated on the road from thence to Dublin. Milltown House is the principal seat.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Addergoole, bar. of Dunmore, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N.N.W. of Tuam. It is situated on the road from thence to Ballyhannis, and on the banks of the Clare river. The village contains a dispensary within the Tuam Poor-law Union; also a Roman Catholic chapel and a police-office. Millbrook is the neighbouring seat.

MILLTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Dingle, bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles from Dingle. It is situated on the road from thence to Vintry near the S. shore of Dingle Bay.

MILLTOWN, a small post and market town, in the par. of Kilcolman, bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles S. of Tralee, and 197 from Dublin. It is situated on the margin of the river Main, and on the road from Killarney to Dingle. It contains the parish church, two Roman Catholic chapels, schools, a dispensary within the Killarney Poor-law Union, a bridewell, market-house, and police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Craft of 50 tons burthen can come up to the town. The Godfreys of Kilcolman Abbey are the proprietors. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 26th April, 23rd June, 23rd August, and 15th December.

MILLTOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of St. Peter, bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway. It is situated on the road from thence to Ennis, and on the river Dodder. The higher grounds command views of Dublin Bay. The river is spanned by a bridge, and its banks adorned by numerous seats. It gives title of earl to the Leeson family of Rusborough.

MILLTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Fore, co. Westmeath, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Castle Pollard.

MILLTOWN-DUNLAVIN, a par. or townland in the bar. of Upper Talbotstown, co. Wieklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Dunlavin. It is joined with the parish of Dunlavin, which see.

MILLTOWN-MALBAY, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilfarboy, bar. of Ibrickan, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 18 miles W. of Ennis, and 158 from Dublin. It is situated at the head of Malbay Bay, on the road from Ennistimon to Kilkee, near Spanish Point. The town is rapidly increasing in size, being a favourite bathing-place, and is surrounded by numerous seats and villas. The village was founded in 1810 by the Morony family; of Seaview. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, assembly rooms, and a police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Here is a dispensary within the Ennistimon Poor-law Union. Fairs are held on 1st February, 9th March, 4th May, 20th June, 11th August, 10th September, 18th October, and 9th December. Milltown is the seat of the Moronys. Near here are the puffing holes, natural cavities in the rock which throw the water to a considerable height.

MILLTOWN PASS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Athlone. Besides the above places there are numerous demesnes and private seats called Milltown in various parts of Ireland, but not of sufficient importance to require separate notice.

MILNATHORT, or MILLS O' FORTH, a post and market town in the par. of Orwell, co. Kinross, Scotland, 1¾ mile N. of Kinross, and 14 miles S. of Perth. It is a station on the Kinross branch of the North British railway. It is situated on Queich water, a stream discharging itself into Loch Leven, from which the town is distant about three-quarters of a mile. Milnathort, popularly designated "Mills o' Forth," is a neatly built town consisting of five streets. It is well lit with gas and paved. Cotton weaving was formerly carried on, but of late years it has been superseded by the weaving of tartan shawls and plaiding, which give employment to a large number of hands. The Queich water is crossed by a bridge of modern erection. The places of worship are the parish church of Orwell, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel. There are a parochial school and other useful institutions. On the low ground towards Loch Leven stands the ancient ruined castle of Burleigh, formerly the seat of the lords of Burleigh. A weekly market is held on Wednesday for the sale of corn. Fairs are held on the second Thursday in February, the Thursday prior to the 25th December, the last Wednesday in April, and on the 9th July, 29th August, and 5th November, old style, chiefly for the sale of horses, cattle, and sheep.

MILNESS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Preston-Patrick, par. of Heversham, co. Westmoreland, 7 miles S. of Kendal, and 3 from Milnthorpe railway station. It is situated near the river Kent.

MILNESS BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Linthwaite, and par. of Almondbury, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. by S. of Huddersfield.

MILNETHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Norton-Cuckney, co. Notts, 4 miles S. of Worksop.

MILNGAVIE, or MILLGUY, a small market town in the par. of New Kilpatrick, co. Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles from New Kilpatrick, and 7 N.W. of Glasgow, with which it is connected by a branch line of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. The village, which is well built, is situated on Allander water. It contains extensive cotton-spinning mills, print works, bleachfields, corn-mills, and other establishments; also an United Presbyterian church, a chapel-of-ease, mechanics' institute, and public library. At Mugdock Castle, 2¾ miles N., is a remarkable echo; and at Craigmaddie Moor, near the ruins of Craigmaddie Castle, is a Druidical temple called "The Old Wife's Lefts," consisting of three huge stones, two of which are erect and support the third.

MILN-HOUSES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall-Bierlow, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

MILNPORT. See MILLPORT, co. Bute, Scotland.

MILNROW, a chplry. in the tnshp. of Butterworth, and par. of Rochdale, co. Lancaster, 2 miles E. of Rochdale, its post town. It is a station on the Oldham and Rochdale branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Beile, and on the road to Shaw Chapel. The manufacture of flannels and woollens is carried on to a great extent, and there are extensive printing and bleaching establishments, also cotton mills. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring collieries and freestone quarries. The Leeds and Liverpool canal, and the Manchester and Leeds railway, pass through the township. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £155, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rochdale. The church is dedicated to St. James. There are National and British schools, and places of worship for the several denominations of Dissenters. John Collier, otherwise "Tim Bobbin," the popular author of "The Lancashire Dialect," an eccentric caricaturist, poet, and musician, resided 57 years at this place as the village schoolmaster.

MILNTHORPE WITH HEVERSHAM, a tnshp., seaport, and market town, in the par. of Heversham, co.

Westmoreland, 6½ miles S. of Kendal, and 2 N. of the Milnthorpe railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the E. bank and near the mouth of the river Kent, at the point where the Beetha or Belo rivulet joins. It consists chiefly of one long street containing some well-built houses. It is a petty sessions town, and courts leet and baron are held annually. It is a member of the port of Lancaster and the only seaport in the county of Westmoreland, but is accessible only by very small vessels. There are several paper and flax mills, and the manufacture of twine, sheeting, sail-cloth, sacking, and coarse woollens are carried on. In the vicinity are extensive quarries of marble and limestone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Heversham. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, was erected in 1837, and has been endowed with £1,000 by the late Mrs. Richardson of Kendal. There are a Dissenting chapel and a National school, the latter partly supported by subscription. At a little distance to the N.E. of the town of Milnthorpe is the union workhouse for the Kendal Union, built in 1813 at an expense of £5,000. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 12th May and 17th October, for horses, cattle, and sheep.

MILNTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kilmuir-Easter, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 7 miles S. of Tain. There are four annual fairs.

MILNTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Urquhart and Glenmoriston, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated in Glenurquhart.

MILSON, a par. in the hund. of Overs, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Cleobury-Mortimer, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Ludlow. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated near the river Teane, and is watered by the small stream Millbrook. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of clay with a subsoil of gravel. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Neen-Sollars, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a small ancient stone structure, with a square turreted tower containing three bells. The children of this parish frequent the National school at Neen-Sollars. Colonel Rushout is lord of the manor.

MILSTEAD, or MILSTED, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3½ miles S. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Maidstone. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. An excellent rectory house was erected by the patron in 1833. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £220. The church is dedicated to St. Mary and the Holy Cross. The register dates from the middle of the 16th century. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There are Church of England schools for this and the parish of Prinstead. The manor house is the principal residence. Sir John Maxwell Tylden is lord of the manor.

MILSTON, a par. in the hund. of Amesbury, co. Wilts, 3 miles N. of Amesbury, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Salisbury. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlt. of Brigmerston. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Brigmerston annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £275. The church, which is of great antiquity, is dedicated to St. Mary. The parsonage house was the birthplace of Addison, the poet and statesman, in 1672, at which period his father was rector of the parish.

MILTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Weedon Loys, hund. of Greens Norton, co. Northampton, 6 miles N.W. of Towcester. There is a Church school.

MILTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sandal-Magna, wap. of Lower Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Wakefield.

MILTON, a par. in the hund. of Ock, co. Berks, 3 miles S.W. of Abingdon, its post town. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the line of the Great Western railway. The soil consists of clay and gravel. It is a meet for the Old Berkshire hounds. The surface is hilly towards the N. but more level in the S. The manor-house was built by Inigo Jones. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £560, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Blaise, is a small structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £101 per annum, of which £67 goes to Warner's free school. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Milton Hill and Milton House are the principal residences; the latter, built by Inigo Jones, has a Roman Catholic chapel and an excellent library. John Basil Barrett, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MILTON, a par. in the hund. of Northstow, co. Cambridge, 3½ miles N.E. of Cambridge, its railway station and post town, and 12½ from Ely. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Ely railway and the river Cam, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is strong, and the subsoil chiefly clay and gravel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £500, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is of great antiquity, and has a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church has a brass of Justice Coke bearing date 1553. The charities produce about £70 per annum. The register dates from the middle of the 17th century.

MILTON, a par. in the hund. of Christchurch, co. Hants, 7 miles W. of Lymington, its post town, and 6 S. of the Christchurch Road railway station. The par., which is of large extent, is situated on Christchurch Bay, about midway between the towns of Christchurch and Lymington; it contains the hmlts. of Ashley, Bashley, Earton, Chewton, Gore, and Wootton, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Milford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a modern structure, with its original square tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans have places of worship.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Portsea, co. Hants, 2 miles E. of Portsmouth, its post town. It is situated on Langston Harbour. The living is a perpet. cur.* held with that of St. Bartholomew's Temple Church, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church is a small structure.

MILTON, a hund. in the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Bapchild, Bobbing, Bordon, Bradgar, Lower Halston, Hartlip, Iwade, Kingsdown, Milstead, Milton-next-Sittingbourne, Murston, Newington, Rainham, Rodmersham, Sittingbourne, Tong, Tunstall, and Upchurch, comprising an area of 30,580 acres.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of East Adderbury, co. Oxford, 2 miles N.W. of Deddington, and 3 S. of Banbury. It is situated on a branch of the river Cherwell. There was formerly a chapel dedicated to St. John.

MILTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Skipton-under-Wychwood, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 6 miles S.W. of Chipping Norton, 3 N.E. of Burford, and 1 mile W. of Shipton. The village is considerable. A church has been erected; also a school with master's residence. There are three places of worship for Dissenters.

MILTON, a tythg. in the city of Wells, co. Somerset, 1 mile N. of Wells.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Martock, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Ilchester.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Weston-super-Mare, co. Somerset, 7 miles N.W. of Axbridge. It is situated near the line of the Great Western railway.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Burslem, co. Stafford, 2 miles E. of Burslem. It is situated on the Caldon canal. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the potteries.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 2 miles W. of Penkridge, and 7 S.W. of Stafford. The Grand Junction railway and the Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal pass in the vicinity.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Preston-Richard, and par. of Heversham, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles N.E. of Milnthorpe, and 6 N.W. of Kirkby Lonsdale. It is situated near the Kendal canal, on the banks of which are several coke ovens and a coal wharf. At End-Moor an antique hammer-head of stone was found in 1770.

MILTON, a tythg. in the par. of East Knoyle, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Hindon.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Prittlewell, co. Essex, 2 miles S. of Rochford, and three-quarters of a mile S.E. of Prittlewell. It is situated near Southend, and was formerly an independent parish, but has become nearly extinct through the encroachments of the sea. On the coast are fine beds of oysters, and at low water the remains of the ancient church are visible.

MILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Weaverham, co. Cheshire, 3½ miles W. of Northwich. It is situated on the river Weaver.

MILTON, or MILNESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of West Markham, South Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, half a mile N.W. of West Markham, and 2 N.W. of Tuxford. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Idle.

MILTON, or HERBERTSHIRE, a vil. in the par. of Dunipace, co. Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Bannockburn. It is situated on the left bank of the Carron, here crossed by a bridge. The inhabitants are principally employed in calico printing.

MILTON, a vil. in the par. of Old Kilpatrick, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 8 miles E. by S. of Dumbarton. It stands in the district of Duntocher, and has an extensive cotton manufactory. In the vicinity are remains of a Roman bridge and of Antonine's wall.

MILTON, a vil. in the par. of Rothiemay, co. Banff, Scotland, 8 miles E. of Keith. It is situated in a fertile district between the rivers Deveron and Isla. In the vicinity is Rothiemay House, an old seat of the Earl of Fife, containing Queen Mary's room.

MILTON, a vil. in the par. of Kilmaurs, co. Ayr, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Kilmarnock.

MILTON, a vil. in the par. of Glammis, co. Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of Forfar.

MILTON, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Barony, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is a populous suburb of Glasgow. There are a Free church and a chapel-of-ease.

MILTON, a vil. in the par. of Campsie, co. Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Kirkintilloch, and 2 S. of Lennoxtown. It has a station on the Campsie railway. It is situated on the southern border of the parish, and is a missionary station under a minister of the Established Kirk.

MILTON ABBAS, a par. in the hund. of Whiteway, co. Dorset, 7 miles S.W. of Blanford-Forum, its post town, and 11 N.E. of Dorchester. The parish, originally named Middleton, derives the suffix to its present name, which is a contraction, from its ancient lords, the Abbots. It was formerly a market town, and had a Benedictine abbey founded by King Athelstane in 933, which at the Dissolution had a revenue of £720 4*s.* 1*d.* The par. includes the hmlt. of Holworth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £127. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a stone structure, with a tower containing a clock and two bells. It was erected at the expense of the first Earl of Dorchester. The register dates from 1660. The Baptists have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £219, of which £200 goes to the free school, which has been removed to Blanford, and £19 to Tregonnell's almshouses. The conventual buildings, with the exception of the ancient hall, were taken down in 1771, and replaced by the present mansion, called Milton Abbey, by Sir W. Chambers. The interior contains some paintings by Raphael, Titian, Claude, &., and the Abbey chapel, rebuilt in Edward II.'s time, contains a piscina, stone stalls, and screen bearing date 1492, also a brass of a Tregonnell. The monk's hall was erected in 1498. There is a savings-bank. Baron Hambro is lord of the manor.

MILTON ABBEY, seat of Earl Fitzwilliam, in co. Northampton, 2 miles W. by N. of Peterborough. It is a venerable Elizabethan mansion, rebuilt in 1580 on the site of the seat of the abbots of Medehamstead, and gives title of viscount to Earl Fitzwilliam. It contains many valuable portraits, including those of Mary Queen of Scots and her son James I., presented to Sir W. Fitzwilliam on the day of her execution.

MILTON-ABBOT, a par. in the hund. of Tavistock, co. Devon, 6 miles N.W. of Tavistock, its post town. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the high road from Tavistock to Launceston, near the river Tamar, and is wholly agricultural. The Anglo-Swiss domain of the Duke of Bedford, distinguished for landscape gardening, is situated within this parish. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £384, and the vicarial for £416. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £557. The church, dedicated to St. Constantine, is a stone structure, with a square pinnacled tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum. There is a girls' school, and the boys of this and the adjoining parishes are educated at the expense of the Duke of Bedford. Endsleigh Cottage, inhabited and erected at the expense of the Duke of Bedford, is the principal residence.

MILTON-BRYANT, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 2½ miles S.E. of Woburn, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Act of Enclosure in 1793. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £252, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small structure with a white square tower.

MILTON-CHAPEL, a par. in the hund. of Westgate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2¼ miles S.W. of Canterbury, its post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the rail, near the river Stour. It contains only one house, and is reckoned a part of Thanington. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £70. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small structure.

MILTON-CLEVEDON, a par. in the hund. of Bruton, co. Somerset, 1 mile S. of Evercreech, its post town, and 2 miles from the Bruton railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural, and is situated on the Bruton and Shepton-Mallet turnpike road. The soil is of a clayey and sandy nature, with a subsoil of clay and sandstone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £263. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing four bells. The register dates from 1760. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, including infants, and a Sunday-school held within the same building. The Earl of Ilchester is lord of the manor.

MILTON-DAMEREL, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 6 miles N.E. of Holsworthy, its post town, and 12 S. of the Bideford railway station. The village, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Waldon, and on the Waldon high road from North Devon to Plymouth. The soil is of various qualities. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £315. The living is a rect.* with the perpet. cur. of Cookbury annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £378. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. A Sunday-school is held at the church, and there are day and Sunday schools at Cookbury. Lord Courtenay is lord of the manor.

MILTON-ERNEST, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, co. Bedford, 5 miles N.W. of Bedford, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ouse, and is chiefly agricultural. The Oakley hounds are kennelled here. The surface is undulating, and the soil near the river is rich and highly productive. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture or meadow. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £235. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Rolt family. The charities consist of Turnor's almshouses, with an endowment of £65 per annum realised from land. There are day and Sunday schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Countess of Bridgewater and Philip Booth, Esq., are lord and lady of the manor.

MILTON, GREAT, a par. in the hunds. of Thame and Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 6 miles S.W. of Thame, and 8 from Oxford. Tetsworth is its post town. The par., which is of considerable extent, is situated near the river Thame, and includes the hmlts. of Little Milton, Chilworth, and Ascot. It is mentioned in Domesday as Midelton, and had a priory cell to Abingdon, which was given to Rich. de Louches. At Milton Field is a meet for the Wormsley harriers. In 1840 an Act was obtained for enclosing 1,300 acres. The prebendal tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £850, and the vicarial for £185. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £248, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is an ancient and noble structure, with a square pinnacled and embattled tower. The interior of the church has a monument to the Dormer family. There is also a district church at Little Milton, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The charities include Kent's annuity of £50 towards the support of a school. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

MILTON-KEYNES, or MIDDLETON KEYNES, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 3½ miles S. of Newport Pagnell, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ouzel, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £480. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £500. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was formerly held by Dr. William Wotton, author of "Reflections on Ancient and Modern Learning." The southern porch has an ancient open-work screen on each side. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Bishop Atterbury was born in this parish in 1662, during the incumbency of his father, as was also Dr. Babingdon. George Finch, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MILTON LILBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Kinwardstone, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.E. of Pewsey, its post town, and 7 S. of Marlborough. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tythgs. of Milton, Fyfield, and Clinch. The Kennet and Avon canal flows through the northern part of the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £111. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing six bells. There is a National school. The Marquis of Ailesbury is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MILTON, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Thame, co. Oxford, 5 miles W. of Tetsworth, and 1 mile S. of Great Milton. The village, which is small, is generally considered a hamlet of Great Milton. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1844 near the site of the ancient one, which had long ago fallen to ruins. There is a National school recently built. M. P. Watts Bolton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MILTON-MAZOR, or MIDDLETON MALSOR, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 3½ miles S.W. of Northampton, its post town, and half a mile from the Blisworth station of the Birmingham and London railway. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Northampton and Oxford road, and on the Northampton section of the Grand Junction canal. It is wholly agricultural, except a few persons employed in the shoe trade. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1780. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £340. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, has a spired tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £52 per annum. There is an infant school and a chapel for the Baptists. — Blake, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MILTON-NEXT-GRAVESEND, a par. in the hund. of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, adjoining Gravesend, within which borough it is included. It was incorporated by charter with Gravesend in the tenth year of the reign of Elizabeth, and is more important both in extent and population than the parish of Gravesend itself, comprising an area of 703 acres, with a population in 1861 of 10,887, the whole population of the borough being 18,039. It is a watering-place on the Thames, and has increased very much of late years, having direct communication with London by the North Kent and London and Southend railways, which latter has a station at New Tilbury, on the Essex shore, where the steamboats meet the trains. It contains many of the best houses in Gravesend,—the custom house, fort, literary institution, and Royal Terrace pier, opened in 1845 at a cost of £9,200. The extreme length of the pier is 250 feet and its width 30, supported by 22 cast-iron columns. The upper town commands an extensive view over the northern shore of the Thames' mouth for nearly 40 miles, and to the S. over a richly cultivated country dotted with villages and mansions. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £270, in the patron. of the lord chancellor and the bishop alternately. The parish church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure of the 15th century, situated about a mile from the town on the Dover road, and shaded by a clump of trees on the W. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. Holy Trinity and Christ Church, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £150 and £100 respectively. Holy Trinity church was erected in 1845 at a cost of £4,539, and has a district assigned to it as a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes under Sir Robert Peel's Act. Christ Church is a modern edifice built in 1852 on land presented by the Earl of Darnley, adjoining the London Road. There is besides, the Proprietary chapel of St. John the Evangelist, in the Milton Road, erected in 1834 at a cost of £7,000. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Roman Catholics. The free grammar school, founded in 1580 and re-endowed by David Varchell, was united with the National schools in 1834. The almshouses, situated in King-street, accommodate about 30 aged persons, but are unendowed. The parochial charities include several bequests for education and relief of the poor. The West Kent hounds are kennelled here. The river, besides being the constant resort of merchantmen and a chief pilot station, is a great yacht station. Watercress is extensively cultivated along the marshy banks of the river for supply of the London market, and extensive market gardens and hop-grounds occupy the higher lands. In the immediate vicinity are orchards of cherries, apples, and damsons.

MILTON-NEXT-SITTINGBOURNE, a par. and market town in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 9 miles E.S.E. of Chatham, and 7 W. of Faversham, to which it is a subport. The Strood, Chatham, and Faversham section of the London, Chatham, and Dover railway has an intermediate station between this town and Sittingbourne, from which place there is a branch line to Sheerness, in the Isle of Sheppey. The town, which is of great antiquity, is built on the declivity of a hill sloping down abruptly to a navigable creek of the river Swale, which separates it from Sittingbourne, and leads up to Crown Quay. In ancient times it was a royal demesne, and had a palace of the Saxon kings. In the reign of Alfred the Great it was attacked by the Danish pirate, Hastings, who arrived with a fleet of 80 sail, and encamped at Kemsley Down, where he threw up the fortifications still called Castle Rough, now grown over with trees and underwood. The town and palace were burnt in 1052 by Earl Godwin, in a dispute with Edward the Confessor. In Domesday Survey the town appears to have been rebuilt, and at that time had six mills and 27 salt pans. It was subsequently, till the time of Charles I., a royal manor, held in dowry by the queens, and was a place of considerable trade in the reign of Elizabeth. The native oysters, which formely belonged to the Abbey of Faversham, are leased from the Herberts by the free dredgers, and employ a whole fleet of smacks and hoys. A considerable export trade is carried on from Crown Quay in corn, wool, bricks, and stones for the repair of the London streets. Near the quay are several oil and cement mills, and at Chalkwell, in this parish, is an extensive tanyard. The town, which is a busy but straggling place, contained in 1861 a population of 2,683, having increased 307 since 1851. It is united for political purposes with the more important town of Sittingbourne on the opposite side of the creek, but is governed by its own portreeve and two high constables, annually chosen at the court leet, said to have been instituted by King Alfred. The office of portreeve was formerly very lucrative, but by an Act of Parliament two-thirds of the revenue arising from the dues on coals, and from tolls at fairs within the hundred, have been transferred to the commissioners for paving. The town contains several public buildings, as the courthouse, an ancient timbered edifice nearly in the centre of the town, a small town gaol, a market-house and shambles, union workhouse for the Poor-law Union of Milton, which is conterminous with the hundred, and shipping quays. The land, which is generally well cultivated, rests on a substratum of chalk. It is shaded chiefly by chestnut wood, and has a decoy for wild fowl. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £800 11*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £400, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a large structure, with an embattled tower at the W. end. It contains a piscina, two stone seats, three brasses, the earliest bearing date 1470, and tombs of the Nortons and others. There are two Dissenting chapels and a free school. It is the seat of a superintendent registry for the hundred of Milton, but is comprised partly within the Sittingbourne and partly within the Rochester new County Court districts. Saturday is market day. An annual fair is held on the 24th July, chiefly for cattle.

MILTON-OF-BALGONIE, a vil. in the par. of Markinch, co. Fife, 5 miles N. of Dysart. It is situated near Balgonie.

MILTON-OF-MATHERS, a vil. in the par. of St. Cyrus, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Laurencekirk. It was formerly a place of some importance, but during the last half century has suffered from the encroachments of the sea. Its inhabitants are chiefly engaged in fishing. There is a mineral spring, formerly in great repute.

MILTON-OF-WHINS, a vil. in the par. of St. Ninian's, co. Stirling, Scotland. It is situated on the Scottish Central railway near Bannockburn and Beaton's Mill. It was here that James III. was murdered after his defeat at the battle of Sauchieburn in 1448.

MILTON-PODIMORE, or PUDDIMORE, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.E. of Ilchester, its post town, and 7 from Yeovil. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature alternating with gravel upon a subsoil of clay. The surface is level and subject to be flooded in winter. The road from Taunton to Wincanton traverses the parish from E. to W. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with an octagonal tower containing three bells. G. D. W. Digby, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MILTON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated in a deep valley, and is wholly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlts. of Sutton and Upton. The surface is hilly, but the soil fertile, and the lands principally arable. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Alvington West, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is a stone edifice, with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Horsewell House is the principal residence. Mrs. Prideaux is lady of the manor.

MILTON-UPON-STOUR, a hmlt. in the par. and lib. of Gillingham, co. Dorset, 5½ miles N.W. of Shaftesbury. It is situated on the river Stour. There was formerly a chapel.

MILTON, WEST, a tythg. in the par. and lib. of Poorstock, co. Dorset, 3¾ miles N.E. of Bridport, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. Stone for paving and an inferior kind of freestone are quarried. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Poorstock, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is ancient and serves as a chapel-of-ease to Poorstock.

MILVERTON, a hund. in co. Somerset, contains the pars. of Ashbrittle, Bathealton, Kittisford, Langford-Budville, Milverton, Runnington, Sampford-Arundell, Stawley, and Thorn St. Margaret, comprising an area of 12,250 acres.

MILVERTON, a par. in the above hund., co. Somerset, 3½ miles N. of Wellington, its railway and post town, and 7 W. of Taunton. The par., which is extensive, is situated on the Taunton road to Wiveliscombe, and contains the hmlts. of Preston-Bowyer and Screedhay. The village, which is of great antiquity, is a petty sessions town, and was formerly a market town. In ancient times it ranked as a royal borough, and is still nominally governed by a portreeve, &c. The town consists chiefly of three irregularly built streets. The magistrates' meetings are held at Wiveliscombe, and the county court at Wellington. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the flannel and silk factories, and some of the cottagers in weaving baize by handlooms. The soil is loamy with a subsoil of various kinds. There are some quarries of conglomerate limestone, and also of sandstone. The appropriate tithes belong to the Archdeacon of Taunton. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Llangford-Budville annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £449, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Taunton. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a spacious structure, with a tower containing six bells. The church was one of those built in the reign of Henry VII., and has recently been restored. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £113, of which £54 go to Lamb's school. There are National schools, partly endowed, for both sexes, also infant schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Society of Friends have places of worship, to which are attached Sunday-schools. John de Milverton, a Carmelite friar, who wrote against Wickliffe, was born in this parish. A fair is held on the 10th October for broadcloth and pedlery.

MILVERTON, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 2 miles N.E. of Warwick, and 1 mile N. of Leamington, of which it may be considered a suburb. It is a station on the Leamington and Coventry section of the London and North-Western railway. The village, which contains some villa residences is situated in a sheltered spot on the eastern bank of the river Avon, which at this point makes an extensive sweep. The land is fertile and highly cultivated. The par. includes the hmlt. of Emscote, or Edmonscott, and the goods station belonging to the London and North-Western railway for the towns of Leamington and Warwick. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £58. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small ancient stone edifice, with wooden belfry containing three bells. There is also a district church at New Milverton, the living of which is a cur.; also Milverton Chapel, at Milverton Hill, which is proprietary; this latter is a spacious Doric structure, with a tetrastyle portico and circular belltower; it was erected in 1836, and can accommodate 1,800 persons. The charities produce £5 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Eyre's school.

MILWICH, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 5 miles S.E. of Stone, its post town, and 2½ N.E. of the Sandon railway station. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated at the junction of the Stone and Stafford turnpike roads. The par. includes the hmlts. of Coton, Garshall-Green and Day-Hills. The land is chiefly arable and the surface varied. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £132 8*s.*, and the vicarial for £138 13*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £95. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a modern brick edifice with an ancient stone tower. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. There are National and infant schools with a small endowment. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists.

MIMERAM, or MARAN, a feeder of the river Lea, rises near King's Walden, in co. Herts, and joins the Lea at Hertford.

MIMMS, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Dacorum, though locally in that of Cashio, co. Herts, 4 miles S. of Bishop's Hatfield, its post town, and 19 from London. The par. which is chiefly agricultural, includes the hmlts. of Welham Green, Roestock, and Little Heath, and formerly belonged to the Magnavilles, Knolles, Hydes, and Osbornes. The soil is in general light but fertile. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £230. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is built of flint and of great antiquity. It has a square embattled tower surmounted by a lofty spire and containing six bells. The interior of the church contains six brasses, one of a priest under a canopy bearing date 1350; also tombs of Lord Chancellor Somers, the Coningsbys, Botelers, &c. On the N. side of the chancel is the chantry chapel of St. Catherine, founded in 1323, by Simon de Swonlond, the windows of which exhibit, in stained glass, various shields and coats of arms, principally of the Coningsby family. North Mimms Park is the principal residence; the grounds are very extensive, and watered from a source of the river Colne. There are two schools, one partly supported by endowment, and the other, for girls, by subscription. The charities produce about £75 per annum.

MIMMS, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Edmonton, co. Middlesex, 4 miles N.W. of Chipping Barnet, its post town, and 2 W. of the Potter's Bar station on the Great Northern railway. The par., which is of large extent, is situated near Gladsmoor Heath and Enfield Chase, including the vil. of Potter's Bar, and part of Barnet. It is a district for the S division of Metropolitan police. Mimms, formerly called Mymes, Mymmys, &c., came through the Leuknors, Scropes, and Windsors, to the Marquis of Salisbury. A great portion of the land is woody, with warren, and about half in pasture; the remainder is chiefly in gardens, orchards, and common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £310. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, stands near the high road. It is of great antiquity, and has a square tower at the W. end mantled in ivy. The interior of the church contains a piscina, font, effigies, and two brasses; one of Hill, a former vicar, and the other of a Fowyk, who founded a chantry here. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches, viz. St. John's, Potter's Bar, and Christ Church, Barnet, the livings of both which are perpet. curs. The church of St. John was erected in the village of Potter's Bar in 1835 by subscription, but chiefly by George Byng, Esq., M.P. Christ Church is a flint structure, with stone coynes and dressings, and has a turret at the W. end. It was erected at an outlay of nearly £5,000, by Captain John Trotter, of Derham Park. There are National schools for both sexes, also a British school. Derham Park and Wrotham Park are the principal residences. The charities consist chiefly of almshouses, among which may be mentioned, the Leathersellers of the City of London situated in Union-street, near Chipping Barnet, and the Brewers, for six poor widows, situated near the church; also other almshouses contributed to by the parishioners. A market for cattle and merchandise is held on Wednesday at the "Green Man" inn.

MINANE, a vil. in the bar. of Kinalea, co. Cork, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Kinsale.

MINARD, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles E.S.E. of Dingle, its post town. The surface rises from the coast of Dingle Bay. The road from Dingle to Castlemaine traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kilflyn, £271, in the patron. of the Earl of Cork. Minard Castle is the principal residence. Here are remains of a castle formerly of the Knights of Kerry, which was blown up in 1650 during an attack. At Parknafulla several Ogham stones are to be seen.

MINCH CHANNEL, THE, separates the isle of Lewis from the co. of Ross, Scotland. It belongs to the above county, and extends 50 miles in length, with a breadth varying from 26 to 40 miles. It becomes narrower towards the S., and forms the sound which separates the Outer Hebrides from the island of Skye. Its W. side is flanked by the southern part of Harris, North Uist, and Benbecula.

MINCHINGTON-WITH-GUSSAGE, a tythg. in the par. of Handley, co. Dorset, 6 miles N.W. of Cranborne.

MINCHINHAMPTON, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Longtree, co. Gloucester, 1 mile S. of the Brimscombe railway station, and 4 miles S.E. of Stroud. The parish, which is large, is situated on the road from Cirencester to Gloucester. It comprises the chplries. of Amberley, Brimscombe, and Rodborough, with Nailsworth and 12 other tnshps. Amberley and Brimscombe were constituted separate ecclesiastical districts by an order in council in 1840. Minchinhampton was given by William the Conqueror to a nunnery of Caen, in Normandy, and came through the Windsors to the Sheppards. The origin of its present name is derived from the word monachina, a diminutive of monacha, a "nun." The Thames and Severn canal passes through the parish. The woollen cloth trade is carried on very extensively, there being many clothing mills on the banks of the several streams, employing a large number of the inhabitants. There are also some maltings and a brewery at the hmlt. of Forwood. The town is situated on the summit and southern declivity of a hill overlooking the vale of the Severn. It consists of one long, irregularly built street, intersected by another partially paved, and is well supplied with water from springs. It is a polling-place for the eastern division of the county of Gloucester. The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £433. The parish church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone cruciform structure, with an octagonal tower containing a clock and six bells. It was built in the reign of Henry III. by the nuns, and contains a fine W. window and several antique brasses bearing date 1519 and 1556, and one to Dr. James Bradley, the astronomer, which has been removed from his tomb in the churchyard. In addition to the parish church there are three district churches at Amberley, Brimscombe, and Rodborough, the first two livings of which are perpet. curs.,* and the last a rect.,* val. £300 each. The parochial charities produce about £200 per annum, part of which is distributed to the poor in warm clothing; also almshouses for eight aged females. There are National and British schools for both sexes, with a small endowment. There are places of worship for the Baptists, Wesleyans, and Independents. David Ricardo, Esq., is lord of the manor. On Minchinhampton Common is a very extensive entrenchment, called Amberley Camp, the site of which belongs to the poor, to whom it was granted by Mrs. Alice Hampton in Henry VIII.'s time, when the allotment was 1,000 acres; but, from the encroachments which have occasionally taken place, it has been reduced to nearly half that amount. The entrenchment stretches to the length of 3 miles from the hamlet of Littleworth to a valley on the opposite side of the town, called Woeful Danes Bottom—an appellation supposed to be derived from the sanguinary overthrow suffered by the Danes from Alfred the Great in 879. There is a petrifying spring near Chalford, in this parish. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on Trinity Monday and on the 27th October for horses, cattle, and sheep.

MINCHMUIR, a short mountain ridge stretching N. and S. on the borders of cos. Peebles and Selkirk, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Innerleithen. The highest elevation is 2,285 feet above sea-level. The ancient road between Peebles and Selkirk passes over this range, and commands scenery of the wildest description. It was by this route that Montrose passed in his retreat from Philiphaugh.

MINCINGFIELD, a tythg. in the par. of Durley, co. Hants, 3 miles W. of Bishop's Waltham.

MINDRUM, a hmlt. in the ward of East Glendale, co. Northumberland, 9 miles W. by N. of Wooler, and 50 N. by W. of Newcastle. It is situated under the Cheviots, and at Mindrum Hill is a meet for Lord Elcho's hounds.

MINDTOWN, a par. in the Bishop's Castle div. of the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Bishop's Castle, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the western side of the Longmynd range of hills. The village consists of a few farmhouses. Part of the land, situated on the slopes of the Longmynd Hill, is unenclosed. Traces of copper ore have been met with near the surface. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £120. The church is a neat and very ancient edifice, dedicated to St. John. William Plowden, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner of the soil. The old family seat of the Mynde family is now a farmhouse.

MINEHEAD, a par., seaport, post, and market town, in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 2½ miles from Dunster, and 9 from Williton. It is situated on the cliffs of the Bristol Channel, and on the road from Williton to Lynton. The par. contains the hmlts. of Bratton, Periton, Vineford, and Woodcombe. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Manheved, at which period it was held by William de Mohun. It is a decayed borough, having returned two members to parliament from Elizabeth's time till the passing of the Reform Act, 2nd William IV. cap. 45, when it was disfranchised. The town, which has at various periods suffered from fires, is divided into three parts—viz. Quay Town, Higher Town, and Lower Town, and is nominally governed by two portreeves, &c. Quay Town consists of one long street running by the side of the harbour, which is considered the best and safest in the Bristol Channel. It includes the custom-house and the lighthouse, which latter is of recent erection. The trade, formerly of great importance, is now inconsiderable, there being but a few coasting vessels journeying to and fro from Bristol. The harbour dues are exceedingly high. There is a free reading-room on the quay, which is a solid piece of masonry, with a parapet towards the sea, into which it extends about a quarter of a mile, affording a tolerable shelter for small vessels. The coastguard service here is superintended by an officer and seven men. The Lower Town, comprising some respectable streets, contains all the principal shops and the Parade, on which stands the market-house, lately erected at the expense of J. F. Luttrell, Esq., and the exterior of which is adorned with a clock. The Higher, or Church Town, which has at different periods been subject to disastrous fires, one of which consumed ninety houses, is composed of mean irregular streets built on a sloping eminence called "Greenaleigh." The church and vicarage are situated in this part of the town. There was formerly a woollen manufactory in this parish, and there are still tanners' and curriers', also a fellmongers', doing an extensive trade. On the shore submarine trees are found, and various kinds of shell-fish, including the "murex," so named from its affording a peculiar fluid having the property of communicating to linen a crimson tint, supposed to be similar to the "murex" which produced the Tyrian purple mentioned by Pliny. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a spacious structure, with an embattled tower containing five bells and a chime clock. The interior of the church contains a monument to Judge Bratton, and a statue of Queen Anne, erected in 1719 by Jacob Banks, M.P. for this borough. The register dates from 1548, and shows how fearfully the plague prevailed in the years 1550, 1645, and 1654. The parochial charities produce about £73 per annum. An almshouse for 11 persons was built and endowed by Robert Quirke about 1648. There are schools for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions; also a Sunday-school. There is a place of worship for the Baptists. Bratton Court is an ancient mansion, and was formerly the seat of Judge Bratton. H. F. Luttrell, Esq., is lord of the manor. Dr. Brocklesby, the physician and friend of Johnson and Burke, was a native of this town. Market day is Wednesday for meat, fish, and provisions. A fair is held on Whit-Wednesday for pedlery, &c.

MINERA, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrexham, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh. It is situated on the river Alyn and Offa's Dyke.

MINES, a vil. in the par. of Minnigaff, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 3 miles from Newtown-Stewart.

MINETY. See MINTY, co. Wilts.

MINGALA, an island in the par. of Barra, co. Inverness, Scotland, 8 miles S. of Barra. It is situated near Barra Head Light, and extends 2½ miles in length from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 1¼ mile. Its highest elevation exceeds 900 feet above sea-level.

MINGARRY, a ruined castle on Loch Sunart, co. Argyle, Scotland, near Ardnamurchan. It is situated opposite Mull, and formerly belonged to the M'Ians.

MININGSBY, a par. in the W. div. of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.W. of Spilsby, its post town, 6 S. by E. of Horncastle, and 9 N.E. of the Tattershall railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The navigation communicating with Boston is about 3 miles distant. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £294, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a turret containing one bell. The register dates from 1688. The parochial charities consist of a share in the free school at East Kirby. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Sir John Smith, Bart., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MINISHMORE, an islet on the N. side of Clew Bay, coast of Mayo, Ireland, 7 miles W. of Newport. It extends about 1 mile in length, and has a coastguard station.

MINKE, a vil. in the par. of Llangendeirne, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.E. of Carmarthen. It is situated on the river Gwendraeth Vach.

MINLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Yateley, lower half of the hund. of Crondall, co. Hants, 6 miles N.E. of Odiham, and 3 N.E. of Hartford Bridge.

MINNAUN, a lofty hill on the S.E. side of Achill Island, coast of Mayo, Ireland. It attains an elevation of 1,530 feet above the level of the sea.

MINNIBOLE. See MAYBOLE, co. Ayr, Scotland.

MINNICK, or MINNOCK, a rivulet in the co. of Ayr, Scotland. It rises among the lofty mountains in Barr parish, and flows 13 miles S. to the Cree.

MINNICK-WATER, a rivulet in the par. of Sanquhar, in Upper Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It rises under the Lowther hills, and, after receiving the Glendyne, joins the river Nith 3 miles below Sanquhar.

MINNIEHIVE, or MINNYHIVE, a vil. in the par. of Glencairn, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 15 miles N.W. of Dumfries, and 68 from Edinburgh. It is situated on the river Dalwhat, at the bridge opposite Dunreggan. It is a burgh of barony, for which it received a charter in the middle of the 17th century, with the privilege of a market. In the centre of the village is a pillar, 9 feet in height, resting on a circular pedestal 5 feet high, inscribed with the date 1638. In the village are an United Presbyterian church, a branch of the Union Bank, and two subscription libraries. Annual fairs are held on the last Tuesday in March, 25th June (old style), Friday in August before Lockerby, and on the Saturday in September before Lockerby.

MINNIGAFF, a par. in the W. div. of the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Creebridge, Millcroft, Mines, and Blackcraig, and extends about 17 miles S.E., with a breadth varying from 8 to 12 miles. It is bounded by the cos. of Wigtown and Ayr and the pars. of Carsphairn, Kells, Girthon, and Kirkmabreck. Within its boundaries are numerous lochs—as Dee, Enoch, Trool, and Moan. It is also watered by the rivers Filnour, Cree, Polkil, and Minnick. The surface is rugged, and there are several hills of great altitude—as Cairnsmuir, rising 2,400 feet above sea-level, the Garlies and Glencaird hills, Larg Fell, &c. The land is a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree. A large portion of the parish is in pasture, and is covered by large flocks of sheep and numerous herds of black cattle. Greywacke and clay slate are the chief rocks, but granite abounds in boulders. Lead was formerly worked, but of late years the mines have become exhausted. The village of Minnigaff is situated in a valley at the confluence of the rivers Polkil and Cree, here crossed by a bridge. It contains a small woollen manufactory, tan-yard, and two corn-mills. It is of ancient date, and was formerly of some importance, but is now much decayed. This par. is in the presb. of Wigtown and synod of Galloway, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £269. The parish church has a tower, and was erected in 1836. There is a chapel-of-ease at Bargrennan; also a parochial school. There are numerous tumuli among the hills, and within a mile of Newton-Stewart is "Heron-Kirouchtree," a mansion built on the side of a hill in the midst of well-wooded grounds, in which is a curious grotto formed out of an old stone quarry.

MINNISHANT, a post-office vil. in the par. of Maybole, co. Ayr, Scotland, 9 miles S. by W. of Ayr.

MINOLA. See MANILLA, co. Mayo, Ireland.

MINQUIERES, LES, a reef of rocks lying about 12 miles S. of Jersey, Channel Islands. They are very dangerous for vessels approaching St. Malo, and caused the wreck of the steamer Superb in October, 1850, when twenty persons perished.

MINNONIE-BURN, a rivulet which drains the pars. of Gamrie and King Edward, cos. Banff and Aberdeen, Scotland.

MINSHULL, CHURCH. See CHURCH-MINSHULL, co. Chester.

MINSHULL-VERNON, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 4 miles S.W. of Middlewich, its post town, and near Wimboldsley. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is irregularly built, is wholly agricultural. It anciently belonged to the Vernons, from whom it derives the suffix to its name, and has since passed through several families of distinction; it is now partly held by the Frances of Bostock Hall. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small edifice. There is a National school. Newfield Hall is the principal residence, and seat of Edward Loyd, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

MINSKIP, a tnshp. in the par. of Aldborough, lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Ripon, and 1½ mile S.W. of Boroughbridge. The village is small and wholly agricultural. There is a National school for infants, and a place of worship for the Wesleyans. A. S. Lawson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MINSTEAD, or MINESTEAD, a par. in the hunds. of Redbridge and Thorngate, Romsey div. of the co. of Hants, 2½ miles N. of Lyndhurst, its post town, and 5 W. of Redbridge railway station. The par., which is situated in the New Forest, contains the tythgs. of London-Minstead, Canterton, and Cadnam, near Malwood Castle; also Stoney Cross, where William Rufus was shot. A triangular stone, about 5 feet in height, erected in 1745 by John Lord De la Warre, commemorates the place where formerly stood the oak tree from which Tyrrell's arrow glanced. The soil is clayey, but fertile. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £399 15*s*. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Lyndhurst annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £355. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains tablets of the sons of William R. Preston, Esq., who died in the Crimean war. The parochial charities produce about £45 per annum, of which £15 goes to a school. There is a National school. H. C. Compton, Esq., is lord of the manor. The place was visited by George III. and his queen in June, 1789.

MINSTER, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N. of Camelford, its post town, and 3½ E. by N. of Bossiney. It is situated near the Bristol Channel, and was formerly called Talcarne. At Slaughter Bridge, in this parish, the memorable battle is supposed to have been fought in 525, between the Britons and Saxons, in which king Arthur received his mortal wound; and near the sources of the river Camel another battle was fought in 820 between the Britons and the Saxons under Egbert. The par. contains the small seaport town of Boscastle, and was distinguished for an ancient castle, once the seat of William de Botreaux, who founded here a Black priory cell to Tywardraeth. The soil consists of a dark loam upon a subsoil of rock. The surface is generally flat, and the greater part of the land is in pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £255. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £224. The church, which is of great antiquity, has only part of the tower remaining. It contains an old circular font, and monuments of the Henders and Cottons of Boscastle and Worthyvale. The E. window bears the Trelawny arms. The register dates from 1600, the older entries having been destroyed. There are almshouses for six poor persons. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Methodists have a place of worship. There are some remains of an ancient chapel, dedicated to St. John, and on Waterpit Downs is an ancient cross, embellished with sculpture and delicate tracery. In the grounds of Worthyvale is a stone, bearing some rudely-sculptured characters, supposed to commemorate the battle of Slaughter Bridge, from which place it was brought. Two annual fairs are held in August and November for lambs, sheep, and cattle. Thomas Ricard Avery, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MINSTER-CLOSE-PRECINCTS, an ext. par. place in the City of Peterborough, co. Northampton. See PETERBOROUGH.

MINSTER-IN-SHEPPEY, a par. in the Isle of Sheppey, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles E. of Queensborough, and 3 S.E. of Sheerness, which tnshp. it includes, though the port of Sheerness enjoys an independent jurisdiction. The ruins of the old abbey, from which this parish derives its name, are still to be seen. The nunnery was founded by Queen Sexburga in 673, but was afterwards burnt by the Danes, and rebuilt for Benedictine nuns by Archbishop Corboyl of Canterbury, in 1130. It continued to flourish till the Dissolution, when its revenue was returned at £122 14*s*. 6*d*., and the site given to the Cheneys, Hobys, &c. The coast is bounded by numerous lofty cliffs, and guarded by several coast-guard stations. Cheney Rock, or oyster ground, is situate opposite the coast. The village is situated on high land, commanding extensive views. Market gardening is carried on extensively, but the lands are chiefly in pasture and meadow, with a small proportion of arable and woodland. The ground is marshy, and the soil principally clay. The navigable river Hoale intersects the parish. The King's Ferry affords communications with the main land, and at Sheerness is a modern pier, with wharfs attached, affording facilities for the conveyance of produce by water. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,602 11*s*. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £169. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, formerly belonged to the nunnery, and has a large, square, massive tower, crowned with a turret, which has been diminished in height. The interior of the church contains several old monuments and brasses, among which is one to Sir R. Shurland, a Templar, with a carved horse's head and inscription, and a brass of Sir Roger de Northwood, bearing date 1330; also effigies of a Cheney, and Senor Cerinemo, who was made prisoner by Drake in the Armada. There is also the district church of the Holy Trinity at Sheerness, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £300. It was erected by a grant from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in 1836. There are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum, which goes to Hobson's school. The poorhouse of Sheppey Union is in this parish. There are National schools both at Minster and Sheerness.

MINSTER-IN-THANET, a par. in the Isle of Thanet, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles W. of Ramsgate, its post town, and 5 S. by W. of Margate. It is a station on the South-Eastern railway. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on Minster Level, near Ebbesfleet, where Hengist and the Saxons, Warings, and Frisians, first landed in Britain. It was famous as the site of an abbey or nunnery for seventy-seven nuns, founded by Domneva, niece of Egbert, King of Kent, in 670, which was destroyed by the Danes. It was a market town under the abbots of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to whom the lands were given by Canute the Dane. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are numerous orchards and gardens, but the land is chiefly in pasture and arable. One portion of the surface is exceedingly hilly, but the lands are in general level, and the soil principally clay. The navigable river Stour bounds the parish on the S., and vessels or barges formerly came up to the village. Courts leet and baron are held annually. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £733, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a large ancient cruciform structure with a spired tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains several ancient monuments. When the Danes burnt the abbey they spared the two chapels of St. Mary and SS. Peter and Paul, of which the former was converted into the parochial church, and has since been enlarged. The register dates from 1557. The parochial charities produce about £79 per annum. There are National and infant schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Isle of Thanet poorhouse is situated in this parish. The Abbey is the principal residence. Marquis Conyngham is lord of the manor, and takes from this place the inferior title of baron. A fair is held on Good Friday.

MINSTERLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Westbury, hund. of Ford, co. Salop, 10 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 13 from Bishop's Castle. The London and North-Western railway has a branch line from Shrewsbury to Minsterley. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Rea, and on the road from Shrewsbury to Montgomery. The extensive and productive lead mine of Snailbeach is in this parish, the company of which have extensive smelting works, &c., at Pontesbury. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £96. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient brick structure with a turret containing a clock and one bell. There is a free school, the endowment of which has been fraudulently disposed of; but is now supported by the Marquis of Bath and the Snailbeach Company, together with the children's weekly pence. The Marquis of Bath is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MINSTER-LOVELL, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 2¾ miles N.W. of Witney, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Windrush, and near the Roman way Akeman Street and Wychwood Forest. At the ruined priory house was formerly a Benedictine cell to Ivry Abbey, founded in the reign of King John, and at the suppression of alien priories given to the Lovells and to Eton College. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The village, which consists of several farmhouses and cottages, is built on the declivities of two hills, between which runs the river Windrush, dividing the parish into two nearly equal parts, called Great and Little Minster. The surface is richly wooded, and the soil light, but fertile. The impropriate and vicarial tithes have each been commuted for a rent-charge of £119. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Kenelm, is an ancient cruciform structure with a square embattled tower rising from the centre. The nave has a groined roof, and the chancel contains a monument to Henry Heylyn, Esq., also an effigy of Francis Lovell, clad in complete armour of the time of Edward IV. There are ruins of the ancient mansion of the Lovells, who have given their names to the parish. Lady Taunton is lady of the manor.

MINSTER, SOUTH. See SOUTHMINSTER, co. Essex.

MINSTERWORTH, a par. in the duchy of Lancaster, co. Gloucester, 4 miles S.W. of Gloucester, its post town. The village, which is small, and irregularly built, is situated on the river Severn, and intersected by the turnpike road leading to Newnham and Chepstow. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is divided between arable, pasture, and meadow. The soil is rich, and generally very productive, especially in apples for cider. There is a salmon fishery in the Severn at this place. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £597 18*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £125, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat structure with a low tower. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, of which £4 goes to Ellis's school.

MINSTER-YARD WITH BEDDERN, an ext. par. place in the co. and city of York.

MINT, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Westgate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent.

MINTERN-MAGNA, a par. partly in the hund. of Cerne, but chiefly in the libs. of Piddle-Trenthide and Fordington, Cerne div. of the co. Dorset, 2 miles N. of Cerne-Abbas, its post town, and 5 from the Evershot railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road to Weymouth and Bath, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tythgs. of Lyon's-Gate and Middlemarsh. The soil is chalk and flint, alternated with clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £140. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a neat edifice with a tower. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Napiers. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. Mintern House is the principal residence.

MINTERN PARVA, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Buckland-Newton, Cerne div. of co. Dorset, 2 miles S.W. of Buckland-Newton, and 9 N.W. of Dorchester. The village is small, and wholly agricultural.

MINTIAGS, or BARR-OF-INCH, an ext. par. place in the bar. of West Inishowen, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Buncrana.

MINTING, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 7 N. of the Southrey and Bardney railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Witham, and is wholly agricultural. About one half of the land is indifferent pasture, and the remainder arable and woodland. Here was formerly an alien priory of Benedictine monks, which was given by Henry V. to the Carthusian priory of Mount Grace, and subsequently came into the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The living is a vic.* and rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £437, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a turret, and once belonged to the Abbey of Leyr, in France. The interior of the church contains a carved screen, which divides the chancel from the nave. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1851. The manor belongs to St. John's College, Cambridge.

MINTLAW, a vil. in the par. of Longside, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles from Longside, and 8½ N.W. of Peterhead. On the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway is a station for Old Deer and Mintlow. It is situated on the road leading from Aberdeen to Fraserburgh. There are an endowed girls' school and a parochial school. Fairs are held on the Tuesdays following the 25th February and 14th April, also on the 14th June, 25th August, 7th October, and 14th December.

MINTLYN, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 2½ miles S.E. of Lynn, its railway station and post town. The village, which was formerly of great importance, is now inconsiderable and wholly agricultural, consisting of a few scattered farmhouses. About a third of the parish is in plantations and heath. The church is in ruins. Richard Bagge, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MINTO, a par. in the district of Hawick, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Minto and Hassendean, and extends in length 5¾ miles, with an extreme breadth of 3 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Ancrum, Lilliesleaf, Bedrule, Cavers, and Wilton. The surface is hilly but fertile. The soil towards the river consists of a light loam, but farther N. of a strong clay upon a subsoil of tilt. The parish is traversed by the Hawick railway, and has a station at Hassendean. The village is situated on the river Teviot, 5 miles W. of Jedburgh and 1 mile N.W. of Denholm. It consists of a few cottages, but has a neat appearance. This par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh and synod of Merce and Teviotdale, and in the patron. of the Earl of Minto, who takes from hence the title of earl and baron. The minister has a stipend of £224. The parish church is a modern erection, with a pinnacled tower. There is a parochial school. Minto House is an ancient seat, surrounded by grounds. It is situated near the falls of the river. The two hills of Minto rise to a height of 870 feet above sea-level, and command a fine prospect. Near to the above hills is the tower of Barnhill, the border freebooter, who here "hewed his bed of flint." The estate of Hassendean Bank, formerly the property of Melrose Abbey, now belongs to the Duke of Roxburgh. Stone coffins have been discovered in the neighbourhood.

MINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Church-Stretton, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Church-Stretton.

MINT-YARD, a lib. in the co. and city of York.

MINTY AND CROWTHORNE. See CROWTHORNE AND MINTY.

MINTY, or MINETY, a par. in the hund. of Crowthorne and Minty, co. Wilts, formerly in co. Gloucester, 8 miles S. by W. of Cirencester, its post town, and 6½ N.E. of Malmesbury. It is a station on the Swindon and Gloucester section of the Great Western railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near Bredon Forest. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood, and a stream called Swill-brook. The surface is level, and the soil generally a strong clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £166, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Wilts. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The interior of the church contains the stump of a cross, a piscina, and monuments, and brasses of the Powlett and Pleydell families. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. There is a National school supported by voluntary contributions. Admiral Penn's father was a resident of this parish. Minety House is the principal residence. Joseph R. Mullins, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MINVER, ST., a par. in two divs., Highlands and Lowlands, in the hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 3½ miles E. by N. of Padstow by the ferry. It is situated near the coast of the Bristol Channel, and is separated from the parish of Egloshayle by a stream which at high water is navigable to Amble Bridge. There is a quay for shipping corn and copper ore. A copper mine was wrought for some time, but the works have been discontinued. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,000, and the vicarial for £356. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £360. The church of St. Minver is situated in the Highlands, and has a tower surmounted by a lofty spire. There are also two chapels of ease situated in that part of the parish called the Lowlands; the one dedicated to St. Michael stands on the bank of the river Camel, across which is a ferry to Padstow; and the other, dedicated to St. Enodoc, a little to the N., in that part of the parish which has been overlaid with drifting sand. The Wesleyans and Society of Friends have places of worship, and the latter a cemetery.

MINWERE, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.W. of Narberth, its post town. It is situated near the river Cleddau and Picton-Castle. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Slebech, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Wonan. The principal residence is Slebech Hall, the seat of the Hon. Baron de Rutzen.

MINWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Curdworth, Birmingham div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 4 miles W. by N. of Coleshill, and 17 N.W. of Birmingham. It is situated on the Birmingham and Fazeley canal.

MIOBLE, a rivulet running into Loch Morar, in Ardnamurchan, co. Argyle, Scotland.

MIRCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Childs Wickham, lower div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.W. of Chipping-Campden.

MIRFIELD, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.W. of Dewsbury, its post town, and 5 from Huddersfield. It has stations on the Lancashire and Yorkshire and North-Western railways. The par. which is extensive, is situated on the river Calder, and contains the ecclesiastical districts of Battyeford and Hopton. It formed part of the ancient parish of Dewsbury up to 1261, when it was made parochial. There are several collieries, corn, fulling, and scribbling mills in the parish. The village is very considerable, and many of the houses modern. An extensive trade is done in woollen cloths, carpets, cottons, &c. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the making of cards for machinery, and others in boat building and malting. As one part of Mirfield is much elevated the views of the surrounding country are very extensive. A considerable trade is carried on in agricultural and mineral produce, for the conveyance of which the Calder and Hebble navigation affords great facilities, and the Leeds and Manchester railway passes through the parish. The soil is fertile and the land generally in good cultivation. Coal and freestone are extensively quarried. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1796. Bishop Hopton, who lived in the reign of Queen Mary, was born at Blake Hall, a mansion situated in this parish, and commanding extensive views. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £242. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern edifice, with its old original tower containing six bells. The church was rebuilt in 1826, with the exception of the tower. In addition to the parish church, there are two district churches at Hopton and Battyeford, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. each £150 and £137. The parochial charities produce about £62 per annum, of which £56 goes to the free school. There are spacious National schools for both sexes, built in 1830, besides various other schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, Reformers, Moravians, Primitive and New Connexion Methodists have each a place of worship.

MIROS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanegwad, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles E. of Carmarthen.

MISERDEN, a par. in the hund. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 5 miles E.S.E. of Painswick, its post town, and 7 from Stroud. The village, which is small, is situated among the Cotswold hills, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Camp and Sutgrove, and was formerly held by the Musards, Despencers, Mortimers, &c. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a rocky subsoil. About two-thirds of the land is arable and the remainder pasture and woodland. Limestone is quarried, and clay of good quality for making tiles abounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £335. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a low embattled tower. The interior of the church contains effigies of Kingston, and of the Sandys families. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a National school. The Baptists have a place of worship at Camp. There are traces of Musard's castle, built in the reign of King John. Miserden House, situated in a well wooded park of 7 miles in circumference, was partly built out of the materials of the old castle, and was garrisoned by the Roundheads in the reign of Charles I. James Wittit Lyon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MISKIN, a hund. in co. Glamorgan, contains the pars. of Aberdare, Llantrisaint, Llantwitvairdre, Llanwonno, Pentyrch, Radyr, and Ystrad-dyfodwg.

MISKIRK, a short range of mountains between Bantry and Kenmare bays, co. Cork, Ireland. They are situated in the S.W. part of the county, and attain an altitude of 1272 feet above the sea.

MISSENDEN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 3 miles S.E. of Hitchin.

MISSENDEN, GREAT, a par. and post town in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 5 miles N.W. of Amersham, and 26 S.E. of Buckingham. The village, which is extensive, is situated in a valley, and on the high road from Wendover to London. It had formerly a Benedictine Abbey founded by Sir William de Missenden in 1133, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was £285 15*s.* 9*d.* The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is chiefly arable with a large portion of woodland and common. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,204, and the vicarial for one of £337 10*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower, and has recently been enlarged. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum, besides a school house. There are Church and Dissenting schools. The Baptists have a place of worship. J. Randall, a divine, was a native of this parish. Missenden Abbey, Hampden House, and Woodland's Lodge are the principal residences. George Carrington, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday and the Monday following old Michaelmas Day.

MISSENDEN, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 2½ miles S.E. of Great Missenden, its post town, 2 N. by W. of Amersham, and 3 from Chesham. The village, which is wholly agricultural, consists of one principal street crossed by a smaller one at right angles. It is situated near the Misbourn stream, and on the road to Aylesbury. The land is principally arable, with a large portion in an uncultivated state. The surface is hilly and well wooded. The soil consists of clay and chalk, abounding with flints, and alternating with loam. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small structure restored in the years 1828 and 1853. The interior contains two brasses of the Stiles family. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes and infants. There are two places of worship for the Baptists and one for the Wesleyans. Missenden Abbey is the principal residence. Earl Howe is lord of the manor.

MISSON, a par. in the Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 3 miles N.E. of Bawtry, its nearest railway station and post town, and 12 S.E. of Doncaster. The par., which is of large extent, is situated on the river Idle, near Misson Levels, or Car, and contains the hmlt. of Newington. A portion of this parish on the E. side is in the Corringham hundred of the county of Lincoln. The village is well built. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture. The land is chiefly arable and the soil generally sandy and light. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1760. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £359, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing a clock and four bells. The parochial charities produce about £52 5*s.* per annum, of which £50 10*s.* go to the parish school, and the remainder for the benefit of the poor. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The Rev. Christopher Neville, M.A., is lord of the manor.

MISTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 1 mile E. by S. of Lutterworth, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The small river Swift, which is subject to a rapid rise and fall of its waters, flows through the parish. The par. contains the vil. of Walcote and the hmlt. of Poultney. It is a meet for the Pytchley hounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £619 15*s.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £870. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing four bells. The charities consist of a rent-charge of £15 per annum and 10 acres of land, producing £19 for distribution among the poor.

MISTERTON, a par. in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 4½ miles N.W. of Gainsborough. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated in the north-eastern extremity of the county, where the river Idle and Chesterfield canal terminate in the river Trent. The par. includes the chplry. of West Stockwith and several hmlts. The village stands on the N. bank of the Chesterfield canal, and is large and well built. A great part of the surface was formerly a swamp, but has been drained and brought into cultivation. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1771. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £100, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of York. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a large ancient structure much damaged by a storm in 1824. There are places of worship for the Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The charities are very considerable, producing above £308 per annum.

MISTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Crewkerne, co. Somerset, 1½ mile S.E. of Crewkerne, its post town, and 5½ miles N. of Beaminster. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The river Axe flows through the parish. A portion of the land is in pasture. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £205, and the vicarial for £70. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £162, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a turret containing two bells. The register dates from 1600. The parochial charities produce about £39 per annum. A Sunday-school is held at the church.

MISTLEY, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 1 mile E. of Manningtree, its post town, and 11 miles W. of Harwich. It is a station on the Harwich line of railway. The village, which contains many new houses, is situated on the banks of the river Stour. This river is well stocked with various kinds of fish, and is navigable for vessels of 300 tons at spring tides, so that a barge communication with Sudbury is maintained, affording great facilities for the conveyance of coal, corn, and malt, which trades are carried on extensively. Near the banks of the river are commodious warehouses, and the quay was considerably improved and enlarged in 1849. Mistley is a petty sessions town for the division of Tendring alternately with Thorpe. It was held at Domesday Survey by Henry de Ramis, and came to the Rainsforths, Baynings, &c. About two-thirds of the land is arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland, with some extensive gardens and plantations. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £660. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Bradfield annexed, in the dioc. of Rochester, joint val. £698. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built in 1735. There is also a district church at Manningtree, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £130. Mistley Hall, the old seat of the Rigby family, was demolished in 1845, and other buildings erected on its site. There is a National school.

MITCHAM, a par. and post town in the second div. of the hund. of Wallington, co. Surrey, 4 miles N.W. of Croydon, and 9 S.W. of Westminster Bridge. It is a station on the Wimbledon and Croydon branch of the London and South-Western railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the road to Reigate, and on the river Wandle, celebrated for its trout. The greater portion of the land is laid out in vast plantations of camomile, liquorice, peppermint, lavender, and herb gardens, which supply the London market. It is also distinguished for its production of elms of stately growth, and a large quantity of roses are grown, which are used for Rowland's kalydor. A small common, at the entrance into the village from London, still retains the name of Figge's Marsh, having been the property of Sir Edward Figge. The parish is divided into Upper Mitcham, formerly called Witford, or Waterford, and Lower Mitcham, anciently Michelham. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the corn and tobacco mills, and some in calico-printing and in the bleaching-grounds. There are several stately old houses, with spacious walled gardens and pleasure-grounds. There are gas-works; also a police station of the P division of metropolitan police. The air is remarkable for its salubrity, and so mild that it has been described as the Montpelier of England. The soil is a rich loam lying upon a substratum of gravel of great depth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £456. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a modern structure, having been rebuilt in 1822, with the exception of the square embattled tower, which is ancient and contains a peal of eight bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of Alderman Cowley and Mrs. Hallam, the actress. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £173, of which £63 goes to the Sunday-school. The Miss Tate's almshouses, erected and endowed in 1829 for twelve females upwards of fifty-five years old, are situated on Lower Mitcham Green. There are National, infant, and Sunday schools. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. Archbishop Cranmer, Sir Julius Cæsar, Sir Walter Raleigh, Dr. Donne, and Moses Mendez were residents of this parish. Mitcham Grove was presented by Lord Clive to his counsel Wedderburn.

MITCHELDEVER, UPPER and LOWER, hunds. in the Winchester and N. divs. of co. Hants, containing the pars. of Farley-Chamberlayne, Mitcheldever, Northington, East Stratton, Swarraton, and part of King's-Worthy, comprising an area of 16,750 acres.

MITCHELDEVER, or MICHELDEVER, a par. and post town in the above hund., co. Hants, 7 miles N. of Winchester, and 9 S. by E. of Whitchurch. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the South-Western railway, on which there is a station about 2½ miles from the village; the post-office adjoins the station. The par. includes the tythgs. of West Stratton and Weston-Colley. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of East Stratton annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £326. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure with an embattled tower. The interior contains monuments by Chantrey, and tablets to the Baring family. The church was erected in lieu of the old one destroyed by fire in 1806, with the exception of a portion of the old tower, at an expense of £10,000, entirely defrayed by Sir Francis Baring. There are almshouses for fifty aged and infirm poor, also a free school.

MITCHELL, or MIDSHALL, co. Cornwall. See St. Michael.

MITCHELLDEAN, or MICHELDEAN, a par. and post town in the hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S. of Mitchelldean Road railway station, 6 N.W. of Newnham, and 11 W. of Gloucester. The village, which is of ancient date, was formerly held by the Greyndours. There are coal and iron works, also tanneries. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated within the limits of Dean Forest. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £141. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty spired tower 156 feet high, containing a clock and eight bells. The church has a carved oak roof and wall paintings of Edward IV.'s time. It contains several old tombs and an antique font. The parochial charities produce about £89 per annum, of which £62 goes to Lane's free school for both sexes. There is a place of worship for the Independents. The Wilderness is the principal residence. Maynard Colchester, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MITCHELGROVE, a seat of the Duke of Norfolk, co. Sussex, 4 miles E. by N. of Arundel. It is a mansion in the pointed style, and formerly belonged to the Shelley family.

MITCHELMERSH, or MICHELMERSH, a par. in the hund. of Lower Thorngate, Romsey div. of co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Romsey, its post town, and 11 from Southampton. The village is situated near the Andover canal, and is wholly agricultural. The par. is extensive, containing the hmlts. of Brashfield and Awbridge. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £814. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £550, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient flint and stone structure, and has recently been restored. It has a font of great antiquity, and the eastern window is of stained glass. There is a tablet bearing date 1538; also an effigy of a knight in armour. There is also a district church at Brashfield, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £50. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, which goes to a Sunday-school. There are three parochial schools, and a place of worship for the Wesleyans; also one at Awbridge for the Independents.

MITCHELSTOWN, a small post and market town in the par. of Brigown, bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 30 miles N.N.E. of Cork, and 128 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from thence to Cork, and on a small tributary to the river Funcheon. It is a chief police station, and contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, barracks, fever hospital, and a dispensary within the Fermoy Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held fortnightly. On one side of a square stands Kingston College, an institution founded by James Baron Kingston in 1760. It provides a house and small income for twelve decayed gentlemen and gentlewomen. The Kingston family have been the principal and liberal agents in the improvements and maintenance of the town. A castle was founded here by the White Knight, or Clangibbon, who was an extensive landowner of the surrounding district. The castle was taken by the insurgents in 1641, and in 1645 by Lord Castlehaven; and it subsequently came into the possession of the Fentons and Kings. Earl Kingston, of Mitchelstown Castle, is the present lord of the manor. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 10th January, 25th March, 23rd May, 30th July, 12th November, and 2nd December.

MITCHELSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Nobber, its post town. It is 2¼ miles long by three-quarters of a mile in breadth. The soil is good. The road from Kells to Ardee crosses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Syddan, £225, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

MITCHELSTOWN CAVES, a series of stalactite caves 6 miles E.N.E. of Mitchelstown, extending between the cos. Cork and Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. They occur near the Galtee and Knockmealdown mountains, on the Cahir road. The most notable objects are the Drum, Pyramid, Garret Cave, and Kingston Gallery.

MITCHEL-TROY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 2½ miles S.W. of Monmouth, its post town. It is situated on the southern bank of the river Trothy. The village consists of a few farmhouses and cottages. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £221 10*s*. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Cwmcarvan annexed, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £398. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower which has an inscription on the wall of the S.W. angle, probably respecting the founder of the church. In the churchyard is an ancient cross.

MITE, a river of co. Cumberland, rises under Screesfell, near Barnmoor Tarn, and falls into the sea at Ravenglass.

MITFORD, a hund. in co. Norfolk, contains the pars. of South Burgh, Cranworth, Garvestone, Hardingham, Hockering, Letton, Mattishall, Reymersdon, Bergh-Mattishall, Shipdham, Thuxton, East and West Tuddenham, Westfield, Whinbergh, Wood-Rising, Yaxham, and part of East Dereham, comprising an area of 33,570 acres.

MITFORD, a par. in the wards of Morpeth and Castle, co. Northumberland, 21 miles W. of Morpeth, its post town, and 16 N. of Newcastle-on-Tyne. It is situated at the junction of the rivers Wansbeck and Font, each of which is crossed by a stone bridge. The par., which is very extensive, comprises High Laws, Molesden, and nine other tnshps. Mitford was formerly a market town, and at the Conquest was held by John Mitford, ancestor of William Mitford, Esq., author of "The History of Greece." It subsequently came to the earls of Pembroke and Athol, and was reduced to ashes by the barons in the war against King John. The soil is various, resting upon a substratum of sandstone, limestone, and coal. The land is divided between arable, meadow, and pasture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient stone structure, and formerly belonged to Lanercost priory. The interior contains effigies of the Bertram family, &c. The register dates from 1667. There are parochial and National schools for both sexes—the latter built in 1830. The Sunday-school is held at the church. Admiral Robert Mitford is lord of the manor. Spittal Hill, in this parish, was the site of a hospital, founded by William Bertram in the reign of Henry I. There are remains of two castles—one nearly adjoining the church, part of which is still occupied, and the other of earlier date, formerly belonging to Sir Gilbert Middleton, on account of whose treason it was demolished by order of Edward II.

MITTON, or MYTON, a par., chiefly in the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, but partly in the lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3 miles W. of Clitheroe, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Whalley. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Hodder and Ribble. The par., which is very extensive, contains the tnshps. of Great Mitton, Aighton, Grindleton, Waddington, Hurst-Green, Bailey, Chaigley, Bashall-Eaves, and West Bradford. Henry VI. was betrayed in this parish by the Talbots, and in 1319 it was the scene of dreadful slaughter and devastation, committed by the Scots on their irruption into England. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The soil is clay, upon a subsoil of gravel and limestone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £180. The church, dedicated to Allhallows, formerly belonged to Cockersand Abbey, and was built in the reign of Edward III. It is a stone structure with a lofty square embattled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church has an ancient cross, and on the N. side of the chancel is the sepulchral chapel of the Sherburne family. In addition to the parish church there are the following district churches—viz. at Grindleton, Hurst-Green, and Waddington, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £122 to £85. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a day school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. John Welchman Aspinall, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of a considerable portion of the surface. Stoneyhurst, now occupied as a Roman Catholic college, was anciently the seat of the Sherburnes, commenced by Sir Richard Sherburne towards the close of the 16th century.

MITTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Penkridge, hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 2½ miles W. by N. of Penkridge.

MITTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bredon, co. Worcester, 2 miles N.E. of Tewkesbury. It is joined with Hardwick to form a township.

MITTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Clitheroe. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Calder and Ribble, and contains the hmlts. of Henthorn and Coldcotes. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. Mitton Hall is the principal residence.

MITTON, LOWER, a chplry in the par. of Kidderminster, hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, adjoining the town of Stourport. It has some corn mills noticed by Leland. Haresfoot trefoil grows on the common. The Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal here joins the Severn, and by uniting that river with the Trent affords an extended line of inland navigation. There are a worsted yarn factory, an iron foundry, tanneries, and vinegar works. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £170, in the patron. of the vicar. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a brick edifice erected in 1790.

MITTON, UPPER, a hmlt. in the par. of Hartlebury, lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, near Mitton Lower, and three-quarters of a mile N.E. of Stourport.

MIULIE LOCH, a small lake in Strathfarrar, co. Inverness, Scotland, 12 miles S.W. by W. of Beauly. In it is an islet formerly the retreat of Lord Lovat after his defeat at Culloden.

MIXBURY, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 5½ miles S.E. of Brackley, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Bicester. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Ouse, which separates it from Northamptonshire. The par. includes the hmlt. of Fulwell and the tnshp. of Wollaston. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is elevated but level, and the soil is light and thin. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone edifice, with a square tower containing three bells. It has a Norman doorway, with zigzag mouldings leading into the S. aisle. The church has been thoroughly restored, principally at the expense of the rector. The interior contains tombs of the Bathursts. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a free school supported by the incumbent. Stanley Batson, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are traces of an ancient fortification surrounded by a moat, which by the Normans was called Beaumont.

MIXENDEN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Ovenden and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, near Halifax.

MIXON SANDS, THE, two shoals of this name, one on the coast of Dorset, off Weymouth, and the other on the coast of Glamorgan, off Mumbles Head, where the Arietta was lost in 1848.

MIZEN HEAD, two promontories of this name on the coast of Ireland. That near Sheep Head, in the co. of Cork, is supposed to be the Notium Promonterium of Ptolemy. The other, to the S.W. of Wicklow, is distinguished as Ardinairy Point, and is a coastguard station.

MOANBANE, a mountain in co. Wicklow, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Blessington. It attains an elevation of 2,313 feet above sea-level.

MOANVAGHAN, an extensive bog in King's County, Ireland, near Portarlington.

MOAT, a hmlt. in the par. of Ightham, hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 3 miles E. of Sevenoaks.

MOAT-BURN, a rivulet in the par. of Tweedsmuir, co. Peebles, Scotland. It flows eastwardly into the river Tweed.

MOATE, or MOATE-A-GRENOGE, a small post and market town in the pars. of Kilmanaghan and Kilcleagh, bar. of Clonlonan, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 10 miles from Athlone, 17 S.W. of Mullingar, and 66 from Dublin. It is a station on the Midland Great Western railway. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Galway, and consists of one well edificed street. It contains the parish church of Kilcleagh, a Roman Catholic chapel, three other chapels, a convent, schools, bridewell, and a dispensary within the Athlone Poor-law Union. Numerous seats adorn the neighbourhood, and the Grand canal affords ready communication. Here is a chief police station, and petty sessions are held at frequent intervals. A detachment of James II.'s troops took shelter here when retiring before De Ginkell in 1690. It takes its name from having had a moat called Grace M'Loughlin, or "Grana Oge." Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on 25th April, 22nd June, 2nd and 15th October.

MOAT LANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanwnog, co. Montgomery, 6 miles W. by N. of Newtown. It is the junction station of the Newtown and Machynlleth branch railway. It is situated near the river Severn and the Sarn Sws Roman way, which went to Chester.

MOAT, NEW, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 10 miles from Haverfordwest, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Narberth. It is situated on the river Cleddy, and has a moated hill formed by the Flemings in Henry II.'s time, also a Roman camp. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The principal residence is Moat House, rebuilt by the Scourfields on the site of the old mansion. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure erected on the site of the older one. It contains tombs of the Scourfield family.

MOAT PARK, the demesne of Lord Crofton, in the bar. of South Ballintober, co. Roscommon, Ireland, 2 miles from Roscommon, and 93 W. by N. of Dublin. It is situated near the river Hinde.

MOAT QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Andrews-upon-Esk, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 3½ miles N. of Longtown. It is situated on the river Liddell, on whose banks are the ruins of the old moated tower called Liddell's Strength. It several times fell into the power of the Scots, and on one occasion was taken by David, King of Scotland, who caused the two sons of the governor, Sir Walter Selby, to be strangled.

MOBBERLEY, a par. in the hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles N.E. of Knutsford, its post town, and 4 from Wilmslow. It is a station of the Northwich and Altrincham branch of the Cheshire Midland railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on a branch of the river Bollin. In 1206 a priory of Black Canons was founded by the Mobberleys, but it existed only a short time. On the site of the priory is the old manor house, now in a ruinous condition, with the exception of an oak staircase and some empannelled rooms. It came through the Mobberleys and Talbots to the Leycesters of Toft, and so to the Mallory family. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the manufacture of cotton goods. The parish, which comprises about 10,000 acres, is divided into three baronies, for each of which a distinct court is held annually by its lord. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £524. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. The church was restored by the Talbots in 1533, when the tower was rebuilt. The interior contains some stone stalls, a richly carved screen, and the remains of a rood-loft, also several marble monuments and a singular one painted on wood. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, of which £11 go to the free school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans. Mobberley Old Hall, New Hall, and Newton Hall are the principal residences, the latter being now occupied as a ladies' school.

MOCCAS, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 13 miles W. of Hereford, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Weobly. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wye, and on the Hereford and Hay road. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The soil is of a loamy and sandy nature, with a subsoil of clay and sandstone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £192 6s. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £186. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice, with a small tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments and tablets. There is a free school for both sexes, which is entirely supported by Sir V. Cornewall, Bart., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Moccas Court, formerly the seat of the Vaughans, is the principal residence. The park is well stocked with deer.

MOCHDRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrillo-yn-Rhos, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.E. of Conway.

MOCHRAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandanwg, co. Merioneth, 3 miles S. by W. of Harlech, and 10 N. of Barmouth. It is situated at the mouth of the river Artro, on Cardigan Bay.

MOCHROS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarth, co. Cardigan, 4 miles S.W. of Aeraeron. In the neighbourhood is a small creek, with a bar at the mouth.

MOCHRUM, a par. in co. Wigtown, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Port William, Eldrig, and Kirk-of-Mochrum, and extends about 12 miles from S.E. to N.W. in length, with an extreme breadth of 5¾ miles. It is bounded by the E. side of Luce Bay, and the pars. of Old Luce, Kirkcowan, Kirkinner, and Glasterton. The surface is hilly, though at no place of any great altitude. The soil is generally of a stony description, but for several miles along Luce Bay it consists of a fine light and rich loam. There are excellent sheep walks in the uplands. The parish is watered by several streams and lakes, in which are perch, trout, and various other fish. The village of Kirk-of-Mochrum is about 8 miles S.W. of Wigtown, and 2 N. of Port William. It is situated on the road from Whithorn to Glenluce, and is of small extent. This par. is in the presb. of Wigtown and synod of Galloway, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £160. The parish church was erected in 1794, and was enlarged in 1832. There is an United Presbyterian church at Port William; also parochial and other schools. On the banks of the river near the modern mansion stands the castle, or Old Place, of Mochrum, surrounded by lofty trees. It was formerly the family seat of the Dunbars, knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Earl of Galloway. The principal remains of antiquity are a moat, round camp, and St. Finian's chapel.

MOCHTREF. See MOUGHTREY, co. Montgomery.

MOCKERKIN, a hmlt. in the parochial chplry. of Loweswater, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Cockermouth. The hamlet forms a constablewick with Sosgill.

MOCKTOWN, an ancient par. in co. Kilkenny, Ireland, now joined to Garranamanna.

MOCOLLOP AND LISMORE, an united par. in the bars. of Condons and Clangibbon, Coshmore and Coshbride, cos. Cork and Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. See LISMORE.

MOCURRY, or TOMACURRY, a hmlt. in the par. of Monart, in the bar. of Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Enniscorthy. It is situated on the bank of the Slaney. Fairs are held on the Thursday after Trinity Sunday, 26th October, and 27th November.

MODBURY, a par., post and market town in the hund. of Ermington, co. Devon, 7½ miles N.W. of Kingsbridge, and 12 E. of Plymouth. It is situated near the South Devon railway and river Erme, and contains the hmlts. of Caton, Leigh, Brownston, or Brownstone, Ludbrook, and Penquit. This place, called in Latin records Motberia, was held by Wado in the Confessor's time, and came to the Legassickes through the Valletorts, Okestones, and Champernownes of Modbury Court, which was fortified by Richard Champernowne in 1334. During the civil war of Charles I. it was taken and garrisoned for the parliament in 1642, but is now in ruins. The borough returned two members to parliament in the 34th of Edward I., but was afterwards relieved from making returns on the plea of poverty. The town of Modbury is governed by a portreeve, two constables, and other subordinate officers, appointed at one of the courts-leet held at Michaelmas and Lady Day. It is well supplied with water from numerous and excellent springs, which are served by three conduits. Petty sessions are held every six weeks at the "White Hart Inn." The manufacture of woollen goods, which was formerly carried on to a large extent, has decayed, but a considerable trade in corn and malt is still carried on, and there is an extensive tannery and fellmonger's establishment. A literary and scientific institute was founded in 1840 by Richard King. The town, which occupies the bottom and declivities of a valley, consists chiefly of four streets meeting at right angles near the lowest part of the town, where the roads leading to Plymouth, Kingsbridge, and Dartmouth form a junction. The new London road from Plymouth to Exeter passes about a mile from the town. A creek, navigable for barges, extends from the estuary of the river Erme, which bounds the parish on the W., to within 2 miles of the town, facilitating the export of agricultural produce and the import of coal, &c. The soil is rich and productive, and the land distributed betwixt orchard, arable, pasture, and woodland. The substratum abounds with limestone, which is quarried both for building and burning into lime, and there are some quarries of slatestone. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Brownstone annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £302, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient embattled structure with a tower rebuilt in 1622, and crowned by a spire. The interior of the church has monuments to the Champernowne and Prideaux families. The church has recently been thoroughly restored. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Society of Friends have each a place of worship. There are traces of a Benedictine priory, founded in the reign of Stephen as a cell to St. Peter-sur-Dive, in Normandy. Lord Chief Justice Fortescue and Sir George Baker, President of the Royal College of Physicians, were natives. Market day is Thursday, and a cattle market is held on the second Monday in every month. A stock fair is held on the 4th May.

MODELLIGO, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Cappoquin. Waterford is its post town. The par. is 5½ miles long, and its extreme breadth is 3½ miles. The surface is hilly, and comprises a considerable proportion of uncultivated ground. The river Phinisk traverses the interior, and the Magaha traces part of the western boundary. The road from Waterford to Cork also crosses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with another, £112, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and three day schools. Rockfield is the principal seat. There are ruins of several castles, one of which belonged to the M'Graths.

MODESHIL, a par. in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles E. of Killenaule. Callan is its post town. The par. is 2½ miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of very good land. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Lismullen, £785, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There are likewise some castle ruins.

MODREENY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles N.E. of Nenagh. It contains its post town, Cloghjordan. The par. is 5 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 3½ miles. The surface consists generally of a good soil, and is traversed by the road from Birr to Nenagh. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £438, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1828, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Ardcrony and Kilmane. There are three Sunday-schools, and five or six daily schools. The principal residences are Modreeny Hall, the seat of Sir T. Dancer, Bart., and Modreeny House. There are ruins of a castle.

MODRYDD, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanspyddid, hund. of Devynnock, co. Brecon, 2 miles W. of Brecknock. It is situated on the river Tarrell, under the Brecknockshire Beacon, which attains an altitude of 2,862 feet.

MOEDDYN CASTLE, an ancient British camp in co. Cardigan, near Pennarth.

MOELFELIARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangadfan, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Llanfair.

MOELFRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansilin, co. Denbigh, 7 miles S.W. of Chirk.

MOEL-Y-WYDDFA, or "the conspicuous summit," is the highest peak of Snowdon, in co. Carnarvon. It attains an elevation of 3,571 feet, and was a station of the Ordnance Survey. Many other Welsh mountains have the prefix "Moel."

MOFFAT, a par., watering-place, and market town, in the upper ward of Lanark, cos. Dumfries and Lanark, Scotland. It comprises the post town of its own name, and extends about 15 miles from W. to E. in length, with an extreme breadth of 8½ miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Tweedsmuir, Megget, Ettrick, Eskdalemuir, Hutton, Wamphray, Kirkpatrick-Juxta, and Crawford. The land is the highest in the district of Annandale, above half the parish being occupied by the loftiest mountains S. of the Forth and Clyde. The celebrated Alpine lake Lochakeen lies upwards of 1,000 feet above the level of the sea, and contains the finest species of trout in the S. of Scotland. The outlet of the waters of this lake is by the lofty cascade called the "Grey Mare's Tail," which, from the opposite side of the glen, appears to be one unbroken fall. Some of the summits of this elevated region are extensively wooded, others studded with natural clumps of oak, birch, and mountain ash. The grounds which are enclosed are partly cultivated and partly in pasture. A remarkably fine view is obtained from the gorge or glen called the "Bell Craig." In this parish are traces of Roman and British camps, border towers, &c.; also the Mote Hill. This par. is in the presb. of Lochmaben and synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £279. The church was erected in 1790. Besides the parish church there is a Free church, also a parochial school and two private schools. The town of Moffat is distant about 19 miles N. of Dumfries, and 2 from the Beattock station on the Caledonian railway. It is situated under Hartfell and Errickstanebrae, on the Roman way, and near the confluence of the Evan and Moffat Water—from which latter stream the town derives its name. The principal street—High-street—runs N. and S., and contains some good shops. The houses are well built, giving to the town a remarkably neat appearance. Handsome baths, with a reading-room attached, were erected in 1827. There are also a private hotel and several good inns. The greater part of the town has been built within the last half century, and is much resorted to in summer as a fashionable watering-place. The springs are three in number, comprising one sulphureous and two chalybeate. The sulphureous spring, called Moffat Well, is about 1 mile from the town, with which it is connected by an excellent carriage road. Its waters are considered particularly efficacious in scrofulous and scorbutic complaints, also as an antidote for gravel and rheumatism. The waters of the chalybeate spring, at Gartpool Lum, are much stronger than those of Hartfell, and consequently are taken in smaller doses—not more than a wineglassful at a time. About 4 miles N.W. from thence is a petrifying spring, besides numerous others of lesser note. Nearly one-half of the parish belongs to Johnston of Annandale. A weekly market is held, also fairs on the third Friday in March (old style), 29th July, and 20th October, or the following Tuesday.

MOFONIOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llannefydd, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N.W. of Denbigh. It is situated on the river Elwy.

MOGEELY, or IMOGEELY, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of the town of Castle-Martyr, its post town. It is a station on the Cork and Youghal railway. The par.

is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is hilly, with excellent soil in the valleys. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Castlemartyr, £335, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in the middle of the last century. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Dungourney and Clonmult. There are five day schools. Castletown is the chief seat.

MOGEELY, a par. in the bar. of Kinnatalloon, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles E. of Rathcormack. Tallow is its post town. It is 7½ miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Curraglass. The surface, which is hilly, is traversed by the river Bride, and the roads from Tallow to Fermoy and Rathcormack. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £546, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built at the close of the last century. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Knockmourne and Ballinoe. There are a Sunday and several day schools. Lisnabrin and Curraglass are the chief residences. The Desmonds had a castle here on the banks of the river Bride. A church for Knights Templars was founded here in 1302.

MOGEESHA, a par. in the bars. of Barrymoore and Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of Middleton, its post town. The par. is 3½ miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface lies along the margin of the Middleton river, near Cork Harbour, and is traversed by the road from Cork to Waterford. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £513, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two or three day schools. Rossmore is the principal residence.

MOGGERHANGER, a hmlt. in the par. of Blunham, hund. of Wixamtree, co. Bedford, 4½ miles N. of Biggleswade.

MOHAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Loughgilly, bar. of Lower Fews, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Markethill.

MOHER, a small lough in co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Westport.

MOHILL, a bar. in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Leitrim, Carigallen, and Longford, and by the cos. of Roscommon and Longford. It contains parts of the pars. of Annaduff, Cloone, Fenagh, and Mohill.

MOHILL, a par., post and market town, in the bars. of Leitrim and Mohill, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The par. is 13 miles in length, and its extreme breadth is 4 miles, containing part of the vil. of Rooskey. The river Shannon traces part of the western border. The Eslin and Rinn are streams of the interior, which is also diversified by several lakes. The town is situated near the Shannon river, 5 miles N.W. of Longford, and 95 from Dublin. It consists of one principal street, containing several good shops. It is a prosperous little town, enjoying a fair share of trade, besides a very considerable traffic in corn, yarn, &c. It contains chief police and revenue stations, a dispensary, poorhouse, fever hospital, loan fund, and newsrooms. It is governed by the county magistrates, and petty sessions are held every fortnight. An abbey was founded here in 608, called St. Manachan's Abbey. Mohill Poor-law Union contains 13 electoral divisions in co. Leitrim. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £707, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a plain old building, standing in the town, and was restored in 1815 by means of a sum lent by the late Board of First Fruits. There are a large Roman Catholic chapel and a Methodist chapel; also a school under the National Board, and several other daily schools. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 12th January, 2nd and 25th February, 16th March, 13th April, 8th May, 1st June, 6th and 31st July, 17th August, 14th September, 19th October, 9th November, and 7th December.

MOIL CASTLE, an ancient fortress in the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, near Kylehaken Ferry.

MOIN, THE, a moorish tract in the pars. of Durness and Tongue, co. Sutherland, Scotland. It stretches in a southwardly direction from the coast of Whitenhead, and attains an altitude of 1,300 feet above sea-level. It is about 12 miles by 4½ in extent, and is the property of the Duke of Sutherland, at whose expense a new line of road has been formed along the coast.

MOIRA, or MOYRAGH, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 14½ miles from Belfast, and 22 W. by N. of Downpatrick. It is a station on the Ulster railway. The par. is 4½ miles long, and its extreme breadth is 2½ miles. The surface lies to the S.E. of Lough Neagh, and is intersected by the road from Lisburn to Belfast, the Lagan canal, and the Ulster railway. It was formerly incorporated with the parish of Magheralin, but in 1725 was constituted a separate parish. The town is well built, and contains a police station and a courthouse. Petty sessions are held fortnightly. Linen-weaving occupies a considerable proportion of the population. Limestone is quarried to some extent, and basalt and coal occur. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £414, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a Gothic structure, forming a conspicuous feature in the town. It was built soon after 1725, at the expense of Sir John Rawdon and the Earl of Hillsborough. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Magheralin. There are a Methodist and two Presbyterian meeting-houses; also Sunday and several day schools in the parish. Moira Castle is the seat of the Marquis of Hastings, who takes from hence the title of Earl Moira. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Thursdays in February, May, August, and November.

MOIRA, a vil. in the par. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, co. Leicester, 3 miles S.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. It is a station on the Midland railway. It is situated on the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the coal-pits, which are worked to a great extent. The coal-field, on which the village stands, is about 100 square miles in extent, and yields, besides a fine hard coal, ironstone of good quality.

MOISTA SOUND, in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, Ireland.

MOLAHIFFE, a par. in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Milltown, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2½ in breadth. The surface extends along the left side of the river Main, and is intersected by the road from Tralee to Killarney. It is somewhat hilly, with bog, and a soil of average quality. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with two others, £285. The church was built in 1818, by a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilbonane and Kilcredane. There are two or three day schools. Molahiffe Castle is the chief residence. A fair is held on the 26th May.

MOLASH, or MOLDASH, a par. in the hund. of Felborough, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 9 miles N. of Ashford, its post town, and 3½ from the Chilham railway station. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in hop-grounds. King's Wood and Challock Wood lie to the S. of the village. The soil is light, with flintstone. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £93. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Chilham, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church is a small ancient structure dedicated to St. Peter. It is situated in a very obscure position, owing to the surrounding hills. The interior contains a very old font. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a school supported at the expense of Edward Knight, Esq., of Godmersham Park. Charles Hardy, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MOLD, a hund. in co. Flint, contains the pars. of Hawarden, Mold, and part of Gresford.

MOLD, or YR WYDDGRUG, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of the same name, co. Flint, 6 miles S. of Flint. It is connected by a branch line with the Chester and Holyhead railway. It is situated in a narrow and fertile plain, surrounded by rugged hills, and watered by the river Alun or Alyn.

The par., which is of large extent, includes the chplries. of Bistree, Gwernafield, Leeswood, Pontblyddyn, and Tryddyn, with eight other townships. At Maes-y-Garmon in this parish St. Germanus is said to have defeated the heathen Saxons in 448. The surface is varied and well wooded. The substratum abounds in mineral treasures, including lead, coal, limestone, and potters' clay. The town, which consists principally of one long and spacious street, irregularly built, contains about 9,000 inhabitants. It is an assize and sessions town, and under the Reform Bill is a contributory borough to Flint. It is also the headquarters of the county militia. Its early history is connected with that of the castle which stood on Bailey Hill, called by the Welsh Wyddgrûg, or the "conspicuous eminence," from the fine view it commands of the circumjacent vale. This fortress, originally built by Eustace de Cruer, was defended by ramparts, and surrounded by a deep foss. It was first reduced by storm in 1144 by the Welsh forces under Owain Gwynedd, and was destroyed by Owain Glyndwr. It subsequently was taken and re-taken, destroyed, rebuilt, and destroyed again. The only remains are a few stones of the keep or donjon, which stood upon a part of the works greatly and artificially elevated. These sieges are mentioned by the Welsh historians among the most splendid achievements in their annals. The principal buildings in the town are the county hall, where the assizes are held, built by Mr. Jones, of Chester, for £3,000, new market-house, two commercial banks, a savings-bank, cotton and woollen mills. A little to the N. of the town is Offa's Dyke, near the Chester road. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £322, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built in the reign of Henry VII, and previous to the Reformation belonged to Bysham Abbey, in Berkshire. The tower, which is the most modern part of the structure, is enriched with sculpture and crowned with pinnacles. The interior is highly decorated, and contains a carved font, and tombs of Bishop Warton, Davies of Llannerch, Dr. Wynn of Tower, and of Wilson the painter. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. at Bistre, Gwernafield, Pont-Blyddyn, Nerquis, and Tryddyn, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £200 to £100 each. There are various places of worship for Dissenters, also National and other schools. The chief seats are Gwysaney, Hartsheath, Nerquis Hall, Pentre, and Rhual. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of St. Asaph. In the vicinity many rare plants are met with. On the hills are many tumuli; and in 1833 a gold corslet, 3 feet 7 inches long, was found near the bank of the river. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the 13th February, 21st March, 12th May, 2nd August, and 22nd November.

MOLE, two rivers of this name: one rises near Lyne Hall, in co. Surrey, and passing by a subterraneous channel under Boxhill, near Dorking, joins the Thames at East Molesey, opposite Hampton Court; the other rises near High Bray, in North Devonshire, and joins the river Bray at Leigh.

MOLE-COP, or MOW-COP, a vil. in the par. of Wolstanton, co. Stafford, 1 mile N.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyme. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. It is situated under Mole-Cop, which is 1,091 feet in height. The Grand Trunk canal passes at a short distance and affords ready conveyance for the coal, lime, and ironstone which are abundantly procured here. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of pottery. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £162, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern. There are places of worship for Dissenters, also schools.

MOLESCROFT, or MOSCROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of St. John and borough of Beverley, East Riding co. York, 1 mile N.W. of Beverley. The village, which is small, is situated on the Beverley and Cherry-Burton road, near Molescroft Carrs. One of the sanctuary crosses is in this neighbourhood.

MOLESDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Mitford, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.W. of Morpeth. The village is small and wholly agricultural.

MOLESEY, or MOULSEY, EAST, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Elmbridge, co. Surrey, 3 miles N.W. of Kingston, its post town, and 13 from London. It is situated to the S. of the Thames, where the river Mole, from which the place derives its name, unites with the Thames, nearly opposite Hampton Court. The South-Western railway has a station here for Hampton Court, with which it is connected by a bridge. There are corn and saw mills on the Mole. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and meadow. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1815. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £157, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an an ancient brick structure, with a wooden belfry. It contains a curious brass to Anthony Standen, cup-bearer to King James of Scotland. The register commences in 1650. St. Paul's, Kent Town, is a separate ecclesiastical district on the W. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100. There are National schools for boys, girls, and infants, having an endowment of £6 per annum. Lord Hotham and Lady Berkeley are the lord and lady of the manor.

MOLESEY, or MOULSEY, WEST, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Elmbridge, co. Surrey, 1 mile W. of East Molesey, 2½ miles N. of the Esher railway, and 4 W. of Kingston, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the Thames near Molesey Hurst. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The parish is bounded on the N. by the Thames, across which is a ferry to Hampton, and on the S.E. by the river Mole. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1815. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100. The church has an old flint and rubble tower containing a clock and two bells. The fabric was rebuilt in 1843, and enlarged in 1860, when a N. aisle was added. The windows are of stained glass. The register dates from 1729. There is a National school. Molesey Hurst, or Common, on which the Hampton races are held, is situated in the N. part of the parish, on the banks of the Thames. Lord Hotham and Lady Berkeley are joint lord and lady of the manor. The races are held in June.

MOLESWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Leighton-stone, co. Huntingdon, 5 miles N.W. of Kimbolton, and 11 W. of Huntingdon. Thrapstone is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Molesworth Wold, and gives name to the Molesworths of Swords and Pencarrow. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1800, with the exception of a small portion since commuted for a rent-charge of £33 14*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £228, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a tower. The charities produce about £27 per annum, which is distributed annually amongst the poor. Benjamin Welstead, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MOLFRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandefeilog, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles N. of Kidwelly.

MOLFRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwym, co. Denbigh, 13 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

MOLL, a par. now joined to that of Morebattle, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 12 miles S.E. of Kelso. It contains the upper portion of the Bowmontwater basin adjoining the English border. The village is of ancient date, and in its vicinity are the ruins of Mow-Kirk.

MOLLAND, or MOLLAND-BOTREAUX, a par. in the hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, 6 miles N.E. of South Molton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There is a camp under Molland Down. Several mines have been worked in this parish at different periods. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Knowstone, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains tombs of the Courtenays. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum, bequeathed by Thomas Clark in 1776. There is a National school.

MOLLENSBURN, a vil. in the par. of Cadder, co. Lanark, Scotland, 8 miles N.E. of Glasgow.

MOLLINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Cropredy, hunds. of Bloxham and Kington, cos. Oxford and Warwick, 5 miles N.W. of Banbury, its post town, and 9 from Shipston-on-Stour. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated on an eminence. There is a small charity distributed yearly in coals.

MOLLINGTON BANASTRE, or LITTLE MOLLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary-on-the-Hill, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 2 miles N.W. of Chester, and 1 mile S. of the Mollington railway station.

MOLLINGTON TARRANT, or GREAT MOLLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Backford, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 2½ miles N.W. of Chester. It is a station on the Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire Junction lines of railway. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated on the Mersey canal, and is chiefly agricultural. Mollington Hall, formerly the seat of the Hunts, is a brick mansion surrounded by a wooded park, and watered by a large lake.

MOLOUGH, or MULLOGH, a par. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles S.S.E. of Cahir. It lies along the left bank of the river Suir, and is 2 miles in length by 1½ mile in breadth. It is ecclesiastically identical with Newcastle parish [which see]. Kenilworth is the principal seat of the parish. An Augustine convent formerly stood here, the site of which was given to Sir H. Radcliffe at the suppression.

MOLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llancarvan, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

MOLTON, NORTH, a par., formerly a market town, in the hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, 3½ miles N.E. of South Molton, its post town, and 11½ miles N.E. of the South Molton Road station on the Taw Vale railway. The village, which is very extensive, is situated on the river Mole, from which the parish derives its name, and on the Exmoor road. It is celebrated for a peculiar breed of cattle called the North Devon breed, and has a small woollen manufactory. About a mile distant from the village is a Holy Well, which is still visited by invalids from far and near every Holy Thursday. The substratum contains copper ore, and there are numerous quarries of freestone. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Twitchen annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £110. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure, with a lofty square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a carved screen, an ancient font, stone pulpit, and monuments of the Bampfyldes of Court Hall, and of the Parkers. The church has recently been restored and re-roofed. The parochial charities produce about £46 per annum, of which £5 goes to Parker's almshouses for six poor men. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by Lady Poltimore, also an infant school. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There are two copper mines which were formerly worked, and in 1840 a large nugget of gold was discovered, from which cause, in 1853, a sham gold mine was imposed upon the public. Lord Poltimore is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A fair is held on the Wednesday following 12th May, and on the last Wednesday in October for cattle.

MOLTON, SOUTH, a hund. in co. Devon, contains the pars. of East and West Anstey, Bishop's Tawton, Chittlehampton, Knowstone, Landkey, Molland, North Molton, South Molton, Nympton St. George, Satterleigh, Swimbridge, Twitchen, and Warkleigh, comprising an area of 67,930 acres.

MOLTON, SOUTH, a par., post and market town, in the above hund., co. Devon, 8½ miles from the South Molton Road station on the North Devon railway, and 12 S.E. of Barnstaple. It is situated in a healthy spot on the western bank of the river Mole, which joins the river Taw about six miles distant. The river Mole is crossed by a one-arched bridge, in lieu of the old one destroyed during a violent storm in 1841. South Molton derives its name from the afore-mentioned river, having Exmoor on the N. and Dartmoor on its southern boundary. It formerly belonged to Edward the Confessor, and subsequently came to the Martyns and Audeleys. For a short period in the reign of Henry VIII. it was the seat of a suffragan bishop, and was first chartered by Elizabeth. Its charter was confirmed and enlarged by Charles II. It once returned members to parliament in the 30-31 of Edward I., but never subsequently. The town is governed under the new Act by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, with the style of "mayor and burgesses of the borough and parish of South Molton." It is well built, paved, and lighted with gas. Several of the streets unite in the market-square, where the market-house is situated—a brick building, in which the mechanics' institution is also held, and the business of the corn-market transacted. The guildhall is a structure of Portland stone, crowned with a turret containing a clock and one bell. There are two banks, a borough gaol, gas works, Freemasons' Hall, police station, &c. Petty sessions are held monthly. A court of quarter sessions is held before the recorder, and a court-leet is held annually. It is also a polling-place for the northern division of the county. There are several woollen mills for the manufacture of shalloons, serges, and coarse woollen cloth; also numerous corn mills, tanneries, malting establishments, and machine works. The manufacture of lace has been introduced, and mining operations are carried on. Since the discontinuance of the coach traffic the trade of the town has declined, notwithstanding the opening of the North Devon line of railway. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Canons of Windsor, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £840. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £157, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a commodious structure, with a lofty square tower containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains a carved stone pulpit, an ancient circular font, and several monuments. The church was restored in 1829, and again in 1856. There are a National school for both sexes, Hugh Squires' free school endowed with an annuity of £40, founded in 1684, and a blue-coat school, founded in 1711, with an endowment of £115 per annum. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. The Rev. Samuel Badcock, the divine, was born here in 1747, and the late Mr. Justice Buller was a pupil at the blue-coat school. The union poorhouse is situated on the Barnstaple road. Castle Hill, situated about 2 miles N.W. of the town, is the principal residence. Market day is Saturday. There are two annual fairs, termed old and new; the former is held on the Wednesday prior to 22nd June, and the latter on the Wednesday following 26th August.

MOLUSK GRANGE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Ballyclare. It is 1½ mile long by 1 broad. The soil is mostly good. The road from Belfast to Ballymena teaverses the interior. The living is part of Carrickfergus, in the dioc. of Connor. Here is a Methodist meeting-house and a day school.

MOLYNEUX BROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Eccles, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Manchester. It is a station on the Manchester and Accrington branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring collieries and cotton mills.

MOLYRANY, a hmlt. in the par. and bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Newportpratt. It is on the N. side of Clew Bay, and contains a police office and a National school.

MONABULLACH, the highest of the Commeragh range of mountains, co. Waterford, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Kilmacthomas. It attains an altitude above 2,500 feet.

MONA CASTLE, on Douglas Bay, Isle of Man. It was formerly a seat of the dukes of Atholl, the ancient lords of the island, but after the purchase of their rights by the government, was sold, and is now converted into an hotel.

MONACHLOGDDU, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 9 miles N. of Narberth, and 9 from Newport, its post town. It is situated under Precelly Mountain, at the river Cleddy's head. The parish is large. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £129. The church is dedicated to St. Dogmael.

MONACHTY, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanegwad, hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles E. of Carmarthen.

MONADLEADH MOUNTAINS, in the district of Badenoch, co. Inverness, Scotland. They are situated at the head of the river Findhorn, and consist of a range of rugged heights, rising at the highest point about 3,000 feet above sea-level. The slopes afford pasture to immense flocks of sheep and herds of black cattle, while the higher peaks form extensive and dreary wastes inhabited only by the roe, red-deer, grouse, and ptarmigan. Granite and quartz are the prevailing strata of these mountains.

MONAGAY, a par. in the bar. of Glenquin, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of the town of Newcastle, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 5 broad. The surface is mountainous and the soil bad. It is crossed by the road from Abbeyfeale to Drumclogher. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Newcastle, £717. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools [see also NEWCASTLE]. Glanduff is the principal residence.

MONAGHAN, an inland co. of the prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It lies between 53° 53′ and 54° 25′ N. latitude, and between 6° 33′ and 7° 18′ W. longitude. It is bounded by co. Tyrone on the N., by Armagh and Louth on the E., by Meath and Cavan on the S., and by Fermanagh on the W. Its length from N. to S. is 37 miles, and its extreme breadth from the opposite points is 28 miles. It comprises an area of 500 square miles, or 319,757 acres, which are disposed thus—285,885 arable, 21,585 uncultivated, 5,816 in plantation, 304 occupied by the sites of towns, roads, &c., and 6,167 covered with water. The surface is mostly hilly, and becomes mountainous towards the N.W. and E. The Slievbeagh range, extending from N. to W., sends up a summit 1,254 feet above sea-level. The soil of the lowlands of the S. is mostly good, consisting of a portion of the central limestone-field of Ireland. The soil of the hilly districts, on the other hand, is generally very inferior. The principal rivers of this county are the Blackwater, on the eastern boundary, which joins Lough Neagh, also the Fane, Glyde, Lagan, Fink, and numerous small streams. The lakes are numerous, and some of considerable extent, as loughs Inny, Emy, Eglish, Mucknoo, Leesborough, Long, Whitelough, Corlin, Bawn, Avaghon, Ballyhoe, and Ross. Much turf is obtained from the numerous bogs, the surface having anciently been the site of a dense forest.—The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in agriculture. The spade is preferred to the plough. The dwellings of the poor are cabins of the lowest description. The fences are mostly stone and clay. The principal crops raised are oats, barley, potatoes, and flax, which last is of considerable importance. The linen trade, which till recently was declining throughout the county, has rallied, and is now steadily increasing.—The geological characteristics of the county are the same as other districts in the E. of Ulster, the substratum belonging chiefly to the transition formation; the prevailing rocks are graywacke and slates of various kinds, with a few varieties of metamorphic rock, where the transition and crystalline formations approach each other. Mountain limestone is also very common in the N.W. and S., the Slievbeagh mountains belonging to the calp series of this formation. There are quarries of slate, marble, and gypsum worked, and coal appears about Carrickmacross, but is not worked. There are also indications of lead, copper, manganese, and antimony; but the mineral productions of this county are more numerous than valuable.—This county is divided into five baronies—viz. Cremorne, Dartree, Farney, Monaghan, and Trough, which comprise 17 whole pars. and 6 parts of pars. The principal towns are Monaghan, the county town, Carrickmacross, Castle Blayney, Clones, and New-Bliss. The first four are sessions towns and heads of Poor-law Unions, and all are market towns. The smaller towns are Ballybay, Bellanode, Emyvale, Glaslough, Rockcorry, Scotshouse, and Smithborough. It is within the Belfast military district, and the North-Eastern Circuit, and forms part of the dioc. of Clogher, in the united sees of Armagh and Clogher. Monaghan formerly returned four members to the Irish parliament. It now sends two representatives to the Imperial parliament for the county, which had a constituency in 1859 of 5,121. It is governed by a lieutenant and custos rotulorum, vice-lieutenant, sheriff, and 18 deputy-lieutenants, assisted by the county magistrates and other officers. The population in 1851 was 141,758, and in 1861, 126,482.—This county was formerly the territory of the MacMahons. In 1177 it was overrun by John de Courcy, to whom Henry II. granted all the lands he had conquered in Ulster; but its ancient proprietors held considerable sway down to the close of the 16th century. In the reign of Henry V. it was wasted by frequent and bloody collisions between the landowners, when the MacMahons were brought into the king's peace by Lord Furnival, the lord-lieutenant. It was constituted a county in 1568.—The principal communications of the county are the Ulster canal, the Dundalk and Armagh railway, and the roads from Monaghan to Ballybay, Dundalk, Bellatrain, Bailieboro, Carrickmacross, Ardagh, Slane, and Dublin, again to Armagh and Belfast, again to Emyvale, Anglenachy, and Omagh, and lastly to Smithborough, Clones, and Enniskillen. The antiquities of most interest in the county are an entrenchment near Scotshouse, known as the Worm Ditch, Druidical remains at Monaghan and Carrickmacross, round towers at Clones and Inniskeen, ruins of castles at Donaghmoyne, Maghernacligh, and Castle-Blayney. The chief residences of this county are Rossmore Park, that of Lord Rossmore; Dartree, of Lord Cremorne; Castleblayney, of Lord Blayney; and others of private gentry, as Coolderry, Poplar Vale, Longfea, Glasslough, Anketell Grove, Thornhill, Castlehane, Glynch, Camla, &c.

MONAGHAN, a bar. in co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Trough, Cremorne, Dartree, and the cos. of Armagh, Fermanagh, and Tyrone. It covers an area of 69,904 acres, and contains the pars. of Drumsnat, Kilmore, Monaghan, Tedavent, and parts of Ballybay, Clones, Tehallen, and Tullycorbet.

MONAGHAN, or RACKWALLACE, a par., post, market, and county town, in the bar. of Monaghan, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is a station on the Ulster railway, and at Monaghan Road is a station on the Irish North-Western line, 16 miles S.W. by S. of Armagh, and 76 from Dublin. The par. is 5 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4½ miles. A considerable proportion of the surface consists of parks and demesne lands. The roads from Belfast to Enniskillen, and from Dublin to Londonderry, and the Ulster canal, cross the interior. In the 9th century a monastery was founded here, which was twice sacked in the same century, but was restored in 1462 by the MacMahons. In 1611 the grant of a market and fair was obtained by Sir Edward Blayney, who was seneschal of the county, and had built a small fort in the then village of Rackwallace, which occupied the site of the present town. In 1613 a charter of incorporation was obtained, and the new borough returned two members to the Irish parliament. It was disfranchised at the Union, and is now governed by a body of commissioners. The town, which is the capital of the county of Monaghan, consists chiefly of a central square called the Diamond, from which diverge the three principal streets. The streets are narrow, but well paved and clean. The houses are in general modern. Two lakes, Monaghan Lough and Sparks Lough, are partly within the limits of the town. The principal public buildings are the parish church; the county court-house, a stone building, situated in the Diamond; the county gaol, at the W. end of the town; the cavalry barracks, an imposing block of buildings; union poorhouse, infirmary, dispensary, and linen hall, situated in the Diamond. There are also a savings-bank, two branch banks, newsroom, and Jackson's almshouses. The linen trade has of late years declined, but is still carried on. The general trade of the town is in farm produce; also a large brewery and corn-mills. The Northern Standard is published in the town every Saturday. It is the headquarters of the county militia, and a chief police station. The county assizes are held twice a-year in the town, also general sessions four times a-year, and petty sessions once a-week, on Tuesday. The living is a vic. and rect. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £482, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, situated in the middle of the town, has a tower and spire in the later English style. It was erected in place of the old one in 1836, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. It contains several monuments and tablets. Near the town is the Roman Catholic chapel, with an altar-piece. There are also Presbyterian and Methodist meeting-houses, the Raphoe diocesan school, a school founded by Captain Jackson in 1808, and several National and daily schools. In the vicinity of the town are several demesnes, as Cortalvin, the seat of Lord Rossmore; Castle Shane, of the Right Hon. E. Lucas; and Camla Vale, of Col. Westenra; also remains of several forts. Monaghan is the head of a Poor-law Union containing 21 electoral divs. in co. Monaghan, and of a presbytery. Market days are Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday. Fairs are held on the first Monday in every month.

MONAINCHA, a bog on the borders of Queen's County and co. Tipperary, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Roscrea. Near it are the ruins of Monaincha Abbey.

MONAKINE, or MOUNTCOIN, an ext. par. place in co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Waterford.

MONALTY, a lough in co. Monaghan, Ireland, near Carrickmacross. It is about 2 miles long.

MONALUMAN, a bog in co. Mayo, Ireland. It is situated N. of Lough Mask.

MONAMINTRA, a par. in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of Waterford, its post town. It is 1 mile long, and a little better than half a mile in breadth. The soil is generally poor. The road from Waterford to Ballymacaw crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. with others, £22, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a chalybeate spring within the limits of the parish.

MONAMOLIN, a par. in the bars. of Ballaghkeen and Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Ballycanew. Oulart is its post town. The par. is 4 miles in length by 2 in breadth. The greater part of the surface consists of good land, and is drained towards the E. by the river Owenwarra. It is traversed by the road from Gorey to Wexford. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £144, in the patron. of the Treasurer of Ferns Cathedral. The church was erected in 1827, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Litter. There is a day school.

MONANCE, ST., a vil. in the par. of Abercrombie, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Abercrombie. It is a port on the Frith of Forth, with a rocky tidal harbour. At this place David II., having escaped shipwreck, in 1369 founded a church, which James III. gave to the Black friars, and which now forms the parish church. St. Monance is governed by 3 bailies and 12 councillors. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coasting-trade.

MONANIMY, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E.N.E. of Mallow, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad. The surface extends along the bank of the river Blackwater, and includes the village of Killawillin. It is mountainous, lying in the vicinity of the Nagle mountains, and includes only a small proportion of good land. The road from Mallow to Castletownroche traverses the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1811. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clonore. There are four day schools. Carrigacunda is the principal seat. On the site now occupied by the parish church stood a preceptory of Knights Templars, who also had a castle here, the remains of which are now turned into a farmhouse.

MONART, a par. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Enniscorthy, its post town. It is 5½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4½ miles. The soil is of inferior quality. The river Slaney traces part of the eastern boundary. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £98, in the patron. of the Precentor of Ferns Cathedral. The church was built in 1805, and enlarged by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1831. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and four or five day schools. Monart House is the principal residence. This parish formed part of the parish of Templeshannon until 1805. Near the village are remains of Danish raths. Building stone, slate, and lead, are found.

MONASTERANENAGH, a par. in the bars. of Coshma, Pubblebrien, and Smallcounty, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Croom. Youghall is its post town. The par. is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and contains the vil. of Six-mile-bridge. The surface lies along the banks of the river Commogue. The soil is mostly good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £14, in the patron. of the crown for Lord Southwell. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Fedamore. There are three day schools. Monasteranenagh House is the chief seat. This parish takes its name from an abbey which was founded by the O'Briens in the middle of the 12th century for Cistercian monks. The remains of the abbey, which stand on the right bank of the river, are considered the finest and most interesting of the kind in this part of Ireland. It was here that Sir J. Malby beat the Irish with great slaughter in 1579, when he dismantled the abbey. There was a subsequent conflict here in which the English were defeated. The site of the abbey was granted to the Wallops at the Dissolution.

MONASTERBOICE, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Collon. Dunleer is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is traversed by the road from Drogheda to Ardee. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Moylary, £234, in the patron. of the crown. Monasterboice House is the principal residence. This place takes its name from an abbey which is said to have been founded here by St. Boice, or Buite, in the 6th century. It was spoiled in 968 and demolished in 1097. Here are the walls of two small churches, two stone crosses beautifully carved, and a round tower 110 feet high.

MONASTEREVEN, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of West Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Kildare, and 38 from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. The par. is 4½ miles long, and its extreme breadth about the same. The surface lies along the river Barrow, here spanned by two bridges, and the Grand canal. The land, which is boggy towards the E., consists of a soil varying in quality. Moore Abbey, founded on the site of the old priory, is the seat of the Marquis of Drogheda, to whom the town belongs. The town, which it situated on the Grand canal and the road from Dublin to Limerick, consists principally of one short street. It contains a market-house, good hotel, Church Education and National schools, and a dispensary within the Athy poor-law union. The principal trade of the place is derived from a large distillery. Here is a police station, and petty sessions are held every other Friday. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Kildare, united with Harristown, val. £366, in the patron. of the bishop and Marquis of Drogheda alternately. The church stands in the town and was built in 1772 by the Marquis of Drogheda. It has lately been enlarged. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, two Methodist meeting-houses, a Sunday and several day schools.

MONASTEROROIS, or CASTROPETRE, a par. in the bar. of Coolestown, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Philipstown. It is 6¼ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4 miles. It contains its post town, Edenderry, and the vil. of Conabury. The surface lies along the edge of the bog of Allan, and is traversed by the Grand canal and the road from Kilcock to Philipstown. The parish is bordered on the E. by the river Boyne. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church was erected in 1778, partly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Rhode and Crohan. Here are also a Wesleyan Methodist meeting-house, a National and other day schools. Monasteroris House is the chief seat. A monastery seems to have been founded here in 1325 at Totmoy, the site of which was granted to Nicholas Herbert at the Dissolution.

MONCKTON, or ST. NICHOLAS, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin and borough of Pembroke, co. Pembroke, half a mile W. of Pembroke, which see.

MONCKTON, BISHOP. See BISHOP MONCKTON, co. York.

MONCKTON-COMBE. See COMBE-MONCKTON, co. Somerset.

MONCKTON-DEVERILL. See DEVERILL-MONCKTON, co. Wilts.

MONCKTON-UP-WIMBORNE, a hund. in co. Dorset, contains the pars. of Chettle, Tarrant Monckton, and part of Cranborne, comprising an area of 4,720 acres.

MONCKTON-UP-WIMBORNE, a tythg. in the par. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 2 miles W. of Cranborne. It is situated near the source of the river Allen and gives name to the hundred.

MONCRIEFF, or MORDUN, a hill in the par. and co. of Perth, Scotland, 2½ miles S. of Perth. It is situated N. of the Bridge-of-Earn, and rises to an altitude of 756 feet above sea-level. A large portion of the hill is in a good state of cultivation, and its heights are richly wooded. Near it is Moncrieff House, which belonged to the Moncrieffs of Tullibole, who have held it from the reign of Alexander II.

MONEA, a vil. in the par. of Devenish, bar. of Magheraboy, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Enniskillen. It is situated on the road from thence to Garrison. Here are the parish church of Devenish, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a police station. There are remains of Hume's Castle, built at the plantation of Ulster.

MONESS FALLS, a cascade formed by a branch of the river Tay, co. Perth, Scotland, 1 mile S. of Aberfeldy. It is in three falls, one of 100 feet, and adds greatly to the other attractions of the "Birks of Aberfeldy."

MONEWDEN, a par. in the hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 5 miles N.W. of Wickham Market, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Framlingham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £277. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £265. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat structure, with a square tower containing three bells. It is situated on an eminence forming a conspicuous object for some miles round. The interior contains a brass of T. Reve bearing date 1595. Charles Austin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MONEYDIE, a par. in the district of East Perth, co. Perth, Scotland. It includes the old par. of Logiealmond, and extends in length about 2 miles, and the same in breadth. It is bounded by the pars. of Auchtergaven, Redgorton, Methven, and Logiealmond. The surface is undulating but not hilly, the rising grounds running northward and southward from the banks of the Shochie. The soil in general is of a loamy and gravelly nature, with a subsoil of gravel, while towards the river it is a rich loam, with a subsoil of clay. The Luncarty station on the Scottish Midland railway lies due E. of the village, which is situated on the Schochie-burn, at the bridge, about 6 miles N.W. of Perth. It is traversed by a road leading to Logiealmond and Glenshee. In its vicinity are Druid stones, cairns, and traces of a Roman way. This par. is in the presb. of Perth, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister has a stipend of £215. The parish church was erected in 1817. There is a parochial school. The estate of Kinnaird or Kinved belonged to the family of "Bessie Bell" of the song, who is buried at Dronach Haugh.

MONEYGALL, a post and market vil. in the par. of Cullenwaine, bar. of Clonlisk, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 32 miles S.W. of Tullamore, and 84 from Dublin. It is situated on the road thence to Limerick. Here are a police station and a dispensary, the latter within the Roscrea Poor-law Union. Greenhills is the seat of the Minchins, to whom the village belongs. Fairs are held on the 3rd August and 24th November.

MONEYMORE, a small market and post town in the pars. of Artrea and Desertlyn, in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 32 miles S.E. of Londonderry, and 110 from Dublin. It is a station on the Belfast and North Counties railway, and is situated on the road from Armagh to Coleraine. The town, which is very old, consists of two chief streets, composed of well-built houses. It belongs, with considerable portions of the adjoining parishes, to the Drapers' Company. It contains the parish church of Desertlyn, a Norman structure; a Roman Catholic chapel; Methodist and Presbyterian meeting-houses. There are schools of the Drapers' Company and the Church Education Society. The town also contains a market-house, linen-hall, police station, and a dispensary, which is in the Magherafelt poor-law union. Petty sessions are holden at frequent intervals. The linen trade and the adjacent quarries employ many hands. Moneymore House and Spring Hill are the chief seats in the vicinity. Some remains exist of a castle which was taken in 1641 by the O'Nials, and removed in the year 1700. Monday is market day. Fairs are held on the 21st of every month.

MONEYMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Tullaghobegly, in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 9 miles N.E. of Dunglow. It is situated on Lough Dunlewy.

MONEYMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Oranmore, in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles E.S.E. of Oranmore.

MONEYSTOWN, a hill in co. Wicklow, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Rathdrum. It attains an elevation of 1,272 feet.

MONFAN, a bog in King's County, Ireland, N. of Lough Fin.

MONGARRY, a hmlt. in the par. of Tullynessle, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Alford. It is situated near the river Don, a short distance from the site of General Baillie's encampment. The neighbourhood abounds in all kinds of game, including roe and deer. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the blue and white granite quarries.

MONGEHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Deal, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The space in the centre of the village is still called the market-place, having been a market town of distinction in the reign of Henry III., though the market has long been discontinued. The land is partly in hop-grounds. There is a large brewery and malting establishment. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £469, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient and spacious structure with a lofty square tower clothed in ivy. There is a village school, chiefly supported by the rector. A fair is held on the 29th October for cattle and pedlery.

MONGEHAM, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, half a mile W. of Great Mongeham, and 3½ miles W. by S. of Deal, its post town. The village is inconsiderable, and wholly agricultural. Little Mongeham was given by Aldric, King of Kent, to the monastery of St. Augustine, at Canterbury, in 760. The land is chiefly arable, with some hop-grounds and a few acres of meadow and woodland. The living is a discharged rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £350, in the patron. of the archbishop, with the perpet. cur. of Sutton consolidated in 1835. The church has long been in ruins, but the burial-ground is still used.

MONGEOLIN CASTLE, in co. Donegal, Ireland, 2 miles S. of St. Johnstown. It is situated on the river Foyle.

MONGEWELL, a par. in the hund. of Langtree, co. Oxford, 1½ mile S. of Wallingford, its post town, and 2½ miles from the Wallingford Road station of the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the banks of the Thames and Grime's Dyke, under the Chiltern hills. It was formerly held by Roger de Lacy, and is mentioned in Domesday Survey. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £370. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £312, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient Norman structure. The interior contains a monument to one of the Saunder family, and a tablet to the wife of the late Bishop of Durham. There is a school, chiefly supported by the lord of the manor.

MONICH, or NA MONICH, a group of six islets forming part of the Western Islands, coast of Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of North Uist.

MONIFIETH, a par. in the district of Dundee, co. Forfar, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Drumsturdy-moor and Barnhill, also the chief portion of Broughty-Ferry, its post town. It extends in length about 5 miles S. and N., with a varying breadth of from 1½ mile to 3½ miles, and is bounded by the Frith of Tay and the pars. of Dundee, Murroes, Monikie, and Barry. The surface abounds with sandy links, though in their rear, E. of the Dighty, it is moderately flat for 1 mile, with a rich and fertile soil. The highest point is Drumsturdy-moor-law, with a vitrified fort about 2¼ miles from the shore. It rises about 530 feet above sea-level, and is of oval form, richly clothed in verdure. From its summit is an extensive prospect. The larger portion of the land is in excellent cultivation, and the remainder in pasture and plantation. The parish is traversed by the road from Dundee to Arbroath. The vil. of Monifieth is situated on the Frith of Tay, and on the Dundee and Arbroath railway, on which it has a station, 5 miles E. of Dundee, and 3 N.E. of Broughty-Ferry. In its vicinity are a foundry and machine-works, also a cart and plough manufactory. The greater portion of the inhabitants are employed in weaving. This par. is in the presb. of Dundee, and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister has a stipend of £264. The parish church was erected in 1813. The burying-ground contains some carved tombstones of great antiquity. There is a Free church, also one at Broughty-Ferry, likewise an United Presbyterian church and Episcopalian chapel. There are two parochial libraries and other useful institutions, with several schools, some of which are endowed. Monifieth is gradually being encroached upon by the sea, aided by the winds, which tend greatly to the constant drift of the sands.

MONIKIE, a par. in the district of Dundee, co. Forfar, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Craigton, Newbigging, Guildie, Bankhead, and Camustown. It extends about 7 miles S. in length, with an extreme breadth of 5 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Murroes, Inverarity, Guthrie, Carmylie, Panbride, Barry, and Monifieth. The surface is in parts hilly, being intersected by the hilly ridge of Downie, running from E. to W. On Downie Hill is a pillar 105 feet high, erected in 1839 by the tenants to the late Lord Panmure, which serves as a landmark. To the W. of Downie Hill is a quarry of excellent sandstone. The southern part of the parish is traversed by the road from Dundee to Arbroath, also by the Dundee and Arbroath railway. It is within easy distance of the Monifieth and Barry stations on the above-mentioned line. This par. is in the presb. of Dundee, and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £280. The parish church was erected in 1812. There is a Free church and an United Presbyterian church at Newbigging, also four schools. At Carhills are cairns in which stone coffins, urns, deer horns, &c., have been discovered. At Camustown is a pillar marking the spot where Camus the Dane was buried in 1010.

MONIMAIL, a par. in the district of Cupar, co. Fife, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of its own name, and the vils. of Letham and Easter Fernie. It extends in length 6 miles S.E., with an extreme breadth of 5 miles. The surface is moderately even, and very fertile, excepting only a range of hills in the N., of which Mount Hill reaches the highest elevation, and has on the summit a monumental pillar to the late Earl of Hopetoun. The village of Monimail stands near the Howe of Fife, 3 miles W. of Cupar, and within an easy distance of the stations of the branch lines of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in linen-weaving. This par. is in the presb. of Cupar, and synod of Fife. The minister has a stipend of £367. The parish church, erected in 1796, has a tower. There are a Free church, two parochial libraries, and four schools. About a mile from the site of the old church is a mineral spring called Cardan's Well, named after a celebrated Italian physician, who cured Archbishop Hamilton by its waters. The tower of the castle still remains, and bears evident signs of having been enlarged and improved by Cardinal Beaton.

MONINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.W. of Cardigan, its post town, and 7 from Newport. In the village, which is of small extent, is a long avenue called Monington Walk. The parish derives its name from a distinguished family who resided here. The living is a vic. annexed to that of St. Dogmael's, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

MONINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Vowchurch, hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 9 miles S.W. of Hereford.

MONIVAIRD AND STROWAN are united pars. in the district of East Perth, co. Perth, Scotland. This united par. is bounded on the N. by Comrie and Monzie, by the former also on the W., by Muthill on the S., and by Crieff on the E. The river Earn, which formerly formed the boundary between for 3 miles, has greatly deviated in its course. The par. of Monivaird extends 8 miles from N. to S. in length, with an extreme breadth of 6 miles. The par. of Strowan, which joins Monivaird on the S. side of the Earn's valley, extends 6 miles in length from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 3 miles. The united parish also includes several sections which are entirely isolated. The surface is hilly, and even mountainous in parts, abounding in sheepwalks. The highest hills are, Benchonzie, which, standing on the boundary, attains an altitude of 2,922 feet above sea-level, and Torlum Hill, at the southern extremity of Strowan, which rises 1,400 feet. The district is also varied by numerous lakes, the principal of which are Loch Turret and Loch Monivaird, which last has an old castle with an echo. The soil among the hills is chiefly of a moorish nature, while in the low grounds it is generally light, gravelly, and fertile. The larger portion of the land is in hilly pasture, with about 3,000 acres under cultivation, and the same quantity in wood. The prevailing rocks are greywacke and red sandstone in the hills, which, including slate, are quarried to a considerable extent. The principal part of this united parish is traversed by two roads along Strathearn, the detached sections being separated by the road betwixt Comrie and Callander. The village is distant 2 miles N.W. of Crieff, its post town, and is situated on the river Earn, under Benchonzie and other hills. It was given by the earls of Strathern to Inchaffrey Abbey in the beginning of the 13th century, at which period its name was Moivard. In 1511 this parish was the scene of the massacre of the clan Murray by the clan Drummond. The latter, being the most powerful, collected the men, women, and children belonging to the Murray clan into the old parish church, and set fire to it, when every soul, save one, was burned. Under Benchonzie Hill are Druidical stones, cairns, Carn Chainichin, or Kenneth's barrow, with some conical heaps, also Tom-a-hastle fort; but many of the cairns have recently been removed, and used as material for stone fences. This par. is in the presb. of Auchterarder, and synod of Perth and Stirling, and in the patron. of the crown and the Earl of Kinnoul alternately. The minister has a stipend of £261. The united parish church was erected in 1804, up to which period there were formerly two parish churches. There is a parochial school. There are several residences in the neighbourhood, among which may be mentioned Lawers and Ochtertyre, near which latter is a Roman camp. Colonel Dow, author of the "History of Hindoostan," was a native of this parish, besides several other distinguished men.

MONIVEA, a par., post and market vil., in the bars. of Clare, Kilconnell, and Tiaquin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Athenry. The par. is 7½ miles long and its greatest breadth is 5 miles. The surface comprises a large proportion of bog. The arable land is of good quality. The roads from Tuam to Loughrea, and from Newtown-Bellew to Galway, cross the interior. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Tuam, and in the patron. of the Incumbent of Athenry. The church, which stands in an elevated position in the village, was built in 1767, partly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Newcastle. There are three day schools. Monivea Castle and Tiaquin House are the chief residences. The village is situated on the banks of the river Tiaquin, and contains a police station and a dispensary within the Tuam poor-law union. Several ruins are seen in the parish, as Graig Abbey, church ruins at Abbert, and castle ruins at Cloonbrusk, Newcastle, Tiaquin, Killaclogher, and Cushlaundarragh. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on 12th May and 12th October.

MONK-BRETTON, in the West Riding co. York. See BRETTON, MONK; and all places having a similar distinguishing prefix will be found under the proper name.

MONKEIGIE AND KINKELL, an ancient par. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is joined to that of Keithall.

MONKEN-HADLEY, a par. in the hund. of Edmonton, co. Middlesex. See HADLEY.

MONKEY ISLAND, an islet in the Thames, co. Berks, 2 miles S.E. of Maidenhead. It derives its name from a rustic seat built upon it by the Duke of Marlborough, the panels of which are whimsically adorned with monkeys.

MONK-HESLETON, a par. in the S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2½ miles S.E. of Castle-Eden railway station, and 5 N.W. of Hartlepool. The village, which is small, is situated on the side of a deep and wooded valley about 1½ mile from the sea. The par. is extensive, and comprises the tnshps. of Halam, Henry-Hutton, and Sheraton, belonging partly to Burdon of Castle-Eden. There are several collieries, giving employment to many of the workpeople. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £323, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small ancient structure, with a turret containing two bells. The register dates from 1578. There is a National school for both sexes. Hardwicke Hall is the principal residence.

MONKHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontefract, upper div. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York. It adjoins the town of Pontefract on the E. side of Castle Hill, where once stood the grange of St. John's Priory.

MONKHOPTON, a par. in the borough of Wenlock, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Bridgnorth, its post town, and 16 S.W. of Shiffnal railway station. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the new road between Bridgnorth and Ludlow. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are some good specimens of the yew and oak, which thrive well in this neighbourhood. The soil consists of a strong loam with a subsoil of clay. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £56. The church is an ancient brick and stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. The church was restored in 1840. There is a girls' school. Lord Wenlock is lord of the manor.

MONKHOUSE, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham.

MONKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.W. of Leominster, its railway station and post town, and 13 from Hereford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Arrow, and is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a Benedictine cell to Conches Abbey in Normandy, founded by Ralph Toni in the reign of William Rufus, and granted by Henry V. at the suppression of alien priories to the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The Weobly and Leominster turnpike road passes through the village, as does also the river Arrow, which is well stocked with fish, affording excellent sport to the lovers of angling. The soil is of a clayey nature resting upon a layer of red sandstone. Courts leet are occasionally held in the village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £250, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a stone structure, with a tower containg four bells. It was rebuilt in 1825, and was restored in 1853, when the nave was refitted with low seats. There is a National school for both sexes erected in 1853, and situated on the bank of the river. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. G. Bengough, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MONKLAND, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Bunmahon, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad, and contains the vil. of Knockmahon. The surface consists mostly of inferior land. It has a short extent of coast-line open to the Atlantic, and the river Mahon passes along its western border. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore. The church was erected by gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1832. There is a day school. The parish forms part of one of the most valuable mining districts in Ireland.

MONKLAND, NEW, or EAST, a par. in the middle ward of co. Lanark, Scotland. It comprises the parliamentary burgh of Airdrie, and the vils. of Arden, Ballochney, Clarkston, Greengains, Riggend, and Watt's town. It extends 9 miles from E. to W. in length, with an extreme breadth of 7 miles, and is bounded by the cos. of Dumbarton and Stirling, and the pars. of Shotts, Bothwell, Old Monkland, and Cadder. The surface is moderately even, with a gentle rise of 600 to 700 feet above sea-level towards the centre of the parish. With the exception of a few barren hills the land is in an excellent state of cultivation. The parish is rich in mineral wealth, the seams of coal being from 9 to 11 feet in thickness, with ironstone, lime, and freestone in parts. In and near Airdrie are many excellent mineral springs. The parish is traversed by the middle road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, also by the Caledonian and Monkland railways, which have stations at Airdrie, and by the Monkland canal. This last was formed in 1790, and is 12 miles in length, going from Airdrie to the Forth canal at Port Dundas on the Clyde. It rises 96 feet with eight locks and falls, 21 feet with two locks, and has a reservoir of 300 acres in this parish. This par. is in the presb. of Hamilton, in the synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the heritors and kirk-session. The minister has a stipend of £339. The parish church is situated on rising ground 2 miles from the western boundary of the parish. It was erected in 1777, and restored in 1817. In Airdrie are two united Presbyterian churches, one Reformed Presbyterian church, three Free churches, an Episcopal chapel, Independent chapel, Morrisonian chapel, Baptist, two Methodist, Roman Catholic, and two chapels-of-ease; also at Clarkston a small chapel-of-ease. There is a parochial school for the parish of New Monkland, also numerous schools in Airdrie, besides various other useful institutions. At Kipps was the monks' chapel, and there is a large cave on the river Calder. Monkland House, Garnkirk, Rothsolloch, Rochsoles, Cochrane, are among the principal residences. This parish formerly belonged to the monks of Newbattle Abbey.

MONKLAND, OLD, a par. on the N.W. border of Middle ward, co. Lanark, Scotland. It comprises the post towns of Coatbridge, Calderbank, Baillieston, part of the post town of Tollcross; also the vils. of Braes, Carmyle, Bargeddie, Cairnhill, Causeyside, Dundyvan, New Dundyvan, Langloan, Faskine, Greenend, Barachnie, Craigend, Merrystone, West Merrystone, Swinton, Coatdyke, Gartcloss, Gartsherrie, Summerlee, Foxley, Broomhouse, and Dykehead. It extends in length about 10 miles N.W., with an extreme breadth of 4¼ miles, and is bounded by the bar. of Glasgow and the pars. of Cadder, New Monkland, Bothwell, Blantyre, Cambuslang, and Rutherglen. The surface is moderately even, and is diversified with orchards and thriving plantations. The land is in an excellent state of cultivation, and the soil generally of a fertile nature, though greatly improved by artificial means. The parish abounds in coal, ironstone, and freestone, all of which are worked to a considerable extent. There are potteries, bleach-fields, muslin weaving mills, and dye works; but the principal industry is in connection with the collieries and mines, not a year passing by without new pits being sunk, while others are being worked in a most prosperous state. This parish is now one of the richest mining districts in Scotland, though fifty years back it was but a rural village. The principal iron foundries are those of Gartsherrie, Dundyvan, Monkland, Calder, Clyde, Summerlee, Carnbroe, and Langloan. Old Monkland is about 8 miles E. of Glasgow, with which it is connected by several lines of railway, and is situated on the Monkland canal and the rivers Clyde and Calder. This par. is in the presb. of Hamilton and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the heritors and kirk-session. The minister has a stipend of £344. The parish church is situated on the S.W. border of the parish. It was erected in 1790, and enlarged and restored since 1822. There are at Coatbridge an United Presbyterian church, Free church, Episcopalian chapel, and a Roman Catholic chapel; also chapels of ease at Gartsherrie and at Crosshill. There are a parochial and three branch schools; also various other schools and institutions.

MONKLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 3 miles W. of Great Torrington, its post town, and 4 S. of the Bideford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Bideford to Holsworthy. The river Torridge, from which there is a small canal leading to Great Torrington, bounds the par. on the E., separating it from the pars. of Great Torrington and Wear-Giffard. The North Devon Pottery Company have works here, employing a great number of hands. The soil is chiefly a brown loam resting upon a substratum of clay, and in the southern extremity of the parish is a narrow vein of red land. There are kilns for burning lime. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a screen, two brasses bearing date from 1442 and tombs of the Hachfords of Annery. The parochial charities produce about £2 2s. per annum, bequeathed by Lord Rolle for the benefit of the schools. There are parochial schools for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. There are two places of worship for the Wesleyans. Petticombe and Annery House are the principal residences.

MONKMIRE, a lake on the border of the pars. of Blairgowrie and Bendochy, co. Perth, Scotland. It is about 1 mile in circumference, and was formerly a shallow reedy pool with rich marl at its bottom, but this has been excavated for manuring purposes.

MONKMOOR, a hmlt. in the borough of Shrewsbury, co. Salop, 2 miles N.E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on the river Severn.

MONKNASH, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 7 miles from Bridgend, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Cowbridge. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Bristol channel near Nash light. It was given by Richard de Grenville to Neath Abbey. There are ruins of a monastic barn, &c., which formerly belonged to the priory of Ewenny. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £67. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

MONKNEWTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Ibane. It is 3½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. The rivers Boyne and Mattock bound it on S. and E., and the road from Slane to Drogheda passes through the parish. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a day school. Knowth House is the chief seat in the neighbourhood.

MONKRIDGE-WARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Elsdon, S. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N.E. of Bellingham.

MONK'S BURN, a brook in the par. of Douglas, co. Lanark, Scotland. It runs into Douglas Water.

MONK'S BURN, a brook on the borders of Peebleshire and Edinburghshire, Scotland. It flows into the Gorth Esk about a mile below Newhall.

MONK'S-COPPENHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Coppenhall, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester. See COPPENHALL.

MONKSEATON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tynemouth, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of North Shields. In this township is a large brewery and several collieries. On Monkhouse farm is the stump of an old cross with a modern inscription, called the Monk's stone. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MONKS-ELEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 6 miles N.W. of Hadleigh, 2 S.W. of Bildeston, and 8 N.E. of Sudbury. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Brett, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is principally arable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £422, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £7 10s. per annum. There is a National school. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans; also almshouses built and endowed by Edward Colman in 1731. The Dean and Chapter of Canterbury are lords of the manor.

MONKSGRANGE, a par. in the bar. of Ballyadams, Queen's County, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Carlow. The parish is of small extent, but fertile, extending along the banks of the river Barrow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, val. £20.

MONK'S GROVE, co. Surrey, half a mile W. of Chertsey. It is situated under St. Anne's Hill, near a mineral spring once belonging to a cell of the Chertsey monks.

MONKS HEATH, a hmlt. and post-office station in co. Chester, 5 miles W. of Macclesfield.

MONK'S HORTON. See HORTON, co. Kent.

MONKSILVER, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 3 miles W. of the Williton railway station, 10 S.E. of Minehead, and 14 N.W. of Taunton, its post town. The village is inconsiderable and wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Woodford. The soil consists of a sandy loam, with a subsoil of marl. The surface forms part of a narrow vale, and has some excellent meadow land. There are great facilities for irrigation, which increases the natural fertility of the soil. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £210. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £270, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing five bells. There is a National school for both sexes. James Thomas B. Notley, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MONKS-KIRBY, a par. in the Kirby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 5½ miles E. of Lutterworth, its post town, 7 N.W. of Rugby, and near the Stretton railway station. The village, which is extensive, and of some note, is situated near the Roman Fosse Way. The par. contains Pailton, Easenhall, and seven other hmlts. Monks-Kirby is mentioned in Domesday as Chirchberye, and had a Benedictine cell to Angiers Abbey in Normandy, founded by Geoffry de Wirce. It was afterwards granted by Richard II. to Thomas Mowbray for Epworth Priory. It derives its name from the monks, or priory church, and gives name to the division of the hundred. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* with that of Withybrook and the cur. of Copston Magna annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £300, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, is an ancient structure with a square pinnacled tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Fielding family. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £62 per annum, of which £30 goes to the free grammar school. There is a National school, also Lord Denbigh's school. Newnham Paddox is the residence of the Earl of Denbigh. Roman walls and other relics of antiquity have been found in the parish.

MONK'S-LAND. See MONKLAND, co. Waterford.

MONKS-PATH, or MONKS-RIDING, a lib. in the par. of Tamworth, hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 7 miles S.E. of Birmingham. It is situated near a branch of the river Tame, and on the road between Birmingham and Warwick. The principal residence is Monks-path Hall.

MONKSTHORPE, a hmlt in the par. of Great Steeping, Wold div. of the hund. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Spilsby.

MONKSTON, a vil. in the par. of Collessie, co. Fife, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Falkland. The village, which is modern, was erected on a site called Monks'-moss, from it having been granted to the monks of Lindores Abbey for supplying them with moss, &c., for fuel.

MONKSTON. See MONXTON, co. Hants.

MONKSTOWN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S.E. of Cork, and 160 from Dublin. There is a station at Monkstown Ferry, on the Cork, Youghal, and Queenstown railway. The par. is 3½ miles long by 2 broad, and contains the vil. of Maulbaun and part of the town of Passage. The surface lies about the mouth of the river Lee, near Great Island, in Cork Harbour. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £65. The church was built by means of a sum raised by subscription in 1832. There are two or three day schools. Monkstown Castle is the principal residence. The village stands on the coast, and is a favourite watering-place. It has baths, and excellent accommodation for the numerous fashionable visitors. Here are the curious rocks called the Giant's Stairs, which formerly presented the peculiar semblance to a huge flight of steps; but a new road having been cut along the coast, a considerable portion of the rock has been removed. There formerly existed here a small religious house, a cell to St. John's Priory, Waterford, and there are still ruins of Monkstown Castle, built in 1136 by the Archdeken family, who held the land here; but being attainted, the property came into the hands of the De Vesci family; also Danish and Druidical remains occur in various parts of the parish.

MONKSTOWN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Dublin and Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of the general post-office, Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin and Kingstown railway. The par. is 3 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 1⅓ mile. It contains the town of Kingstown, and the vils. of Blackrock, Bullock, Glasthule, and Honeypark. It is situated on the S. shore of Dublin Bay. The Salthill Hotel, near the railway station, is a spacious establishment. Here are also the Kingstown baths, Rathdown hospital, and a dispensary. The living is a district cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, in the patron. of the trustees. There are two churches in the parish—St. John's, and another on the Kingstown road, built in 1832 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are Quaker and Presbyterian meeting-houses, also two Roman Catholic chapels, united to that of Bray, besides another, and a conventual chapel at Kingstown. There are parish, National, and several other day schools in the parish. The chief seats are Monkstown Castle, Monkstown House, and Monkstown Park.

MONKSWOOD, an ext. par. lib. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 3 miles W. by N. of Usk, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Pontypool. It is situated on the river Usk. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £80. The Duke of Beaufort is impropriator.

MONKTON, a par. in the hund. of Colyton, co. Devon, 2 miles N.E. of Honiton, its post town, and 12 E. of the Cullumpton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the S. bank of the river Otter, and on the high road to Taunton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is clayey, with a marly subsoil. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Colyton, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. There is a small parochial school. R. S. Gard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MONKTON, a par. in the Isle of Thanet and hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 7 miles W. of Ramsgate, its post town, and 2½ N.W. of the Minster railway station on the South-Eastern line. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the river Stour, and is wholly agricultural. It was formerly a market town, and was given by Queen Ediva to Canterbury Cathedral in 961. About two-thirds of the land is arable, and the remainder marshland pasture. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £709, and the vicarial for £340. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Birchington and Acol annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £672, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of a priest, bearing date 1430. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a free school. Near the church are ruins of a priory. Fairs are held on the 22nd July and 11th October for toys and pedlery.

MONKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Jarrow, E. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 1½ mile S.W. of Jarrow, and 4½ miles E. of Gateshead. It is situated near the Sunderland railway and the river Tyne. Bede the historian was born in this township. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring collieries.

MONKTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Otterden, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 3 miles N. of Charing. It was formerly a distinct parish, but the church and village have long since gone to decay.

MONKTON AND PRESTWICK, an united par. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It comprises the post-office vil. of its own name, also the burgh of barony of Prestwick, and the vil. of Prestwick-Toll, at which places are stations on the Ayr section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It extends in length about 3¾ miles from N. to S., with a breadth varying from 1½ mile to 3½ miles, and is bounded by the Frith of Clyde and the pars. of Dundonald, Symington, Craigie, Tarbolton, St. Quivox, and Newton-upon-Ayr. The surface is moderately flat, rising gently from the Frith. The soil in the central district consists of a deep rich loam, while along the coast and over a large extent of the southern district it is light and sandy, and in the N. and N.E. a strong clay. Red and white sandstone are quarried, and coal has been extensively worked. The coast line, which extends for about 2¼ miles in length, is low and sandy. The parish is traversed by the road from Irvine to Ayr, and by the Glasgow and Ayr railway. The vil. of Monkton is distant about 3¾ miles N.E. of Ayr, and 8 S.W. of Kilmarnock. The parish is watered by the rivers Pow, Rumbler, and several small streams. It formerly belonged to Paisley Abbey, by the name of Orangefield. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £275. The new parish church is situated betwixt the vils. of Monkton and Prestwick, and serves as a landmark to vessels entering the Frith of Clyde. It was erected in 1837. The old parish churches of Monkton and Prestwick are of great antiquity. There is a Free church, also a Free Church school, besides other schools. Between Prestwick and Prestwick-Toll are the ruins of Kincase, a lepers' hospital, founded by Bruce. At Monkton Hill is a pillar stone.

MONKTON-FARLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Bradford, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.W. of Bradford, its post town, and 2 S. of Box railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the line of the Great Western railway and river Avon, and is chiefly agricultural. There are ruins of a Cluniac cell to the priory of Lewes, founded by Humphrey de Bohun in 1125. It flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenues amounted to £217 0*s.* 4*d.* The site was then given to the Seymours. Stone is quarried here. The hmlt. of Farleigh Wick is situated in this par. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £169, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has an old tower containing three bells. The nave and chancel are of recent construction. The charities consist of a fuel allotment. There is a free school for children of both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The trustees of the late Wade Brown, Esq., are lords of the manor. The manor-house is the principal residence. Near the ruins of the convent a silver seal of exquisite workmanship, supposed to have been that of the last abbot, was discovered.

MONKTON FORT, at the opening into Spithead, co. Hants, 1 mile S. of Gosport. It is in a line with Kickergill Tower.

MONKTON HALL, a vil. in the par. of Inveresk, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile S. of Musselburgh. In the village is the "Routing Well," below a coal mine. It was at this place that the Scots encamped before the battle of Pinkie.

MONKTON-MOOR, a par. in York Ainsty, East Riding co. York, 7½ miles N.W. of York, its post town. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Nidd, near Marston-Moor. The par. includes the tnshp. of Hessey and the hmlts. of Skip-Bridge, Cock-Hill, and Scagglethorpe. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of clay. The land is chiefly arable. The principal seat is Red House, built by Sir Henry Slingsby in the reign of Charles I., and commanding an extensive view, including the city and cathedral of York. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £701, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a brick tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1687. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Sir Charles Slingsby, Bart., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MONKTON-NUN, a par. in the wap. of Upper Claro, West Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of York, and 1 mile N. of Monkton Moor. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Nidd and Ure. It had formerly a priory of Benedictine nuns, founded in the reign of Stephen by William de Arches and Ivetta his wife, which flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenues amounted to £85 14*s.* 8*d.* The land is nearly evenly divided between arable, pasture, and meadow. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, and formerly belonged to the Benedictine priory. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The charities produce about £45, of which £33 belong to a school founded in 1716. J. J. Tufnell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MONKTON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 4 miles N. of Taunton, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Bridgwater. It is situated on the river Tone, near the Bridgwater and Taunton canal. The Bristol and Exeter section of the Great Western railway passes through the parish. There are numerous stone quarries. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The village, which is considerable, stands on the Bath and Exeter road. The surface is hilly, comprising part of the Quantock range of hills. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £630. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £1,000. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, has a square tower containing a clock and six bells. The register dates from 1704. The parochial charities produce about £51 per annum, of which £45 goes to the Spital almshouses, founded in 1270 by Thomas Lambret for eleven widows. These almshouses, after having been burnt in the reign of Henry VIII., were rebuilt by the last abbot of Glastonbury. A Sunday-school is held in the vestry-room. There is a National school for both sexes. Monkton House, Springfield, Court Place, and Walford House, are the principal residences. The last is situated in an extensive and well-wooded park. Miss Warre, of Hestercombe, is lady of the manor. There are traces of a Roman camp.

MONKTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles E.S.E. of Navan. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface consists of good soil. The Nanny Water drains it towards the E., and the road from Trim to Duleek crosses the parish. The living is impropriate, in the dioc. of Meath. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Johnstown. There is a day school under the National Board.

MONKWEARMOUTH, a par. and large town in the E. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, half a mile N. of Sunderland, and 13 N.E. of Durham. It has a station on the Newcastle and Sunderland section of the North-Eastern railway, which connects it with Gateshead and South Shields. This town is situated on the northern bank of the river Wear, near its mouth, opposite Sunderland, with which borough it is united by an iron bridge. It is a place of great antiquity, and takes its distinguishing prefix from having belonged to the monks of Durham. At a very early period after the introduction of Christianity into Britain, a monastery was founded here by St. Bega, which was subsequently destroyed, but was refounded about 674 by Biscopias, a Saxon nobleman attached to the court of Oswy, King of Northumberland, and dedicated to St. Peter. The Venerable Bede, our first ecclesiastical historian, who studied at this place in the 7th century, whence he removed to Jarrow, relates that his contemporary, the Abbot Benedict, sent for artists from beyond seas to glaze the monastery of Wearmouth, which, with the monastery of Jarrow-on-the-Tyne, appear to have been the first buildings in Great Britain in which ordinary window-glass was used for architectural purposes; and such was the effect produced by the use of glass, instead of other and more obscure substances for windows, that the unlettered people avowed a belief, which was handed down as a tradition for many generations, "that it was never dark in old Jarrow church." A piece of this glass was found some years ago, very thick, and purple in colour. In the reign of Ethelred, about 793, the monastery was entirely destroyed by the Danes, and again in 1070 by Malcolm, King of Scotland. Although rebuilt, it shortly after declined as a seat of learning, and in 1083 the majority of the monks were removed to Durham by William de Carilepho, who made it a cell subordinate to the monastery of St. Cuthbert in that city. At the Dissolution the revenue was valued at £26 9*s.* 9*d., and the site granted to Thomas Whitehead. The town, which had sprung up under shelter of the monastery, is situated on the declivity of an eminence, at the base of which flows the river Wear. This place, which at the beginning of the present century consisted of a few narrow streets, is now a town of considerable importance, containing a population of 15,000, and extending over an area of 2 miles in length and 1 mile in breadth. The inhabitants are engaged in ship-building, and in the various branches of trade connected with the shipping interests of the port of Sunderland, to which it is a creek. At the E. end of the town is a capacious dock, in which ships are loaded with coals, and rigged and fitted out for sea. Also ironworks, roperies, and ship-building yards, with their respective manufactories. Besides the town of its own name, the par. did include the tnshps. of Fulwell, Hylton, and Southwick, now separated. About a quarter of a mile N.W. of the bridge over the Wear is the Pemberton coal-pit, which occupied upwards of seven years in sinking, and, with reference to the level of the sea, is supposed to be the deepest shaft in the world, being 1,800 feet in perpendicular depth from the surface, and nearly as much below the level of the water in the Wear. A few years since the water broke into this important pit, but by great perseverance it was conquered, and the shaft secured so that the men were able to recommence work in the bank pit in February, 1862. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £225. The church, which is believed to have been built about 634, is dedicated to St. Peter. The tower is supported on four circular arches, and has some Norman windows. The interior of the church has effigies of a Hilton, &c. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. In addition to the parish church, there are two district churches, viz. All Saints and the new church at Southwick, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* the former val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. There are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Presbyterians, and Wesleyans. Attached to the church are two schools—a National one for boys, and a girls' school, containing upwards of 300 scholars. Some remains of the monastery are still visible near the church. At Fulwell, in this parish, a human skeleton of gigantic stature, measuring 9½ feet, was dug up in 1759, and in the vicinity stags' horns have been found.

MONKWEARMOUTH-SHORE, a tnshp. in the par. of Monkwearmouth as above.

MONK-ZEAL, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton, co. Devon. See ZEAL MONACHORUM.

MONMOKENNOCK. See DUNMANOGE, co. Kildare, Ireland.

MONMORE, a bog in the bar. of Moyarta and Ibrickan, co. Clare, Ireland.

MONMOUTH, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the lower div. of the hund. of Skenfreth, co. Monmouth, of which it is the county town, 130 miles W. by N. of London, and 79¾ miles from Worcester by the West Midland section of the Great Western railway, which has a branch of 18 miles from Pontypool Road to Monmouth. This place, which was anciently called Abermynwy and Trefynwe by the Welsh, and subsequently Mongwy or Monmouth from its situation at the mouth of the river Monnow, is supposed by some antiquaries to occupy the site of the Roman station Blestium, mentioned in the Itinerary of Antonine, but no antiquities have been discovered tending to confirm that opinion. In the Saxon times it was a place of considerable importance, and was defended by a castle and walls of immense strength, which the Saxon kings built to secure their conquests between the Severn and the Wye. It appears from the Domesday book to have been a royal manor in the Saxon times, and after the Conquest was bestowed by William I. on one of his followers, William Fitz-Baderon, who assumed the name of William de Monmouth. In the baronial wars of Henry III. it was burnt by Simon de Montfort, but was subsequently rebuilt, and reverted to the crown in the reign of Edward I., and through his brother Edmond descended to John of Gaunt, and afterwards to Henry IV., whose son Henry V., nicknamed "Harry of Monmouth," the hero of Agincourt, was born here in 1387. It afterwards descended by inheritance, as part of the Duchy of Lancaster, to Henry VI., who being attainted, it was granted by Edward IV. to William Lord Herbert, afterwards Earl of Pembroke, and again reverted to the crown in the reign of Henry VII. Previous to the close of the 17th century it came into the possession of Henry, the first Duke of Beaufort, whose illustrious representative is the present proprietor. The remains of this fortress stand upon the ridge of an eminence close to the bank of the Monnow, and a little to the N. of the town. In Leland's time both the castle and walls of the town were entire, but dilapidated. He makes particular mention of the four gates of the town, which he distinguishes by the names Monk's Gate, Eastern Gate, Wye Gate, and Monnow or Western Gate; the last only now remains entire, with parts of the two round towers which flanked the Eastern Gate. Of the castle the principal remains are the baronial hall, 63 feet in length by 46 feet in breadth, the circular tower, 6 feet in diameter, which contained the winding staircase leading to the grand apartments, and the chamber where Henry V. was born. This last is 58 feet long by 24 broad, and the joists which supported the floor still project from the sides. The walls of this fortress were built of red gritstone, from 6 to 10 feet thick, filled up in the interstices with pebbles and cement, as directed by Vitruvius, and some of the vaults may be attributed to Saxon if not to Roman workmanship.—The present town stands at a little distance from the site of the ancient British town, at the point of confluence of the rivers Wye and Monnow, the latter almost encircling it. From the river it appears to be built on an eminence, but from the high grounds on the opposite bank of the Wye it is seen to be situated in the centre of a luxurious vale, surrounded on all sides by hills of various elevation, some of which are richly clothed with wood. It consists chiefly of one spacious street, with several cross streets on either side, those leading towards the Wye containing several good blocks of buildings. The main street extends from the market place, ambitiously called Agincourt-square, to the river Monnow, over which is an ancient stone bridge, with an arched gateway called Welsh Gate, erected in 1272, and having two side passages under which Henry V. has doubtless often passed. There are also three other bridges—the first a stone bridge over the Wye, forming the entrance to the town from the Gloucester road; the second called Tibb's, over the Monnow, is of wood; and the third over the little river Trothy. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas. The houses are in general well built, many of those in the principal streets have gardens and orchards attached to them. The suburbs of Monmouth, which has of recent years considerably increased, stretch beyond the Monnow, and occupy the site of what was probably the ancient British town. The principal public buildings are the townhall, a modern structure built upon pillars, forming a handsome colonnade; the front presents a niche containing a statue of Henry V. in an awkward attitude, with an inscription recording his birth in the town, August 9, 1387. The market and slaughter house, which has recently been completed at a cost of £8,000, stands almost upon the edge of the cliff overlooking the Monnow; and near the farther end of the town is the county gaol and house of correction, built on Mr. Howard's plan, and presenting the appearance of an ancient castle. There are besides the union poorhouse, three commercial banks, several hotels, a savings-bank, public library, gas and waterworks, and several paper and corn mills. In 1834 an Act was obtained for removing the markets held in the town and providing more convenient sites. There are some iron and tin works in the vicinity, and a few persons are engaged in tanning and wood turning, but the principal business is connected with the navigation of the Wye, in the trade between Bristol and Hereford and the intermediate places. In the season a considerable quantity of bark is brought from the upper districts of the Wye, and stowed in piles to be pared and cleaned previous to exportation to Chepstow for the south of England and Ireland. Caps once formed a considerable article of manufacture, employing many thousands of people, as recorded by Fuller, and the cappers' chapel is still remaining, but the trade has entirely died out, having previously been removed to Bewdley, in Worcestershire, on the occasion of a great plague which then raged in Monmouth.—The town received its first charter of incorporation from Edward VI., and is a borough by perscription. Under the new Municipal Reform Act it is governed by a mayor, who with the bailiffs is returning officer, four aldermen, and twelve common councillors, with the style of "mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of the town and borough of Monmouth." The area of the new borough comprises 500 acres, and the revenue is about £500. The population within the municipal boundaries was in 1861, 5,783, while the parliamentary comprised 30,577, the latter including, besides the whole of the parish of Monmouth, part of the adjoining parish of Dixton. From the time of Henry VIII. it returned two members to parliament till the passing of the Reform Bill, since which it has returned only one with its contributory boroughs, Newport and Usk. It is also the place of election, and a polling town for the county elections. The assizes for the county and the petty sessions for the upper division of the hundred of Usk are held here, and the corporation hold quarterly courts of session for the trial of misdemeanours within the borough jurisdiction. The court of record was established by charter of Edward VI., empowering the mayor and bailiffs to hold pleas in actions to any amount. It is also the headquarters of the county militia. As forming a part of the Duchy of Lancaster, Monmouth is subject to the jurisdiction of the Duchy courts. Is is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 24 pars. and tnshps. in the co. of Monmouth, 5 in that of Hereford, and 3 in that of Gloucester. It is also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. In ecclesiastical divisions it gives name to an archdeac. in the dioc. of Llandaff and prov. of Canterbury, containing the deaneries of Abergavenny, Chepstow, Newport, and Usk.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £200, in the patron. of the Duke of Beaufort, of Troy House in this parish. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was anciently the conventual church of a Benedictine priory founded here in the reign of Henry II. by Wyhenoc de Monmouth as a cell to the abbey of St. Florence in France. The body of the church has been rebuilt in the modern style, but the original tower, surmounted by a spire 210 feet high, has been retained, forming an interesting feature in the appearance of the town. There is also the district church of St. Thomas, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £80. The church is an ancient edifice with a low tower, built before the Norman conquest, and for many years was in a ruinous condition, but was restored and fitted up for Divine service in 1830 at the joint expense of the Duke of Beaufort and the parishioners. The circular shape of the doorways indicates a very high antiquity, and some antiquaries are of opinion that the more ancient parts are of British construction. The mouldings of the arch between the nave and the chancel, and the N. doorway of the nave, are deserving of particular attention. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Roman Catholics. The free grammar school was founded in the reign of James I. by William Jones, a native of Newland, near Monmouth, who was forced to quit his county for not being able to pay 10 groats; he came to London, where he amassed a fortune as a haberdasher, and bequeathed £9,000 for the endowment of a school and almshouse, and for the establishment of a lectureship in the church at Monmouth. The almshouses consist of tenements for twenty poor people, under the direction of the Company of Haberdashers in London, and the school premises form a block of building near Wyebridge. The National school is held in a spacious room with an oriel window, formerly part of the Benedictine priory mentioned above, and said to have been the study of the celebrated historian Galfredus-ap-Arthur, Bishop of St. Asaph, better known as Geoffrey of Monmouth, who was educated at this place. An infant school was built in 1838. The charities produce about £900 per annum.—In the immediate neighbourhood of the town are several antique mansions, including two old seats of the dukes of Beaufort, one within the castle site, built in 1673 out of the ruins, and the other, Troy House, near Penallt, about half a mile to the S.W. of the town, near the road to Chepstow, and still occupied by that family. This latter mansion was rebuilt after a design by Inigo Jones, but part of the original structure is preserved in the Gothic gateway, with its ancient portcullis. The edifice has little that can recommend it to notice as an architectural performance, but contains many highly interesting relics of antiquity, as the armour that Henry V. is said to have worn at the battle of Agincourt, and the cradle wherein he is supposed to have reposed, but the modernness of the latter bespeaks it to have been the crib of some of the Beaufort family in the time of Charles II.; there are also several valuable family portraits, particularly that of Edward Earl of Glamorgan, sixth earl and second marquis of Worcester. In the housekeeper's room is a curious oak chimney-piece brought from Ragland Castle, carved with scriptural subjects, and in a room on the third floor is another inlaid with mother-of-pearl and ornamented with devices. The gardens, once so celebrated for their beauty, are now converted into orchards. Also on the right bank of the Wye, and at a little distance from Troy House, is the church of Penallt, remarkable for a Welsh custom narrated by Roscoe, and supposed by him to be a remnant of Druidic superstition. On the road to Ragland Castle, and about 1 mile from the town, is Wynastow House, conjectured to have been built about the reign of Henry VI. by one of the Herbert family, affording an interesting example of the domestic architecture of the 15th century. The old chapel attached is now applied to domestic uses. About 1 mile farther W. is Treowen, built from designs by Inigo Jones, but now converted into a farmhouse. It stands on the banks of the Trothy, and still exhibits many traces of its ancient grandeur in the spacious apartments and noble staircase of oak. In the adjoining parish of Stanton, at the distance of about a mile from Monmouth, but on the Gloucestershire side of the Wye rises a remarkably high hill of Old Red sandstone rock, which commands a wonderful range of prospect, extending to a circumference of near 300 miles. A walk is traced up to the summit, where stands a circular pavilion consisting of two stories; the upper a refreshment-room with five windows—each commanding a different prospect; and the lower a kitchen. Its summit is also adorned with a plantation called Beaulieu Grove, in which is the Nelson temple, built in 1800 to record the naval victories obtained by the English during the American war. It is situated on the edge of a rock, and forms a square of 13 feet. The frieze, which is continued round it, is ornamented with medallions of the most eminent British admirals, surrounded with emblematic and appropriate devices. In the same parish, through which evidently passed the Roman highway, as indicated by its name, Stanton, is one of the most celebrated rocking-stones in England; this is formed of a rude fragment of a silicious grit technically known as old red conglomerate, standing near the edge of a precipitous declivity of limestone rock, and nearly resembling in form an inverted pyramid 24 feet high, its circumference at top being 53 feet, and the point on which it rests about 3 feet. It is popularly known as the Buckstone, from having been, as is alleged, the usual spot for hearkening to the hounds when in pursuit of deer through the forest. Near it are nine steps in the rock, and above is a large stone having the appearance of a baptismal font; these were until very recently supposed to be of Druidical origin, but it is now considered more probable that this mass of silicious grit has been detached from the underlying rock by natural causes, and drifted to its present position by water or icebergs at some distant geologic period. Fossils are not numerous in the underlying rocks in the vicinity of Monmouth, which consist chiefly of Old Red sandstone, conglomerate, concretionary limestone called carnstone, and tilestone, but in this last series the singular fish Cephalaspis is occasionally found. Monmouth gave the title of Duke to James, the unfortunate natural son of Charles II. Races take place on the common in October.—Saturday is market day. A market, which is well attended, is also held on the first Wednesday in each month for the sale of cattle, sheep, and pigs. Fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday for toys and pedlery, on the Wednesday before the 20th June for wool and cheese, and on 4th September and 22nd November for cattle, cheese, and hops.

MONMOUTHSHIRE, a maritime co. in the W. of England, extending from 51° 29′ to 51° 59′ N. lat., and from 2° 40′ to 3° 17′ W. long. It is bounded on the N. by Brecknockshire and Herefordshire; on the E. by Gloucestershire, from which it is separated by the river Wye; on the S. and S.E. by the estuary of the Severn and the Bristol Channel; and on the W. by Glamorganshire and part of Brecknockshire. Its greatest length from the mouth of the Romney in the N.N.E. to the Monnow in the S.W. is 32 miles, and its greatest breadth 29 miles, with a circuit of 124 miles. It comprises an area of about 500 square miles, or 368,399 acres, of which 290,000 are under cultivation, and the remainder mountain, uncultivated, or under water. There are 23 miles of coast line, which is generally low and marshy, with several creeks or pills along it, extending from the mouths of the Wye and Rumney along the estuary of the Severn and part of the Bristol Channel. The high spring tides run up the Severn from the Bristol Channel, and rise at Chepstow to 60 feet, the highest tidal altitude reached in Great Britain. The principal points along the coast, commencing from the mouth of the Rumney, are St. Bride's light at the mouth of the Usk which leads up to Newport, Goldcliff Point, the Welsh Grounds sands, and Black Rock ferry, about 2½ miles to New Passage, and the estuary of the Wye leading to Chepstow.—At the time of the second Roman invasion Monmouthshire, with Glamorgan, Brecknock, Radnor, and Hereford, formed the territory of the Silures, whose capital was Caerwent. In the reign of the Emperor Claudius it was unsucessfully invaded by Ostorius Scapula, but was reduced by Julius Frontinus, in the reign of Vespasian, when it became part of the Roman province Britannia Prima. So difficult, however, was the work of subjugation that the Romans were obliged to erect five stations in that part of Siluria alone, now known as Monmouthshire, viz. at Abergavenny, Caerwent, Caerleon, Usk, and Monmouth. It remained in the hands of the Romans till A.D. 408, a period of 330 years. Monmouthshire, together with the rest of the country W. of the Severn, continued free from the Anglo-Saxon dominion long after the rest of the island had submitted, and Caerleon became one of the most flourishing cities of the Britons. Wales then included three regions or principalities, namely, Gwynedd, Powysland, and Dehenbarth, or Gwent, in the last of which the whole of Monmouthshire was included. Between the Welsh and the Saxons war was almost continual, till in 1034 Canute entered Gwent with a large army and defeated the Prince of South Wales, Harold, in the reign of the Confessor, made an incursion into the country and overran North and South Wales, but it does not appear that they were ever completely conquered during the Anglo-Saxon period. The Norman kings, after their conquest of England, having no troops to spare for the conquest of Wales, permitted the barons to make incursions on their own account, and to hold the lands they conquered as fiefs of the crown. These tenures became in time petty royalties, the barons assuming independent sovereignty, and daring to resist even the reigning monarch. In 1535 Henry VIII. put an end to these petty sovereignties by dividing Wales into twelve counties and joining Monmouthshire to England. But as regards the administration of justice, Monmouthshire was not considered an English county till the reign of Charles II., when it was first included within the Oxford circuit. In 1645 Chepstow Castle surrendered to the Parliamentarians, and in 1648 Ragland Castle surrendered to Sir Thomas Fairfax, being the last castle in England that held out for the king. The latest political event in the history of this county was the rising of the Chartists in November, 1839, to the number of 10,000 men, headed by an ex-magistrate, Mr. John Frost, and his son. The disturbance, however, was soon quelled, and the two Frosts transported.—The principal rivers of Monmouthshire are the Wye, the Usk, the Rumney, the Ebbwy, the Sirhowy, the Afon-Llwyd, and the Monnow. The Wye enters the county in the parish of Welsh Bicknor, and then separating the counties of Hereford and Gloucester, it re-enters Monmouthshire in the parish of English Newton, and flows past Monmouth, till at Redbrook it again becomes the boundary of the county, continuing so to its mouth at the estuary of the Severn. Ships work up the river as far as Chepstow bridge, the tides being felt 5 or 6 miles higher, but above the bridge the river is only navigable for barges and trows. On its banks is the Wyndcliff, a hill about 800 feet high, commanding a view unrivalled for beauty and variety; and a little higher up, the far-famed Tintern Abbey, one of the finest ecclesiastical ruins in England. The Usk rises in Brecknockshire, and enters Monmouthshire on the N.W., 3 miles W. of Abergavenny, flowing through the middle of the county, and passing the towns of Usk, Caerleon, and Newport, falls into the Bristol Channel. It is navigable for ships of large size as high as Newport, where it forms an estuary to the S. of the town. Its principal tributaries are the Kebby, the Kevenny, the Afon-Llwyd, and the Alwy. The valley of the Usk is almost as famous for its beauty as the valley of the Wye. The Rumney enters Monmouthshire on the W., and flows in a S.S.E. direction, dividing this county from Glamorganshire, till it falls into the Bristol Channel. The Ebbwy rises in Brecknockshire, flows through Monmouthshire in a south-easterly direction past Crumlin and Newbridge to its junction with the Sirhowy, whence it flows S.E. past Bassaleg and Tredegar Park, through the Wentllooge level into the estuary of the Usk. The Sirhowy also rises in Brecknockshire and takes a south-easterly direction till it joins the Ebbwy. The Afon-Llwyd, or Torvain, rises to the N. of Aberystwith, flows S.S.E. through the iron works to Pontypool; thence it flows past Llantarnan Abbey to Caerleon, where it joins the Usk. The Monnow rises near the village of Dorston in Herefordshire; it enters Monmouthshire 3 miles N.W. of Monmouth, and then falls into the Wye. The Trothy and the Honddu join the Monnow. In all these streams there is good fishing, the Wye and the Usk being noted for their salmon. The Monmouth and Brecknock canal, which traverses the county in a N.W. direction, was cut in 1792, and goes from Newport past Malpas up to Pontypool, joining the Crumlin canal a little above Newport, and having a rise of 447 feet. The latter canal follows the valley of the Usk, terminating a little above Crumlin Bridge.—The highest peaks in the W. part of the county are the Sugar Loaf, 1,852 feet above the level of the sea, Blorenge, 1,720 feet, Mynydd Maen, 1,563 feet, Skyrrid Vawr, 1,498 feet, and the Black Mountains; in the E. are Beacon Hill, 1,000 feet, and Kymin and Wyndcliff, famous for the views to be seen from their summits.—In an agricultural point of view Monmouthshire may be divided into three districts, of which the first comprises the southern portion, consisting partly of large tracts of moor and marsh land, including the greater part of the hundreds of Wentllooge and Caldicott, where sea walls have been constructed at vast expense to prevent the sea from overflowing the extensive marshes originally drained by the monks of Goldcliff. The second district comprises the eastern portion of the county, including the valleys of the Severn, Wye, and Usk, which possess such natural advantages and fertility of soil that the whole country wears the appearance of a garden; and the third district comprises the mountainous region towards the W., where the soil upon the hills is generally shallow, and occasionally entirely sterile, affording scanty pasture to the flocks of small sheep which number about 170,000, yielding 2,000 wool packs. The arable land lies mostly towards the E., and rich loam, mixed with peat, is the soil of the level lands along the Newe. The large Hereford and other cattle are used for labour. Barley and oats form the principal crops in the N. and N.W.; but in the more sheltered valleys of Usk and Wye, wheat, potatoes, peas, beans, and turnips are largely grown. Apple orchards are plentiful in favoured situations, especially adjoining the Herefordshire border, and oak coppice abounds. Besides smaller forests of oak and ash, Wentwood Forest alone comprises 2,170 acres, and was formerly much larger when it took in the castles of Dinham, Lanvaches, Llanvair, Penhow, Pencoed, and Striguil, or Troggy. There are also 5,000 acres of common at Greensnore. The climate in the southern part of the county is very temperate and salubrious, but in the N. and W. among the hills it is colder and more damp on account of the greater quantity of rain that falls, the passing clouds from the Channel being attracted by the hills. The estates are in general large, but the farms of moderate size, varying from 100 to 300 acres of arable, mostly held by the farmers at will.—The county is traversed for about 23 miles by the South Wales line of railway, which, passing by Chepstow, Portscuett, Newport, and Rumney, follows the bank of the Severn to Cardiff, and communicates by steam ferry across the estuary of the Severn with Bristol. A line of railway has also been recently constructed along the bank of the Monmouthshire canal, from Newport past Pontypool and Abergavenny to Hereford. These two main lines are connected by numerous branch lines with the Vale of Neath railway, besides local branches to most of the large manufacturing villages, and tramways to the coal and iron mines. The turnpike roads are numerous and well kept, traversing the county in various directions. The principal lines from Monmouth are through Llantillio, Cresseny, Abergavenny, and Tredegar, to Merthyr Tydfil in Brecknockshire, 25 miles; another line through Ragland, Usk, and Caerleon, to Newport, 21 miles, with a fork from Usk to Pontypool and over the hills to Caerphilly, 32 miles; a third line of road leads by Trellech and Tintern Abbey, down the Wye to Wyndcliff, and so to Chepstow, 13 miles; a fourth by St. Weonards up the valley of the Wye to Whitchurch, and so to Ross, 10 miles; a fifth by St. Weonards to Hereford, 18 miles; and a sixth line of road from Monmouth through the Forest of Dean to Gloucester, 25 miles. Besides these there are numerous branch roads connecting most of the important villages and hamlets, which have recently been springing up in every part of the country, owing to the vast development of the mining and manufacturing interest in this county, the mineral wealth of which seems to be almost inexhaustible.—Besides the malleable iron, tin-plate, and smelting works mentioned above, a considerable manufacturing industry is maintained by the weaving of flannel, coarse cloths, woollen stockings, and caps, for which last manufacture Monmouthshire was formerly celebrated, though it has now become almost obsolete. It was enacted in the 13th Elizabeth, c. 19, that Monmouth caps should be worn by all persons, except a few of worship and quality, on Sabbaths and holydays, on the pain of forfeiting 10 groats for the omission, and Fuller says that in his time "thousands of people were maintained thereby;" but this trade was subsequently removed to Bewdley, in Worcestershire. Near the town of Monmouth there are also several paper and corn mills.—The county is studded with numerous gentlemen's seats, as Troy House and Wentwood Lodge of the Duke of Beaufort, Llanvihangel Court of Lord Rodney, Pontypool House of Lord Sudeley, Abercarne and Llanover of Lord Llanover, Llanwern of Salusbury, Bart., Tredegar of Morgan, Bart., Trostrey of Fludyer, Bart., Wynastow of Pilkington, Bart., besides many residences of private families. The Monmouthshire hounds are kennelled at Llanfoist, and the Llangibby hounds, belonging to the Duke of Beaufort, meet at Wentwood Forest.—The antiquities include important British, Roman, Welsh, and Saxon remains, the county being traversed by the two great highways of South Wales, the Via Julia Maritima, which follows the line of the coast from Caerwent, the ancient Venta Silurum, towards Cardiff, and the Via Julia Montana, going from Caerleon, the ancient Isca Silurum, and the metropolis of the early British Church, to Brecon. Roman remains are also found at Usk, the ancient Burrium, or Bullaeum, at Abergavenny, anciently Gobanium, and at Monmouth, occupying the site of the ancient Blestium. Traces of Roman and British camps are also met with at Campston Hill, Chepstow, Craig-y-Saesson, Craig-y-Gaereyd, Cwrt-y-Gaer, near Caerleon, Gaer, Sudbrooke, near Portscuett and Taliurum. Approaching later times, Monmouthshire boasts of the ruins of the once magnificent abbeys of Llanthony and Tintern; also of numerous old castles, some of which are celebrated in history, as Usk Castle, where Edward IV. and Richard III. were born; Monmouth, where Henry V. was born; and Ragland Castle, a moated fortress built by the Herberts and Somersets, and garrisoned by the famous Marquis of Worcester during the Parliamentary war, being the last fortress in England to surrender to parliament, and that after a long siege. There are also numerous other baronial castles, as Caerleon, Caldecot, Castell Glas, Abergavenny, Chepstow, still partially inhabited, Cresseny, Dinham, Grosmont, Llanfair, Llangibby, Llanvaches, Newport, Pencoed, Pencow, and Tregreg. At Sudbrooke, near Portscuett, Harold is said to have had a palace, of which however there are no remains.—For purposes of civil jurisdiction it consists of six hundreds: Abergavenny in the N.W., Caldicott in the S.E., Ragland, E., Skenfreth, N.E., Usk near the middle, and Wentlooge in the S.W. and W.; each of these is subdivided into upper and lower, and together comprise 116 parishes, besides parts of three others, and three extra parochial liberties. It contains the county town of Monmouth, which is also a parliamentary borough and market town; the borough, market, and seaport town of Newport; the borough, quarter sessions, and market town of Usk; the market and seaport town of Chepstow; and the market towns of Abergavenny, Caerleon, Pontypool, and Tredegar, besides upwards of 166 villages or hamlets. It returns three members to parliament—two for the county and one for Monmouth and its contributory boroughs. It is governed by a lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum, assisted by 47 deputy-lieutenants, a high sheriff, and about 170 magistrates. The county is included in the home military district, and in the Oxford circuit. For ecclesiastical purposes it forms an archdeaconry in the diocese of Llandaff and province of Canterbury, except the borough of Monmouth and a small district towards the N.E., which are in the diocese of Hereford. The population in 1851 was 157,418, and in 1861 was 174,633, and the number of inhabited houses in 1861 was 33,077, besides 2,021 uninhabited, and 226 building. The general aspect of the county is diversified, some portions being hilly and even mountainous, while the valleys are luxuriantly rich, and the slopes of the hills chequered with woods and pastures.—The geological formation of the county belongs to the carboniferous series of rocks forming part of the great South Wales coal basin, superimposed on carboniferous limestone, which shows itself in the hills to the E. and S.E., along the Wye and near Wentwood. In the neighbourhood of Pontypool Old Red sandstone provails, while about Usk, and at various points on the border, strips of silurian and slaty rocks crop up. The most important mineral productions are—coal, which is of the variety called anthracite, and occurs in strata from 3 to 9 feet thick; ironstone, which yields 30 per cent. of metal, and is extensively wrought both into pig and bar iron; lead ore is found, and limestone of the finest kind is obtained in almost every part of the county. There are several quarries of breccia for millstones, also mica slate and other valuable kinds of stone. The extensive coal, iron, tin, and other works, which have chiefly sprung into operation since the latter part of the last century, now furnish employment to as many people as are engaged in agriculture or in trade. The chief works are Mynyddyslwyn, Nantyglo, and Beaufort coal mines, which employ near 5,500 hands; Pontypool and Caerleon blasting tin and iron works, which above 2,000; Aberyschan, Blaenavon and Clydach, Pentwyan and Galynos, Rumney or Rhymney, Sirhowy and Ebbwyvale, and Tredegar iron works, which together yield above 2,000,000 tons of iron yearly. In addition to the manufacture of iron there are at Caerleon, Panteague, and Rogerstone extensive tin-plate works.

MONNINGTON-UPON-WYE, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 9 miles W. by N. of Hereford, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Weobly. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the N. bank of the river Wye, and adjoining the road from Brecon to Hereford. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. Monnington formerly belonged to a son-in-law of Owain Glyndwr. The soil consists of clay and loam, with a subsoil of gravel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £227. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £205. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing four bells. Monnington Court, which is supposed to have been the death-place of Owain Glyndwr, is now a farmhouse. Sir Velters Cornewall, Bart., is lord of the manor.

MONNOW, or MUNWY, a river of co. Hereford. It rises near Creswell Chapel, under the Black mountains, and joins the Wye at Monmouth.

MONQUHITTER, a par. in the district of Turriff, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It comprises the post-office vil. of Cuminestown and the vils. of Garmond, Millbrex, and Lendrum. It extends in length 10½ miles S. and N., with an extreme breadth of 8 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of King Edward, New Deer, Methlick, Fyvie, and Turriff. Its surface is hilly, but a great part of the land which was formerly moorish and barren is now in a high state of cultivation. The soil of the arable lands consists chiefly of a reddish loam, with a deep black mould upon a subsoil of pebbly clay. Red sandstone is quarried to some extent. The vil. of Monquhitter is situated on the branches of the rivers Ythan and Doveran, 4 miles E. of Turriff. This par. is in the presb. of Turriff and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £232. The parish church was erected in 1764, and enlarged and restored in 1792. There is a Free church, and at Cuminestown is an Episcopalian chapel. There are a parochial school and other schools, also a Sabbath-school library. Donald of the Isles was defeated at Lendrum. The parish of Monquhitter up to 1649 formed a part of the parish of Turriff.

MONRIETH, a vil. in the par. of Glasserton, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Whitehorn. It is situated on Luce Bay.

MONRITHMONT, a moorland district in co. Forfar, Scotland. It lies between Brechin and Kinnell.

MONSEA, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormond and Owney Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Nenagh, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface lies near Lough Derg and Youghal Bay, on the river Shannon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £127, in the patron. of the bishop. The expense of building the church in 1807 was borne by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killadiernan. There is a day school. Richmond is the principal residence.

MONTACUTE, a par. in the hund. of Tintinhull, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of the Yeovil railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It is situated on the road from Yeovil to Ilminster, near the Durston and Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway. The par. includes the hmlts. of Bishopstone and Hyde. It was formerly called Logaresburch by the Saxons, and returned members to parliament in the 33rd of Edward I. On Hampden Hill are extensive freestone quarries, near to which is a double-moated Roman camp nearly 3 miles in circumference, and further defended on the N.W. by a high rampart partly of stone, enclosing a space of 20 acres, where many Roman coins have been found. In this parish is also a tower, 60 feet in height, on the site of a castle built by William Earl of Moreton, a relative of William the Conqueror, who gave to the place its present name. He also founded a Cluniac priory, the gateway of which is still in a good state of preservation. The remains have been converted into a farmhouse. The soil consists of clay, and in some places sand, with a subsoil of clay upon freestone. The land is chiefly arable, but well wooded. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190 10*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £190. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Phelips family, one of which dates from 1484. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Baptists have a chapel, at which a Sunday-school is held. Montacute is an ancient mansion, from which extensive views are obtained. William Phelips, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MONTBATLOCK, a mountain in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 8 miles S. of Aboyne. It is situated near the Kincardine border, and attains an elevation of 3,459 feet.

MONTEITH, or MENTEITH, a district in the S.W. of co. Perth, Scotland. It comprehends the greater part of the vale of Teith, with parts of the upper vale of the Forth, and the lower part of the vale of the Allan, lying W. of the Ochill hills in Perthshire. Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, it formed a separate stewartry, and was chiefly possessed by the family of Graham, as earls of Monteith, which title is now extinct. It comprehends the pars. of Aberfoyle, Callander, Kilmadock, Kincardine, Lecropt, and Port-of-Monteith, with parts of Dunblane, Kippen, and Logie, and the lochs of Ard and Chon, Aberfoyle, and Monteith. This last is 7 miles in circumference, and contains three islands, two of which, Inchmachome and Talla, are wooded. The former has ruins of a priory founded by the Cummings and Stuarts in 1238, where Queen Mary took shelter in 1547, and the latter some traces of the baronial castle of the Grahams, earls of Monteith, who had an extensive park on the northern shore of the lake, still adorned with oak, Spanish chestnut, and plane trees of ancient growth.

MONTEITH, PORT OF, a par. in the Monteith district of co. Perth, Scotland. This parish, which was anciently called Port, is situated on the southern border of the county, being separated from Stirlingshire and Kippen by the river Forth, which traces its southern boundary; on the other sides it adjoins the pars. of Aberfoyle, Callander, Kilmadock, and Kincardine. It is nearly 9 miles in length from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 6½ miles, comprising near its centre the loch of Monteith, and on its northern boundary the loch of Vennachar, with numerous small lakes, called Lochan-Ballach, Loch Drunkie, Loch of Letter, Loch of Roskie, and Dow-loch. The surface in the S. and W., near the banks of the Forth, is generally level and extremely fertile, but in the northern part of the parish it is diversified by rocky mountains covered with heath, and in places attaining an altitude of near 2,000 feet above the sea-level, forming the frontier of the Scottish Highlands. The S.E. corner is occupied by a part of Flanders Moss, much resembling in character the well-known moss of Kincardine, and bearing traces of a Roman road and fortress. The parish is traversed by the road between Doune and the head of Loch Katrine, and by two roads from Stirlingshire to Callander. It includes the post-office vil. of Gartmore, and the vils. of Ruskie and Tomachar, with several seats, as Blairhoyle, Cardross House, Gartmore House, Inner Trossachs, and Rednock House. The par. is in the presb. of Dunblane and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister has a stipend of £281. The parish church is situated on the N. bank of the loch of Monteith, but there is a chapel-of-ease in the village of Gartmore, as also a Free church and schools.

MONTFORD, a par. in the Baschurch div. of the hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 12 from Oswestry. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Montford Bridge, on the N. bank of the river Severn, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Ensdon and Forton. The soil is chiefly loam and sand, producing excellent crops of barley. The surface is in general level. The living is a vic. with the rect.* of Shrawardine annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £380 and £233 respectively. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, is a red sandstone structure with a square tower containing three bells.

MONTFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Alkmond, co. Salop, 4 miles W. of Shrewsbury. It is situated near the Severn, and is joined with Preston and Dinthill to form a township.

MONTGOMERYSHIRE, an inland co. of North Wales, bounded on the N. by Denbighshire, on the S. by Radnorshire, on the E. by Shropshire, and on the W. by Merionethshire. It is in the form of an irregular parallelogram, being 37 miles in its greatest length, and 29 miles in its greatest breadth. It has a circuit of 135 miles, and an area of about 840 square miles, or 483,323 statute acres, of which nearly one-half is waste or common, and the remainder pasture and arable. It is divided into nine hunds., viz. Llanfyllin, Mathrafell, Deythur, Welshpool, Cawrse, Machynlleth, Montgomery, Llanidloes, and Newtown, which are again divided into 48 parishes, besides parts of some others.—Montgomeryshire, or, as it was originally called by the Welsh, Sir-Tre-Faldwyn, was included in the territory of the Ordovices, and on the conquest of the island by the Romans, formed part of the province Britannia Secunda. Many battles were fought for the possession of it between the Welsh and the Mercian Saxons under Offa, who constructed the celebrated Dyke which traverses the whole county from N. to S. Towards the end of the 9th century, Powys, or Mathraval, names by which this part of Wales was called, became a separate principality under Roderick Mawr. The Danes invaded Montgomeryshire in the reign of King Alfred, and after the Norman conquest it was frequently attacked by the Norman barons. But the most serious engagement was fought in the 11th century between the armies of the princes of North and South Wales and the usurper Trahaiarn, which resulted in the total rout of the forces of the usurper, who was left dead on the field of battle. This is recorded as the most bloody engagement in Welsh history. It subsequently became an English lordship, and passed into the possession of the Greys of Northumberland, to whom it gave the title of baron, which, however, became extinct in the reign of Henry VIII., when this king made it shire ground.—The general appearance of the county is mountainous and somewhat dreary, a large portion consisting of moorlands, and the houses are comparatively few and widely separated. There are many fertile spots in the valleys, more especially on the English border, which make up for the barrenness of other parts. The climate is certainly healthy, though considered bleak. The Breidden hills, distinguished by three peaks, on one of which is an obelisk to Lord Rodney's memory, are about 1,200 feet high. They lie to the E., and extend partly into Shropshire. The Berwyn chain of hills is situated to the N., at the head of the Tanat, and rises to the height of more than 2,500 feet at Cader Berwyn, the highest point above the level of the sea. The Kerry and Llandinam chain, on the borders of the counties of Radnor and Salop, attains the altitude of nearly 1,900 feet. The summit of Plinlimmon, on the border of Cardiganshire, is close upon 2,500 feet, and the Long Mountain range, which lies parallel to Offa's Dyke, is more than 1,300 feet high. Thus it will be seen that the surface of Montgomeryshire, like its western boundary, Merionethshire, is thickly studded with chains of mountains of considerable altitudes, which render the country comparatively barren, and prevent cultivation to any great extent.—The chief rivers are the Severn, the Vyrnwy, and the Tanat. Of these only the Severn and the Dovey, which may be said to belong to Merionethshire, are navigable in Montgomeryshire. There are also the Tarannon, the Carno, the Tarw, the Mule, and the Camlet, which vary in length from 11 to 20 miles, besides several other streams of less importance. The Severn is the principal river of the county. It rises to the E. of Pinlimmon, runs N.E. some 40 miles, till it joins the Vyrnwy, a little below which point it passes into Shropshire. The Vyrnwy rises near Bwlch-y-Pawl, runs some 20 miles S.E. till it meets with the Einion, and then about 10 miles lower down receives the Tanat, which latter river rises on the borders of Merionethshire, and runs into the Vyrnwy, partly in Denbighshire, partly in Montgomeryshire, and for a short distance into Shropshire. In these rivers salmon, trout, and other fish are caught in large quantities, and the sport here is looked upon as the best that can be had in Wales.—The population in 1851 was 67,335, which in 1861 had decreased to 66,919. Of these about 15 per cent. are engaged in agriculture, and about 12 per cent. in trade, commerce, and manufacture. The principal manufactures are woollen cloth and flannel. Some of the inhabitants are employed as weavers and spinners. Nearly half the population speak only Welsh. Slate rocks form the substratum over nearly the whole of the county, the exceptions being the Breidden hills, which are granite and greenstone, and a small tract near the junction of the Severn and the Vyrnwy, which is a kind of red sandstone. The county does not abound in minerals, though there are lead, zinc, and copper mines, and some coal on the border of Shropshire. Peat is found in sufficient quantities in the Plinlimmon mountains, and in some other parts of Montgomeryshire. The soil generally is unfitted for agriculture, except in the valleys, especially on the English border, where some wheat, barley, and flax is grown. There is ample mountain pasture for the large number of sheep and cattle which are bred, as well as for that hardy and useful race of small ponies known as the Merlyn pony. A good breed of horses is reared in the vales. There are remains of extensive forests near Carno.—Montgomeryshire is for the most part in the diocese of St. Asaph, except those parishes in the hundred of Cawrse and Pool, and the hundred of Montgomery, excepting Moughtrey and Kerry, which are in the diocese of Hereford. The county is included in the North Wales circuit, and is in the home military district. It returns one member to parliament for the county, and another for Montgomery with its contributory boroughs. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant, sheriff, and about 40 magistrates. The assizes are held at Welshpool, and the quarter sessions at Montgomery, where are the county gaol and house of correction. The charities amount to about £1,600 per annum, of which about £700 are for schools and education. There are three savings-banks in the county, and numerous free, Sunday, and National schools.—There are remains of Roman camps at Castell Caereinion, Cefn Caer, Moelddelwyn, and other places, and of British camps and cairns at Garthbibio, Llandinam, Llanerfyl, &c. Ruins of old castles are to be seen at Montgomery (where Lord Herbert of Chirbury was born), at Powys, and Dolforwyn. The Montgomeryshire canal, 24 miles long, was constructed between 1795 and 1821. It has 15 locks, and is in contemplation to be converted into a railway, for which an Act of Parliament has been obtained. There are many seats in the county, belonging to Earl Powis, Lords Hereford, Mostyn, Sudeley, and others. Two lines of railway intersect the county, one from Oswestry and the other from Shrewsbury, which unite at Welshpool, forming the Oswestry and Newtown line, with branches to Llanfyllin and Machynlleth; another line is in contemplation from Montgomery to Bishop's Castle, joining the Shrewsbury and Hereford.

The principal roads which pass through the county are the London road viâ Shrewsbury, which crosses the north-eastern side of the county through Llanfyllin and Llangynnog to Bala in Merionethshire; the Barmouth road, which, running through the centre of the county by Welshpool and Llanfair, goes to Dinas-y-Mowddy in Merionethshire, with a branch to Machynlleth; the Towyn road branches from the Barmouth road between Welshpool and Llanfair; the Aberystwith road passes through the town of Montgomery, and following the valleys of the Severn and Wye passes into Cardiganshire. The old road from Machynlleth to Llanidloes over the Plinlimmon range, and the road across the Berwyn mountains, command views of Plinlimmon and Cader Idris. There are other roads from Bishop's Castle, through Montgomery to Welshpool, and from Newtown to Llanbrinmaer and Towyn. The chief towns are, Montgomery, the county town, Llanfyllin, Llanidloes, Machynlleth, and Welshpool, heads of Poor-law Unions and new County Court districts, also Newton, Llanfair, Caereinion, Llanbrynmair, and Caer Sws.

MONTGOMERY, a hund. in the co. of the same name, contains the borough of Montgomery, and the pars. of Kerry, Moughtrey, Snead, and parts of Church-Stoke, Hyssington, Lydham, and Mainstone.

MONTGOMERY, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, locally situated in the lower div. of the hund. of Montgomery, but exercising separate jurisdiction, being the county town of co. Montgomery, 6 miles from Welshpool, 7 from Newtown, and 22 from Oswestry by the Cambrian railway, on which it is a station. The town, which is of great antiquity, is situated on a rising ground backed by an eminence, whence there is an extensive prospect over the vale, extending to the hills of Shropshire. It would seem to have been originally a British town, for at a short distance from the present castle is a very extensive British fort, the approach of which is guarded by four deep dykes, with two or three entrances to the main work. In later times it was called Tre-Faldwyn, or "the town of Baldwyn," from a lieutenant of the Marches in the time of William the Conqueror, who built a castle here. This castle was garrisoned by William Rufus, and having been several times taken and destroyed by the Welsh, was rebuilt by Roger de Montgomery, Earl of Shrewsbury, in a more commanding position on the northern side of the town. The fortress is said to have been a very imposing structure, perched upon the extremity of a lofty projecting eminence, and defended by four deep fosses, cut out of the solid rock. The present fragments consist of a small part of a tower at the S.W. angles, and a few low broken walls. It was subsequently held by the ancestors of Lord Herbert of Chirbury, who made it their principal residence, and during the civil war of Charles I. it became the ground of fierce contention. Being garrisoned for the king, it was attacked by the parliamentarians, and soon yielded to Sir Thomas Myddleton; but he, being threatened by Lord Byron, who had advanced with superior forces, was compelled to leave the castle, and make a precipitate retreat to Oswestry. The royalists then laid siege to it; but meantime Sir Thomas Myddleton's army, reinforced under the conduct of Brereton, Meldrum, and Fairfax, made a countermarch to relieve the place, when a general engagement succeeded, in which 500 royalists were slain, and 1,400 taken prisoners. The castle shortly after met the fate of others, being dismantled by order of parliament. The town was walled in the 16th century, as described by Leland. The walls have now entirely disappeared, but in other respects the town is probably very little different from what it was at that period, having no trade and not being a thoroughfare to any place of importance. It is one of the most diminutive of county towns, having a population of about 1,200. The streets are wide, and the houses for the most part built of brick. The principal buildings are the guildhall, in the upper part of the town, in which the sessions are held alternately with Welshpool, and the county gaol, a modern stone building near the site of the ancient castle. It was first incorporated by Henry III., and is governed by a high steward, 2 bailiffs, and 12 burgesses, under the style of "the bailiffs and burgesses of Montgomery." It joins with Welshpool, Llanidloes, Llanfyllin, Machynlleth, and Newtown in sending one member to parliament.—The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £347, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a venerable cruciform structure, with a tower added by Lord Clive in 1816, at the cost of £1,700. It contains a carved screen and ancient rood-loft, removed from the priory of Chirbury at the dissolution of that establishment; also two effigies belonging to the Mortimer family, about the time of Richard II., and a monument to the memory of Richard Herbert, father of the celebrated Lord Herbert of Chirbury, and Magdalene his wife, sheltered by a once richly-ornamented canopy. The charities include an endowment of £10 per annum for education, besides other benefactions bequeathed by Earl Powis. There are National and other schools. A little below the town is the site of Blackhall, recently consumed by fire, but once the hospitable residence of the Herbert family, and the birthplace of the pious and learned George Herbert. At a short distance on the road to Churchstoke is Lymore Park, the eastern side of which is bounded by Offa's Dyke, here separating Montgomeryshire from Salop. It was formerly the seat of Lord Clive, but now of Lord Powis. The house is a good specimen of the domestic architecture of the 16th century, and contains much of the original panellings and wainscots. Dr. Abraham Rees, editor of the well-known Cyclopædia, was born at Montgomery in 1743, and the chivalrous and philosophic Edward Herbert, first Baron of Chirbury, in 1583. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the 26th March, first Thursday in May, 7th June, 4th September, and 14th November.

MONTIAGHS AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bar. of East Oneilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 9 miles N. of Richhill. Derrymacash is its post town. It is 5 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4½ miles; containing the vil. of Charlestown. The surface is low and boggy. The parish is partly bordered by the river Bann, and a large portion of Lough Neagh is included within the limits; several islands in the lough belong to this parish. The interior is traversed by the road from Lurgan to Stewartstown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £53, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1785. There are four or five day and a Sunday school. This parish is the property of Lord Lurgan, of Brownlow.

MONTKEEN, a mountain summit of the Grampians, in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Ballater. It has an elevation of 3,180 feet, and is remarkable for a wild descent called the Ladder.

MONTPELIER, a vil. in the par. of Monkstown, in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It stands on the Dublin and Kingstown road, within a short distance of the latter. Montpelier House was the residence of Sir William Betham, the well-known antiquary.

MONTPELIER, a vil. in the par. of Stradbally, in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It stands opposite O'Briensbridge, on the bank of the Shannon. Fairs are held on 8th May and July, and 7th September and December.

MONTPELIER, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Andrew's, Bristol, co. Gloucester, adjoining Bristol. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern.

MONTREAL, the seat of Earl Amherst, in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 1 mile N.W. of Sevenoaks. It is situated in a hilly country near the river Darent, and was rebuilt by the first Lord Amherst after he returned from his campaign in Canada, where he took Montreal in 1760. In the grounds is a column in commemoration of that event.

MONTROSE, a par., post and market town, bonding port, and royal and parliamentary burgh, having separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the district and co. of Forfar, Scotland, 8 miles E. by S. of Brechin, 17 E.N.E. of Forfar, and 70 N.N.E. of Edinburgh, or 79 by the Edinburgh and North Scottish railway, which has a branch to Montrose. It is situated near the coast of the North Sea, at the north-eastern extremity of the maritime district of Forfarshire, and occupies a point or ross of land lying between Montrose Basin and the mouth of the South Esk. The town, which was anciently called Celurea, was first chartered by David I. It is celebrated in history as the place whence Lord James Douglas sailed in 1330, with a numerous knightly retinue, to deposit the heart of King Robert Bruce in the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, and where the Greek language was first taught in Scotland, under the auspices of John Erskine, of Dun. It was here that the French fleet, having James on board, arrived in December, 1715; and until the commencement of the present century the house was standing in which the celebrated Marquis of Montrose was born, and in which the Pretender slept on the 13th of February, 1716, the night before he made his escape to France.—The parish of Montrose is about 3 miles in length, and about 2½ in breadth, lying between the mouths of the rivers North and South Esk, over the former of which there is a stone bridge of seven arches, erected in 1775, and over the latter a suspension bridge, crossing Inchbrayoch, built by Sir S. Brown in 1829, at a cost of £20,000. The shore is sandy, and the tide of flood runs S.W. The surface is nearly level for about 1½ mile from the sea, which is here retiring, leaving a low range of sandy links along the shore, but farther inland the land rises slowly towards the N.W.; and from Montrose Hill a view is commanded of the town and Montrose Basin, an expanse of about 7 miles in circumference, which is dry at low water, but at the influx of the tide looks like a lake, with the windings of the South Esk, and the upper end of Strathmore in the distance, backed by the towering summits of the Grampians. The soil in the lower parts is sand to a great depth, mixed with sea-shells, evidently of modern deposit, and capable only of sustaining a scanty vegetation, but farther inland to the W. of the low stony bank which flanks the sandy grounds the soil is extremely productive and under prime cultivation. Much of the land adjacent to the town is disposed in small properties or feus, of from 3 to 9 acres each, and is subjected to a scantily productive tillage; but the rest of the parish, comprising much rich arable land, is chiefly distributed among five proprietors, who have the right of pasturage over a long belt of undivided common known as the Links. The parish is traversed by a branch line of the Aberdeen railway, by the coast road from Aberdeen to Dundee, and by two cross roads going off thence to Fettercairn and Brechin.—The town, which is one of the neatest and most agreeable in Scotland, extends along the shore of Montrose basin and the bank of the South Esk, and consists of several streets, of which Murray and High streets are the principal, running due N. The latter is adorned with a stone statue of the late Sir Robert Peel by A. H. Ritchie. A spacious road called the Mall continues the line of this street about 5 furlongs northward, lined on either side with houses and villas, while minor streets branch off in several directions, Bridge-street and Upper Fishergate-street leading to the suspension bridge. Along the E. side of the town, facing the Links, runs what is called the Walk, lined on one side by a terrace of houses. The principal public buildings are, the new town-house, built in place of the former one, which makes a termination to the long spacious area in the centre of the town, and has an illuminated clock in its pediment; the trades' hall, standing on the E. side of High-street; the gaol, a modern and commodious structure; militia barracks, custom-house, exchange rooms, public library established in 1785, post-office, savings-bank, built in 1815, four commercial banks, about twenty marine and other insurance offices, gas and water works; also the royal lunatic hospital, founded in 1779, and recently rebuilt at Sunnyside about 2½ miles from the town; golf club, established in 1810; horticultural society founded in 1826; hall of the British linen company; and the Academy, situated on the Links. This last is a commodious structure surmounted by a dome. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the shipping trade, and others in the manufacture of linen and flax, while a small number are employed as ship carpenters, builders, and cotton spinners, or in the tanneries and iron foundry. The town was incorporated by David I., and is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of trades, and 19 town councillors. The town revenue is about £3,250, besides the burgh lands lying between the basin and the German Ocean, which are partly occupied by building, but more extensively disposed in public promenade and unenclosed common. Since the passing of the Reform Bill it has returned one member to parliament in conjunction with Arbroath, Brechin, Bervie, and Forfar, its contributory boroughs.—The par. is in the presb. of Brechin and synod of Angus and Mearns, and is collegiate, having two livings, one in the patron. of the crown, the other, or second charge, in the patron. of the town council. Stipend of the first minister £293, and of the second £340, the latter being raised by a rate of 5d. in the pound upon house rents, authorised by an Act of the Scottish parliament in 1690. There are two churches—the parish church, a spacious structure built in 1791, and Melville church, recently constituted a quoad sacra parish church. There are two Free churches, St. John's and St. George's, the latter erected shortly after the disrupture, and the former, St. John's, built in 1829 as a chapel-of-ease; also two United Presbyterian churches, Scottish and English Episcopalian chapels, two Independent, one Baptist, and one Wesleyan chapel, besides a place of worship belonging to the Glassites. The principal schools are the Montrose Academy mentioned above, where a good classical and mathematical education is obtainable, Dorward's seminary, the Loanhead sessional school, besides parochial, free, industrial, infant, and ragged schools, these last known as the Castle-street schools. The charitable foundations are numerous, comprising besides the Royal Lunatic Hospital and Infirmary, the Maison de Dieu, or Grey Friars, which has an income of £280, under the management of the town council, though the building is now a ruin; Erskine's almshouses for 12 widows with an income of £120; also Ouchterloney's and Miss Mill's charities.—The port of Montrose comprehends within its bounds all the coast from the Tod-Head on the N. to the lights of the Tay on the S., having Johnshaven for a subport. It has a considerable colonial and foreign trade, chiefly in timber, flax, hemp, wines, fish, and grains; but the chief business is in the coasting trade, and in the fisheries, which latter yield salmon, lobsters, and cod in great perfection. The harbour is one of the best on the E. coast of Scotland, having 18 feet depth of water over the bar at low water at spring tides, and therefore is always accessible to vessels of large burthen. A lofty beacon of white stone stands on a rocky promontory on the right of the entrance, and two lighthouses, the one 45 feet high, the other 35 feet high, on the left bank of the river, to guide vessels up to the quay during the night. Montrose is a coastguard station and headquarters of the county militia, also the seat of an excise collection. It publishes two newspapers, the Montrose Review and Montrose Standard, and gives the title of duke to the Grahams of Kinnebar, to whose ancestor, Sir Robert, the old town was given by Robert I. Market day is Friday. Fairs are held on the Friday after Whitsunday, old style, and on the Friday after Martinmas. The races have been discontinued.

MONXTON, or MONKSTON, a par. in the lower half div. of the hund. of Andover, co. Hants, 3¾ miles W. of Andover, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £340. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £338, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat structure, with a slate spire tower containing two bells. The chancel has some stained windows. The register dates from 1716. The Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor.

MONYASH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, four miles S.W. of Bakewell, its post town, and 7 W. of the Rowsley station. The village, which is small, is situated in a hollow near the source of the river Lathkill, and near the High Peak railway. It was formerly a market town, and is mentioned in Domesday Survey as being a place of penal settlement for ill-behaved monks. A court is held every six months for settling disputes relative to the lead mines in the hund. of High Peak. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the lead mines. The land is chiefly arable, except about 100 acres of uncultivated waste. There are some marble quarries, at Rucklow-Dales, much admired for its variegated surface, which is of a greyish colour. The substratum is chiefly limestone and marble. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bakewell. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient edifice with a square spired tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, of which £20 go to the free school. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists, and a meeting-house for the Society of Friends. R. H. Cheney, Esq., of Shiffnall, Salop, is lord of the manor.

MONYBURGH, an ancient par., now joined to Kilsyth, co. Stirling, Scotland.

MONYMUSK, a par. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It comprises the post-office vil. of its own name. It extends in length about 7 miles from E. to W., with a breadth varying from 4 to 5 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Keig, Oyne, Chapel of Garioch, Cluny, and Tough. The surface is hilly, rising in some parts 1,400 feet above sea level. The land near the river is in an excellent state of cultivation. The soil chiefly consists of light loam, and, in some parts, clay. There are sheep-walks among the hills. Granite is the prevailing rock in the hills, and is quarried to a considerable extent. Felspar also abounds, and was formerly quarried. Iron ore is found in the quartz. There are a distillery and two saw-mills. The par. is traversed by two turnpike roads. The vil. of Monymusk occupies a central position about 7 miles S.W. of Inverury, and is within easy access of the Monymusk station on the branch line of the great North of Scotland railway. The chief part of the village has been rebuilt within these last few years. It is built in the form of a square, and has a remarkably neat appearance. It is within a short distance of the S. bank of the river Don, which abounds in salmon, trout, and other fish. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £202. The parish church, which is situated in the centre of the village, is of great antiquity, and has a square tower crowned with a spire, rising 90 feet in height. The church and spire were restored in 1822, when the former was enlarged. There is a parochial school, also Lord Cullen's endowed school, which stands in the northern part of the parish. The Episcopalian chapel in the village was formerly a Culdee house, which, after David I.'s time, became a cell to St. Andrew's. Monymusk House is situated on the right bank of the river Don, environed by plantations. There is a pillar cross 7 feet in height. An annual cattle fair is held on the last Thursday in August.

MONYSEED, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilnahue, bar. of Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles W.N.W. of Gorey. Monyseed House is the principal residence.

MONZIE, or MONGEE, a par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It includes a vil. of the same name. It extends in length about 9 miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 8 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Kenmore, Weem, Dull, Fowlis-Wester, Crieff, Monivaird, and Camrie. It lies on the S. side of the Grampians. The surface abounds in lofty hills. Not above one-third part of the land is arable, and the remainder in heath, moss, and sheep-walks, devoted to the pasturing of Highland or black-faced sheep. The arable part is in an excellent state of cultivation, and is diversified with thriving plantations. The parish is watered by the rivers Almond, Barvie, Shaggie, and Keltie, which all abound in trout, salmon, &c. There are two falls on the Almond river, viz. the Keltie fall of 90 feet, and the Shaggie 55 feet, which may seen to advantage from McBean's or Buchanty Bridge, constructed in 1639 by the Tullibardines, near their old seat. There are excellent slate quarries in Glenalmond; and at Culloquhey red sandstone is quarried. The par. is traversed by the Highland road from Crieff to Aberfeldy. The hilly district is occasionally visited by violent tempests and whirlwinds, which have in former times spread devastation in their course. The village of Monzie stands on the southern border near the conjunction of Monzie, Crieff, and Monivaird parishes, about 3 miles N. of Crieff, where is a station on the Scottish Central railway. It lies under a range of hills, 4 miles in breadth, which separates the two populated parts of the parish from each other. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and weaving. This par. is in the presb. of Auchterarder and synod of Perth and Stirling, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £158. The parish church was erected in 1831. There is a Free church, also a parochial school. Culloquhey and Monzie are the only mansions; the latter has a picture gallery, armoury, some larches 80 to 90 feet in height, also a Chinese temple on a mount 70 feet high. There are remains of two forts at Cairn-Compal, called Dunmore and Leney, also a cave at Eagles' Rock, traces of a Druidical temple near Kirk-in-the-Wood, numerous memorials of Fingal, a Roman camp called in Gaelic Fian-teach, or "Fingal's-house," near Findochs, at which place, "according to tradition," his house once stood, and about 2 miles E. is the place where Fingal's father was killed, and in the immediate vicinity is Ossian's tomb, or kistvaen, besides numerous tumuli and cairns, one 50 feet in diameter, where stone coffins and other relics of antiquity have been discovered.

MOODIESBURN, a vil. in the par. of Calder, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Glasgow.

MOONCOIN, or MOUNTCOIN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Poleroan, bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles W.N.W. of Waterford.

MOONE, a par. in the bars. of East Offaly, Kilkea, Moone, East Narragh, and Reban, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Athy. Ballytore is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The soil is light and the surface is drained by several feeders to the river Barrow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Timolin, £272, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is in ruins. A friary formerly stood in the village, where are still remains of a very ancient stone cross. Moone Castle, founded at the close of the 12th century by the Anglo-Norman settlers, is still in a tolerable state of repair. Moone Abbey is the principal seat. Fairs are held on 1st May, 19th June, 13th August, and 28th October.

MOONZIE, a par. in the district of Cupar, co. Fife, Scotland. It extends about 2 miles S.E. in length, with an extreme breadth of 1½ mile, and is bounded by the pars. of Kilmany, Cupar, Monemail, and Creich. The surface is hilly, the highest part rising about 300 feet above sea-level. The soil, which principally consists of a black loam, is in a good state of cultivation. The southern border of the parish is traversed by the road from Cupar to Newbergh. This par. is in the presb. of Cupar and synod of Fife. The minister has a stipend of £187. The parish church is situated in the S.W. part of the parish. It is a small ancient edifice standing on an eminence, and serves as a landmark to mariners entering the Tay. There is a parochial school.

MOOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Fladbury, co. Worcester, 2 miles N.E. of Pershore. It is situated near the river Avon, and in conjunction with Hill forms a township.

MOOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, near Hawarden. It contains the hmlt. of Newport.

MOOR, a vil. in the par. of Sutton-Coldfield, co. Warwick, 1 mile N.E. of Sutton-Coldfield.

MOOR ALLERTON. See ALLERTON CHAPEL, co. York.

MOORBY, a par. in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S.E. of Horncastle, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* with the perpet. cur. of Wood Enderby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £196, in the patron. of the Bishop of Manchester. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing one bell. A National school was erected in 1856 for the use of the parishes of Moorby and Wood Enderby for the children of both sexes. James Banks Stanhope, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor.

MOORE, or MOOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3½ miles S.W. of Warrington and 4 from Runcorn. It has stations on the London and North-Western and the Lancashire Junction railways. The village, which is small, is situated on the Grand Junction railway and on the Bridgwater canal. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay and sand. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists. Sir Richard Brooke is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MOORE, a par. in the bar. of Moycarn, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Ballinasloe, its post town. It is 6 miles long by 5 broad. The surface, which consists of inferior soil, is bordered on the S. by the river Suck, and on the E. by the Shannon. The road from Ballinasloe to Dublin crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Drum, £227. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1825. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Cloonfard. There are two daily schools. Thomastown is the chief seat.

MOORE ABBEY, a seat of the Marquis of Drogheda, in the par. of Monastereven, bar. of West Offaly, co. Kildare, 5 miles W. of Kildare. It is situated near the river Barrow and Grand canal, and was built on the site of St. Abpan's monastery, founded in the 12th century by the O'Dempseys, and given on the suppression of religious houses to the Audleys.

MOORE BAY, on the coast of Clare, Ireland, near Kilkea.

MOORECHURCH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Duleek. Balbriggan is its post town. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2½ miles. The road from Balbriggan to Drogheda traverses the interior. The Dublin and Drogheda railway also passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Julianstown, £363. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Stamullen; also a hedge-school in the parish. Moorechurch House is the principal residence.

MOORE CRITCHELL. See CRITCHELL MOORE, co. Dorset, and the like for other places with this prefix.

MOOR-ENDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Thorne, wap. of S. Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 25 miles S. by E. of York. It is situated near the river Don, and in the vicinity of Hatfield Chase. The surface is flat and moory and marshy, but fertile.

MOORESBARROW-CUM-PARME, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Middlewich. It is situated on a branch of the river Dane near the Manchester railway.

MOORFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Morristown-Biller, bar. of Connell, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Newbridge. Moorfield House is the only residence.

MOORFIELDS, a district in the par. of St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, Tower div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex, 1½ mile N.E. of St. Paul's, London. It is a populous suburban district of London, forming part of the borough of the Tower Hamlets, and lies between the Regent's canal, the Hackney-road, and Finsbury-circus. It is chiefly inhabited by silk weavers, drug makers, general dealers, and other industrial classes. See SHOREDITCH.

MOORFOOT HILLS, a double range of moorish hills, mostly in the pars. of Borthwick, Heriot-Temple, and Stow, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. They rise from 1,320 feet to 1,860 in height, and are of a slaty nature with lydian stone.

MOORGAGAGH, a par. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Shrule. Headford is its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1½ broad. The soil is good. The road from Kilmain to Galway passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Kilmaine, £458, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school.

MOORGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Clareborough, co. Nottingham, half a mile N.E. of Retford. It is situated on the Chesterfield canal.

MOORGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Whiston, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Rotherham. It is situated near the line of the North Midland railway.

MOORGREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Greasley, co. Nottingham, 7 miles N.W. of Nottingham.

MOORHAMPTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 9 miles S.W. of Hereford. It is a station on the Hereford and Brecon railway. Moorhampton Park is situated on the river Dore.

MOORHAY-LODGE, an ext. par. lib. in the par. of Apethorpe, co. Northampton, 4 miles N.W. of Oundle. It is situated in Rockingham Forest.

MOOR-HEAD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Shipley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Bradford.

MOORHOUSE, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Laxton, S. Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.E. of Tuxford, and 1½ mile E. of Laxton. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Laxton. The chapel is of great antiquity. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor.

MOORHOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of the ward of Easington, co. Durham, 3 miles N.E. of Durham. It is situated on the line of the Newcastle railway and the river Wear.

MOORHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Whiston, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Rotherham.

MOORHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Hooton-Pagnell, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Doncaster.

MOOR-HOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Burgh-by-Sands, co. Cumberland, 5 miles W. of Carlisle, and 2 S. of Burgh. It is situated near the Ship canal, and includes Thurstonfield. The Society of Friends have a meeting-house.

MOORHOUSE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stanley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Wakefield. Besides the above there are numerous small places and private seats of this name in various parts of England.

MOOR-HOUSE-MOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Allerton, and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Bradford. The inhabitants are employed in the collieries and factories.

MOORHOUSES, a hmlt. in the par. of Revesby, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.E. of Horncastle.

MOORHOUSES, a hmlt. in the par. of Brougham, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile S. of Penrith. It is situated near the rivers Eamont and Lowther.

MOORLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of N. Petherton, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated on the river Parret.

MOOR-LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gomersall, par. of Birstall, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Huddersfield. The inhabitants are engaged in the woollen manufactures and in the collieries.

MOORLINCH, or MURLINCH, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 3¾ miles from Shapwick railway station, and 7 E. of Bridgwater. The village, which is considerable and wholly agricultural, is situated on the Bath and Exeter road. The par. includes the hmlts. of Burtle, Calcott, Chilton, Edington, Stawell, and Sutton-Mallett. The soil is chiefly clay on a substratum of blue and white lias, which is quarried for building and ornamental uses. Here was formerly a cell to the abbey of Glastonbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, with the curs. of Stawell and Sutton-Mallet annexed, val. £500. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1550. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. Chilton-on-Polden with Edington, Burtle, and Catcott, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £120 to £100. The parochial charities produce about £152 per annum. There is a National school, also Sunday-schools. The Independents have a place of worship. Benjamin Cuff Greenhill, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MOOR, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Broadway, co. Dorset, 3 miles N. of Weymouth.

MOOR PARK, a seat of the Marquis of Westminster, in the par. of Broadway, co. Dorset, 4 miles N. of Weymouth. The mansion, which was built by Leoni, is Grecian, situated in a well-wooded demesne, formerly the property of St. Alban's Abbey. It is decorated with great taste, the hall and staircase being painted with subjects from Ovid, and the saloon by Thornhill after Guido. It was once the residence of the famous Duke of Monmouth, and subsequently of Lord Anson, who here first grew the apricot in perfection.

MOOR PARK, a demesne in the par. and hund. of Farnham, co. Surrey, 1 mile E. of Farnham, and 11 miles W. by S. of Guildford. It is situated on the river Wey, and was formerly the seat of Sir William Temple, whose heart was buried under the sun-dial here in 1698. It was here too that Dean Swift, while acting as secretary to Temple, first became acquainted with Stella.

MOORSHAM, GREAT, and MOORSHOLM-CUM-GIRRICK, tnshps. in the par. of Skelton, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 6 miles E. of Guisborough. These townships, which are wholly agricultural, are nearly surrounded by moorland hills. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the neighbourhood, and there is a National school.

MOORSIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Backwell, co. Somerset, 6 miles S.W. of Bristol.

MOORSIDE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stainburn, par. of Kirkby Overblow, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Otley.

MOORSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of Easington ward. co. Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Durham. It is situated near the Sunderland railway, which here forms a junction with the Hartlepool railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a fertile valley near the river Wear. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring collieries and quarries.

MOOR, THE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bodenham, co. Hereford, 7 miles N.E. of Hereford.

MOOR, THE, a vil. in the par. of Stoke St. Milborough, co. Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Ludlow.

MOORTHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kirby, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S. of Pontefract.

MOORTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Cumwhitton, Eskdale ward, co. Cumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Brampton, and 10 S.E. of Carlisle. It includes the hmlts. of Moorthwaite, Hornsby, Hornsby Gate, and High and Low Northsceugh.

MOORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Thornbury, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N.E. of Thornbury.

MOORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of South Kelsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Caistor. It is situated under Moorton Hill.

MOOR-TOP, a hmlt. in the par. of Ackworth, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Pontefract.

MOOR-TOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Brandsburton, N. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Brandsburton, and 10 N.E. of Beverley. The township is inconsiderable and wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and peat.

MOORTOWN. See MURTON, cos. Northumberland and Westmoreland.

MOORTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall-Magna, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Wellington. It is in conjunction with Cotwall.

MOORTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Caistor, co. Lincoln, 2 miles from Caistor and 20 N. by E. of Lincoln. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway.

MOORTOWN, a tythg. in the par. of Fivehead, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Langport.

MOOR, WEST, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 4 miles S. of Langport.

MOORWINSTOW, or MORWINSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Stratton, co. Cornwall, 7 miles N.W. of Stratton, its post town. It is situated on Bude Bay near the Bristol Channel, and at the head of the river Tamar. The par. is the most northerly in Cornwall, and contains the hmlts. of Woodford, Crosstown, Goosecham, Coombe, Woolley, and Eastcot. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The parish is bounded on the W. by the Bristol Channel, and on the E. by the river Tamar, which, with the Torridge, has its source here. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390, and the vicarial for £365. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £276, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Morvenna, is situated on the cliffs, and is of great antiquity. It is a Norman structure, abounding with curious details, and has a square tower containing four bells. The S. aisle and chancel were added in 1300, and are dedicated to St. John the Baptist, but other additions and alterations have been made since that period. The S. porch is ornamented with curious figures, as are also the pillars which divide the aisles and nave. There is a screen and monuments of the Kempthornes and Waddons of Tonacombe. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a National school. Bishop Stanbury of Hereford and Sir William Adams, the eminent oculist, were natives of this parish.

MOOR-WITH-BATCHCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Richard's-Castle, hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 2 miles S.W. of Ludlow.

MOORWOOD, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bradfield, par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Sheffield. It is situated under Bradfield Point, which attains an altitude of 1,246 feet.

MORA, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W.S.W. of Fethard. Waterford is its post town. The soil is good. The road from Cashel to Clonmel traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £194, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There is a day school.

MORAR LOCH, a lake in the district of the same name, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated S. of Loch Nevish, and is connected with the sea by a short river.

MORAY, or MURRAY, a large district or province in the N.E. of Scotland, now without any politically defined boundaries, yet possessing an individuality owing to its physical features and historical associations. It comprises the fertile tract of country lying between the river Deveron and the borders of Inverness, comprising the modern counties of Banff, Elgin, or Moray proper, and Nairn. It is naturally divided into two districts, North and South, differing widely in their physical characteristics. The former district may be described as a band of rich lowland country extending for near 60 miles from E. to W., with a breadth only of from 2 to 12 miles; while the latter, or southern division, comprises a rugged highland country rising file behind file of long and broad mountain masses, and appearing from the coast like a rampart raised to guard the orchards, the woods, and the fields of the lowlands. The peculiar configuration of these mountain ranges affects the character of the climate by sheltering the lowlands along the coast from the prevailing winds of the country, and by causing the mists and light clouds to discharge their moisture over the hills, thus giving to the lowlands that mildness of climate and dryness of atmosphere so much celebrated by historians and poets, and not to be met with in other parts of Scotland. This same cause, however, is occasionally productive of wide-spread desolation, the mountains attracting the heavily charged clouds which discharge their waters among the gullies and upland glens, where they become pent up, rendering the rivers of the country peculiarly liable to sudden freshets and disastrous floods, as that which swept over the lowlands in August, 1829; when the waters of the Spey and Findhorn rose 50 feet higher than usual. The other rivers of this district are the Nairn, Ness, and Lossie, and their tributaries, which all descend from the highlands to the sea. Nearly parallel to the coast-line is a great terraced bank about 76 feet high, rising from a base 14 feet above the ordinary highwater level, and bearing the appearance of having been once washed by the waves, but containing, so far as yet discovered, no marine deposits, nor any animal remains except along its skirts, where the vertebræ of whales and saltwater shells of existing species are occasionally met with. It extends in one line from the mouth of the Spey to Inverness, and thence up the great glen of Loch Ness, with occasional projecting headlands and indented bays. Other terraces or terraced banks occur along the skirts of the hills, but are uncontinuous and of comparatively small extent. Moray gives the title of earl to the ancient and illustrious family of Stuart of Darnaway, and name to the Murrays of Ochtertyre. Moray was formerly a bishopric, the cathedral being at Elgin and the episcopal residence at Spynie. It is now a synod both of the National and Free churches, comprehending the presbs. of Abernethy, Aberlour, Elgin, Forres, Inverness, Nairn, and Strathbogie; also a diocese, with Ross, of the Scotch Episcopal Church. The present Bishop of Moray and Ross, Dr. Robert Eden, holds the rank of Primus of the Episcopal Church of Scotland, having been elected to that dignity in 1862. He was consecrated Bishop of Moray and Ross in 1851, and held the rectory of Leigh, in Essex, from 1837 to 1853.

MORAY FRITH, an estuary or inland sea in the extreme N.E. of Scotland, consisting of an exterior and interior frith, besides the minor friths of Donorch and Cromarty. It was known to the ancient geographers as the Vara, or Tua Æstuarium, and blends with the German Ocean on the N.E. The interior frith, where it opens from the exterior, is 14 miles wide from Tarbetness light to Burgh-head near Findhorn harbour. It thence projects south-westward past Fort St. George and Inverness to Loch Beauley's head. It has from 6 to 20 fathoms water, with a good herring fishery, though the fish are of inferior quality to those taken on the W. coasts of Scotland. It is bordered on the W. by the counties of Caithness, Ross, and Cromarty, extending on that side about 70 miles, and on the S. it has Morayshire, Banffshire, and Aberdeenshire, measuring along that coast about 57 miles.

MORAYSHIRE, now called Elginshire, from the name of its capital, is the central division of the province of Moray. It is bounded on the N. by the Moray Frith, and on the other sides by the cos. of Inverness and Banff. See ELGINSHIRE.

MORBORN, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, co. Huntingdon, 2 miles N.W. of Stilton, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Peterborough. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near Morborn-Thorns, on the borders of Northamptonshire, and is wholly agricultural. About half the land is arable, and the remainder, with the exception of a small portion of woodland, pasture and meadow. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £164 14*s*. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £271. The church is an ancient edifice with a tower. R. E. D. Shafto, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MORCHARD-BISHOP. See BISHOP MORCHARD, co. Devon.

MORCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, 4 miles N.E. of Uppingham, its post town, and 2 S.W. of the Luffenham railway station. The village is situated between the rivers Welland and Chater, and is chiefly agricultural. The tunnel of the Rugby and Stamford railway passes under part of this village. The land is partly in common. The substratum abounds with limestone and freestone, which are quarried. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £388. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square spired tower covered with lead and containing four bells. The interior of the church has a tomb to William de Overton. In James I.'s time Mr. George Gilson, a Roman Catholic, founded a hospital for six poor persons of either sex, being unmarried, with an annuity of £36. Two schools were built in 1849 for children of both sexes, and are entirely supported by S. R. Fydell, Esq., the lord of the manor and sole landowner. There is a place of worship for the Baptists, which was endowed with £600 by the Rev. W. Curtis in 1807. Morcett Hall is the principal residence.

MORDEN, a par. in the East Shaston div. of the hund. of Loosebarrow, co. Dorset, 5 miles N. of Wareham, and 7 N.E. of Poole Junction. Blandford is its post town. The village is of small extent and chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Charborough, Sandford, and Sherford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £287. The church is an ancient edifice, with a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles and containing four bells. The chancel contains a monument to the Erle family. The parochial charities produce about £255 per annum. There is a free school and a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Charborough Park, situated in a small dale and surrounded with wooded hills, is the seat of John Samuel Wanley Sawbridge Erle Drax, Esq., M.P., who is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MORDEN. See MORDON, cos. Durham and Surrey; also GUILDEN-MORDEN, STEEPLE-MORDEN, &c.

MORDIFORD, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.E. of Hereford, its post town, and 13 N.W. of Ross. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Frome, Lug, and Wye, near Ethelbert's camp. The Lug is crossed by a stone bridge. The par. contains the hmlts. of Checkley, Checkley-Green, Sufton, and the Rock. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop-grounds and gardens, the remainder being nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The substratum is chiefly limestone, in which is found a great variety of fossils. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £310. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £318. The church, dedicated to the Holy Rood, is a small ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient monument, an effigy with an inscription of great antiquity, and in the chancel is a tablet bearing the signature of the Rev. Charles J. Bird, giving a description of a terrific storm of rain and thunder in 1811. The transept was rebuilt in 1852, and has a memorial window to the eldest daughter of Richard Hereford, Esq., of Sufton Court. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a National school for children of both sexes, also an infant school. Sufton Court is the principal residence; it is a stone mansion situated on rising ground and adjoining the village. Lady Emily Foley, of Stoke Edith Park, is lady of the manor.

MORDINGTON, a par. in the co. of Berwick, Scotland. It includes the ancient par. of the same name and Lamerton. It extends in length about 4¾ miles S., with an extreme breadth of 2 miles, and is bounded by the German Ocean, the libs. of Berwick, and the pars. of Slutton, Foulden, and Ayton. The surface in the southern part is moderately even, while in the northern and broader half it rises to a great altitude, and on the W. side are numerous gentle eminences. The land in the valleys is generally fertile, being a light loam, and in some places a stiff clay, while that on the higher grounds is thin and poor. This district abounds in coal, which is worked; also freestone, limestone, and iron-stone. The vil. of Mordington is situated between the river Whitadder and the sea, 3 miles N.W. of Berwick. It is traversed by the road from Edinburgh to Berwick, and by the North British railway. The coast line is about 2½ miles in extent, and is of a rocky nature. This par. is in the presb. of Chirnside and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister has a stipend of £157. The parish church was erected in 1747. There is a Free church, and at Lamerton, within the Scottish border, is a house where marriages were until recently solemnised in the same summary manner as at Gretna Green. Within this parish are traces of a Danish camp, also of Edrington Castle, situated at the top of a steep rock, and of the "Witches' Know," where, in the seventeenth century, several persons were burnt for witchcraft. Mordington House, where Cromwell established his quarters, is situated near the base of the uplands.

MORDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sedgefield, N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 2½ miles S.W. of Sedgefield, and 8 N.E. of Darlington. It is situated on the river Skerne near the Newcastle and Clarence railways.

MORDON, or MORDEN, a par. and post town in the second div. of the hund. of Wallington, co. Surrey, 1 mile S. of Mitcham, and 5 miles N.W. of Croydon. It is a station on the Wimbledon branch of the London and Brighton railway. The village, which is small and chiefly agricultural, is situated near the river Wandle and the Epsom road. There are two tobacco and snuff mills, which give employment to a portion of the inhabitants. About half the land is arable, and the remainder grass and garden ground. The manor belonged to Westminster Abbey prior to the Norman conquest. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £420. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £353. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a small brick structure erected in 1636, with an embattled tower containing three bells. The interior of the church has a large E. window of stained glass, the ancient part of which is said to have belonged to Merton Abbey, also tombs of the Garth family. The parochial charities produce about £44 per annum, including the bequests for education. There is a National school with an income from endowment of £30, also a Sunday-school partly endowed. Mordon Park is the principal residence.

MORE, a par. in Bishop's Castle div. of the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Bishop's Castle, its post town, and 8 from the Marsh-Brook railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Onny and on the turnpike road from Bishop's Castle to Shrewsbury. The par. comprises the tnshps. of More, Moreswood, and Linley. The soil is of various quality. There are several ancient camps. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £270. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The church has recently been rebuilt. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, of which £5 goes to Roger's school. The ancient Norman shooting butts are in this parish. Linley Hall is the principal residence. The Rev. S. F. More is lord of the manor and owner of the soil.

MORE, a constablewick in the par. of Rock, co. Worcester, 4 miles S.W. of Bewdley. It is joined to Conningswick.

MOREBATH, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, co. Devon, 9 miles N. of Tiverton, its post town, and 2 N. of Bampton. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the borders of Somersetshire, near the river Exe. The soil consists of clay on a substratum of freestone, which is quarried. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £115, and the vicarial for £234. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £195. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The interior has a font and several monuments to the Bere and Sayer families. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes endowed by John Brooke in 1688 with a rent-charge of £10.

MOREBATTLE, a par. in the district of Kelso, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It comprises a post-office vil. of the same name. It extends about 9½ S. in length, with an extreme breadth of 6 miles, and is bounded by England and the pars. of Hounam, Eckford, Linton, and Yetholm. The surface is chiefly of a hilly nature, the heights varying from 500 to 2,000 feet above sea-level. Only the lower lands are under cultivation, the upper being chiefly in pasture, affording excellent sheep-walks. The village of Morebattle is distant about 8 miles N.E. of Jedburgh, and 51 from Edinburgh. It is situated on Bowmont and Kale waters, which abound in salmon and trout. The village has greatly improved of late years. The vestiges of ancient camps and various ruins, particularly Whitton Castle and Corbet House, indicate this place to have been the frequent scene of warfare. This par. is in the presb. of Kelso and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister has a stipend of £234. The parish church, which is situated in the village, was erected in 1757. There are likewise an United Presbyterian church, a Free church, and a parochial school, also one at Mowhaugh.

MOREBY WITH STILLINGFLEET, a tnshp. in the par. of Stillingfleet, wap. of Ouze and Derwent, East Riding co. York, 5 miles S. of York. It is situated on the river Ouse.

MORECAMBE, a bay at the mouths of the rivers Kent and Leven, between Lancaster and Furness, on the coast of Lancashire. It is the Moricambe estuary of Ptolemy, and is 8 miles by 10. The Morecambe branch of the London and North-Western railway, which is only 3½ miles in length, terminates here at Poulton Creek. The bay is traversed by numerous shifting sands, as the Cartmel, Wharfe, &c. The tide has twice in the present century—viz. in 1831 and 1849—risen above 6 feet higher than usual. There is a guide stationed here by the government to conduct persons crossing the sands. Overlooking the bay is Morecambe Lodge, a modern edifice.

MOREDON, a tythg. in the par. of Rodborne-Cheney, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.W. of Swindon.

MORELEIGH, or MORLEY, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Totnes, its post town, and the same distance from the Kingsbridge Road railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. Petty sessions are held at the "New Inn" monthly. The soil is of a clayey nature. It was formerly a market town, and had an annual fair, both of which have long been discontinued. Within the parish is Stanborough, the site of an ancient fort, from which the hundred is named. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure. There is a place of worship for the Independents. The Parker family takes from this place the title of Earl.

MORE LOCH, a lake in the highland part of the par. of Halkirk, co. Caithness, Scotland, 10 miles S.W. of Halkirk. It extends 1½ mile in length, by three-quarters of a mile in breadth.

MORE, or MOIR LOCH, a lake in the par. of Eddrachillis, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Eddrachilis. It extends in length about 4½ miles, with a breadth of 1 mile. This lake never freezes.

MORELL, a river of co. Kildare, Ireland. It rises near Naas, and joins the Liffey at Straffan.

MORESBY, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles N.E. of Whitehaven, its post town. It is situated on the coast of the Irish Sea, and contains the tnshps. of Moresby and Parton. It was the site of the Roman station Arbeia, where foundations of buildings, coins, &c., have been found. The substratum is very productive of coal, and freestone. The village is of small extent and chiefly agricultural. There is an iron foundry within the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £105. The church, dedicated to St. Bridget, is a modern stone edifice with a square tower containing two bells. The church is situated on rising ground within a camp of 330 feet square. The charities produce about £42 per annum, which goes to Williams' school. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

MORESTEAD, a par. in the lower half of Fawley hund., Winchester div. co. Hants, 3 miles S.E. of Winchester, its post town and nearest railway station, and 7 N.W. of Bishop's Waltham. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the ext. par. place of No Man's Land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £180, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has an open belfry containing one bell. There is a school partly supported by subscription.

MORESWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of More, co. Salop, 2 miles N.E. of Bishop's Castle.

MORETON, a hund. in co. Berks, contains the borough of Wallingford, and the pars. of Ashampstead, Aston-Tirrold, Basildon, Brightwell, Dudcott, East Garston, Hagbourne, Harwell, North Moreton, South Moreton, Moulsford, Stolwell, Streatley, and parts of Allhallows and Blewberry, comprising 28,700 acres, exclusive of Wallingford.

MORETON, a lib. in the par. of Dinton, hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.W. of Aylesbury. It is wholly agricultural, comprising two or three farms.

MORETON, a par. in the hund. of Winfrith, co. Dorset, 7 miles S.E. of Dorchester, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Moreton station on the London and South-Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Frome, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £262. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £220. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a modern edifice, rebuilt in 1776, with a square pinnacled tower. The interior of the church contains a brass and several tombs. The parochial charities produce about £123 per annum, part of which goes towards the apprenticing of children of the parishes of Moreton, Affpuddle, and Tolpuddle. Henry Frampton, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MORETON, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 3½ miles N.W. of Chipping Ongar, its post town, and 7 S.E. of the Harlow railway station. The village is situated about 1½ mile N. of the road leading from Epping to Ongar, and is wholly agricultural. The parish is separated from those of Great and Little Laver by a brook, here crossed by a bridge, which falls into the River Roden at Chipping Ongar. From the higher grounds extensive and varied prospects are commanded. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £375. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £344, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a brick tower surmounted by a shingled spire, and containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £73 per annum, of which £35 goes to Wilson's school, now combined with the National schools. There is a place of worship for the Independents. Edmund Calamy, the eminent Nonconformist divine, was once rector of this parish.

MORETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Gnosall, hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 9 miles S.W. of Stafford, and 4 S.E. of Newport. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £45, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Gnosall. The church is a small modern edifice.

MORETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Thame, co. Oxford, 1 mile S.W. of Thame.

MORETON, a chplry. in the par. of Llanyblodwell, hund. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 3 miles S. of Oswestry. The village, which is small, is situated on the Montgomery canal. There is a mineral spring. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £669, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

MORETON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Draycott and par. of Hanbury, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Uttoxeter.

MORETON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Thornbury, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Thornbury.

MORETON-CORBET, a par. in the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 8 miles N.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 4½ S.E. of Wem. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Roden, and on the road from Wellington to Market Drayton, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a sandy loam alternating with a stiff clay. The surface is generally flat, except a ridge of elevated land which nearly intersects the parish. There are several mills on the banks of the river Roden. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £330. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £361. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The church has several stained windows, and some ancient effigies and monuments to the Corbet family. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a school entirely supported by Sir V. R. Corbet, Bart., the lord of the manor and sole landowner. There are the ruins of Moreton-Corbet Castle, which was erected on the site of an older one in the 16th century, and was burnt during the Civil War.

MORETON-CUM-ALCUMLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2½ miles S.W. of Congleton, its post town. The township, which is of irregular form, is situated near the Macclesfield canal and the North Staffordshire railway, the hamlet of Alcumlow being in a westerly direction near the brink of the township. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Moreton Hall is an ancient timbered mansion situated in a well wooded and extensive park. George Holland Ackers, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MORETON-CUM-ASHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eye, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 3 miles N. of Leominster. It is situated on the canal.

MORETON-CUM-LINGHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Bidstone, lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 4½ miles N.W. of Birkenhead, and 9 N.W. of Great Neston.

MORETON-HAMPSTEAD, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 12 miles S.W. of Exeter. It is situated on the high road from Tavistock to Exeter, and close on the verge of Dartmoor Forest. The town, which has recently been sewered, has many old houses built in the cottage style with thatched roofs. It was formerly governed by a portreeve, &c. The woollen trade, which was formerly extensive, has disappeared, and only a few blankets and stockings are now made. There are ropemakers, tanning and malting establishments, and in the vicinity are quarries of granite. A new market-house and shambles were built at the expense of the Earl of Devon in 1827. The races, which were formerly held on the common, have been discontinued. Cranbrook and Wooston castles are two entrenchments situated on the N.W. border of the parish, projecting over the valley in which flows the river Teign. Fingle Mill is a place of great attraction during the summer season. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £401. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, stands on the summit of the hill on which the town is built. It is a large and ancient structure, with a tower containing a chimed clock and six bells. The interior of the church contains a carved screen separating the chancel from the body of the church. The parochial charities produce about £41 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1839. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Calvinists, and Unitarians, have each a place of worship. There are a good circulating library and a musical society, both of which are well patronised. The Earl of Devon is lord of the manor. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in July and the last Thursday in November.

MORETON-IN-THE-MARSH, a par., post and market town in the upper div. of Westminster hund., co. Gloucester, 5 miles from Campden, 6 from Shipston-on-Stour, and 28 N.E. of Gloucester. It is a station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The town, which consists of one long street, forming part of the road from London to Worcester, is well lit with gas, and is crossed by the line of the Roman Fosse Way. It contains two banks, gas-works, a police station, and a philharmonic society and reading room. An extensive trade is done in the manufacture of linen. In the reign of Henry III. the Abbot of Westminster, as lord of the manor, first procured a charter for a market. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1821. The living is annexed to the rect.* of Bourton-on-the-Hill, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. David, is a stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. There are National, British, and infant schools, the first endowed with the interest of £4,000, bequeathed by Lord Redesdale and Dr. Winford, in 1813. A court baron is occasionally held by the Right Hon. Lord Redesdale, who is lord of the manor. On the heath, where a memorable battle was fought between the Saxons and Danes, is a modern pillar marking the point of contact of the counties of Oxford, Gloucester, Worcester, and Warwick. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the second Tuesday in every month, and on the second Tuesday in April, August, and October, for cheese.

MORETON, MAIDS. See MAIDS-MORETON, co. Bucks.

MORETON-MORRELL, a par. in the Warwick div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 3½ miles N.W. of Kington, its post town, and 5 S.W. of the Harbury railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. Limestone is quarried for burning into lime and for the roads. This parish was formerly divided into two parts, termed Morton and Merhull, in consequence of the moorish ground adjoining the former: hence the origin of its present name. It is bounded on the E. and S.E. by the line of the Roman Fosse Way. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £120. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, and also a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

MORETON, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Moreton, and borough of Wallingford, co. Berks, 4 miles W. of Wallingford. It is situated on the line of the Great Western railway. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and orchard. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £169, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Berks. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a curious early decorated water drain. In Stapleton's chantry chapel, founded in the middle of the 15th century, are several very old tombs with Saxon inscriptions. The charities produce about £2 per annum.

MORETON-SAY, or MORETON SEA, a par. in the Drayton div. of the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 3 miles W. of Market Drayton, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Whitchurch. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Tern, and on the road from Newport to Whitchurch. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. which is of considerable extent, contains the hmlts. of Bletchley, Longford, and Styche. The soil consists of loam, with a subsoil of sand. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £550, and the incumbent's for £89 13*s*. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £129. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a brick structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains numerous monuments of the Vernon and Clive families, one of which is to the eminent Lord Clive, who was interred here. The chancel has a stained window. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a day and Sunday school. The Methodists have a chapel at Tern Hill. Richard Corbet, Esq., and John Tayleur, Esq., are lords of the manor.

MORETON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Moreton and borough of Wallingford, co. Berks, 3 miles S.W. of Wallingford. The Great Western railway intersects the parish, which is watered by a small stream falling into the Thames at Wallingford. The surface is generally level and the land principally arable. The village is small and chiefly agricultural, except a few persons engaged in the paper mill. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1818. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £199, in the patron. of Magdalen Hall, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient structure.

MORETON-UPON-LUGG, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 4 miles N. of Hereford, its post town. It is a station on the Hereford and Shrewsbury line of railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Lugg, and on the Hereford and Leominster turnpike road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a clayey nature with a subsoil of gravel. The land is partly in hop-grounds with some rich meadow on the banks of the river. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £212, in the patron. of the Prebend of Moreton-Magna. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor and sole landowners.

MORETON-VALENCE, a par. in the upper div. of Whitstone hund., co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.W. of Stroud, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Severn. The Gloucester and Berkeley ship canal passes through the parish. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £355. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring iron-works. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £90, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is an ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £1 10*s*. per annum.

MORETOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Canford Magna, co. Dorset, 3 miles S.E. of Wimborne.

MORFA-WITH-CROGENNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangelynin, co. Merioneth, 4 miles N.W. of Towyn.

MORGALLION, a bar. in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by co. Cavan, Lower and Upper Slane, Lower and Upper Kells, and Lower Navan. It contains the pars. of Castletown, Clongill, Drakestown, Kilberry, Kilshine, Knock, and part of Ardagh, Enniskeen, and Nobber. Its area is about 31,492 acres.

MORGANS, a par. in the bar. of Lower Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Askeaton, its post town. It extends along the bank of the Shannon. The soil is rich. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Loughill, £108, in the patron. of the bishop. Mount Pleasant is the principal seat of the neighbourhood. Here are the remains of a church formerly belonging to the Knights Templars, called Templemuireguiedan.

MORGAY, a small island in the par. of North Uist, in the Outer Hebrides, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is inconsiderable, having but few inhabitants.

MORHAM, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland. It includes a post-office vil. of the same name. It extends about 3 miles from E. to W. in length, with a varying breadth of from 1 mile to 2 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Haddington, Preston-Kirk, Whittingham, and Garvald. The surface is moderately even, the highest point being 413 feet above sea-level. The soil is chiefly clay and the land is in excellent cultivation. The village of Morham is distant about 2 miles S.E. of Haddington railway station, and is situated on the small stream of Morhamburn which runs 6 miles N. to the South Tyne. This par. is in the presb. of Haddington and synod of Lothian and Tweedale. The minister has a stipend of £156. The parish church was erected in 1724, but since that period has been frequently restored. There is a parochial school.

MORHAYS, a hmlt. in the hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N. of Wadebridge, and 9 N.W. of Bodmin. It is situated near the river Camel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is a small modern edifice.

MORICE TOWN, a suburb of Devonport, co. Devon, half a mile N. of Devonport. It is situated on a creek of Hamoaze, near New Passage, in Plymouth Harbour, and opposite Devonport Dockyard. It has a spacious basin for ocean steamers called the Keyham basin, also wharfs, a powder magazine, blockhouse, and extensive brewery.

MORISTON, a river of co. Ross, Scotland. It rises near Loch Clunie, and flowing through Glenmorriston, to which it gives name, falls into Loch Ness at Invermorriston in co. Inverness.

MORLAIS, a stream of co. Glamorgan. It rises under the Brecknockshire Beacons, and passing by Morlais Castle, built by Gilbert Earl of Gloucester, joins the Lesser Taff.

MORLAND, a par. in West ward, co. Westmoreland, 7½ miles S.E. of Penrith, its post town, and 5 S.E. of the Clifton railway station. The village, although irregular, is well built, and situated on the river Lyvennet, which is here joined by two small streams. The par., which is of large extent, is bounded on the E. by the river Eden, and contains the tnshps. of Morland, King's Meaburn, Newby, Sleagill, Great Strickland, with the chplries. of Bolton and Thrimby, with Little Strickland. It is a polling-place for the county. The manor formerly belonged to Ivo de Talebois, and was given in part by his grandson to St. Mary's Abbey at York. There are linen and tape manufactories, also corn and saw mills. The surface is gently undulating and the uplands embellished with wood. The land is chiefly arable and pasture, with about 500 acres of common. The soil consists of a rich, reddish loam with a subsoil of clay and limestone. A branch of the Carlisle savings-bank was established here in 1839. Limestone and freestone are quarried extensively, and coal of inferior quality is obtained. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1779. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £177, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The parish church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a large cruciform structure, with portions as early as the reign of Henry II., but the body of the church was rebuilt in the last century. It has a spacious chancel, and a square low spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church has a brass of Joseph Blyth bearing date 1562, also a tablet to Lieutenant-General Frederick Markham, C.B. The register dates from 1538. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches at Bolton and Thrimby, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £80 each. The parochial charities produce about £3 11*s.* per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, also girls' and infant schools supported by voluntary contributions and payments of the children. A Sunday-school is held at the church. The Vicar has also established a village library. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Society of Friends have each a place of worship. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. There are some remains of the monastic buildings connected with St. Mary's at York, and several old halls now converted into farmhouses.

MORLESTON AND LITCHURCH, a hund. in co. Derby, contains the town of Derby and the pars. of Allestree, Aston-on-Trent, Dale Abbey, Denby, Eggington, Elvaston, West Hallam, Heanor, Horsley, Ilkeston, Kirk Langley, Mackworth, Mickleover, Morley, Ockbrook, Pentrich, Quarndon, Sandiacre, Sawley, Stanton-by-Dale, Weston, Willington, Wilne, and parts of St. Alkmund, Ashborne, Barrow, Crick, Kirk-Hallam, St. Michael, Mugginton, and St. Peter, comprising an area of 76,780 acres.

MORLEY, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 4 miles N.E. of Derby, its post town. There are traces of an old Roman road which passed through the parish. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, and others in weaving silk stockings. There are quarries of good building-stone; and a fine gritstone, used for scythe stones, is found. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Smalley annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £648. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is a spacious structure of the 14th century, with a tower surmounted by a lofty spire and containing three bells. The church has some stained windows, said to have been brought from Dale Abbey, which were restored in 1847, also five brasses bearing date from 1454. The parochial charities produce about £153 per annum, besides six almshouses founded and endowed with an annuity of £5 each by Jacinth Sacheverel. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions. At Smalley in this parish is a chapel-of-ease.

MORLEY, a wap. in the West Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Birstal, Bradford, Calverley, Halifax, and parts of Batley and Dewsbury, comprising an area of 135,500 acres.

MORLEY, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Batley, lower div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Leeds, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Dewsbury. It has stations on the Leeds and Dewsbury, and on the Leeds, Bradford, and Wakefield railways. The tnshp. includes Bruntcliffe-Shorne and three other hmlts. The village, which is of large extent, was anciently the head of the wapentake to which it gives name, and one of the principal towns in the county; but on the invasion of England by the Scots in the reign of Edward II. it was completely devastated. It is situated at the base and on the acclivities of an eminence rising from a deep valley; and contains several extensive woollen manufactures, which give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The soil is generally fertile, and the land in good cultivation. The substratum abounds with coal and freestone of excellent quality. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Batley. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is situated at Four-Lane-Ends, and was erected in 1830 at a cost of £2,593, partly by a grant from the Parliamentary Commissioners. It is a stone structure, with a spired tower containing one bell. There are National schools for both sexes, also schools for the Independents and Wesleyans. There are places of worship for the Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, and Wesleyan Reformers. The ancient parochial church was let on lease by Saville Earl of Sussex, to the Presbyterian party in the reign of Charles I. for 500 years, and is still in possession of their trustees as an Independent meeting-house. There are a mental improvement society, and a mechanics' institute. The Earl of Dartmouth is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The township contains many old mansions, as Cross Hall, Springfield House, Bank House, Morley House, Morley Hall, and Croft House. On a lofty eminence are the ruins of Howley Hall, for eighteen generations the seat of the Saville family, and which was garrisoned in the civil war of Charles I. for the parliament. In 1730 this old mansion was demolished by order of the Earl of Cardigan, and the surrounding park of 1,000 acres converted into arable land. On the E. side of the ruins of Howley Hall is Lady Anne's well, formerly much resorted to on Palm Sunday.

MORLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bowdon, co. Chester, 5 miles S.E. of Altrincham. It is situated near the river Mersey and Bridgwater canal.

MORLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, co. Durham, 4 miles W. by N. of Bishop Auckland. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Gaunless and Wear.

MORLEY. See MORLEIGH, co. Devon.

MORLEY ST. BOTOLPH, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.W. of Wymondham, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £580. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of St. Peter annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £585. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, has a square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum, £8 of which goes to Brown's school for the education of children of this parish, and that of Morley St. Peter.

MORLEY ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles S.W. of Wymondham, its railway station and post town. The village, which is straggling, is wholly agricultural. The only residence of note is Morley House, a white brick mansion. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Morley St. Botolph, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice, with a low square tower. It contains a monument to the Sedley family, who resided at the old hall.

MORMOND, or STRICHEN, a vil. in the par. of Strichen, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Deer, and 33½ N.W. of Aberdeen. It is situated under Mormond Hill, which rises 810 feet in height, and on the road from Peterhead to Banff. The village is neatly built, and consists of several well-formed streets, with a townhouse erected in 1816. There is also an office of the North of Scotland Bank. Annual fairs are held on the first Tuesday in January, and the Tuesday following the 4th March, on the Wednesday following the 19th May, Wednesday following the 12th July, Wednesday following the 9th August, and the Wednesday after the 12th November.

MORNINGSIDE, a vil. in the par. of St. Cuthbert's, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S. of the city of Edinburgh. It has a station on the Caledonian railway. It is situated under Blackford hills, near Tipperlin, and contains the Edinburgh lunatic asylum. The "Bore Stone," in which James IV. placed his standard when on his march to Flodden in 1513, is still to be seen in the wall by the public road. There is a Free church, also a chapel-of-ease; the former was erected in 1844, and the latter in 1837.

MORNING STAR, a river of co. Limerick, Ireland. It rises in the Galtee mountains, near Ballylanders, and joins the river Mague, near Bruree.

MORNING-THORPE, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 11 miles S. of Norwich, 3 E. of the Forncett railway station, and 1 mile E. from Long Stratton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The greater part of the land is in good cultivation, with a small extent of woodland and common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £242, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small structure, with a round tower. The chancel has a stained window, and the font is elaborately sculptured. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. There is a small school. Boyland Hall, the principal residence, is situated about 1½ mile N.E. of the village; it is an Elizabethan mansion, with extensive pleasure grounds, near to which is a bust of Queen Elizabeth, which was formerly kept at Tilbury House. The park is well wooded, and of large extent. There are two manors, viz. Morningthorpe and Boyland; E. Howes, Esq., is lord of the former, and F. W. Irby, Esq., of the latter.

MORNINGTON, a vil. in the par. of Colpe-cum-Mornington, in the bar. of Lower Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Drogheda. It is situated on the right bank of the river Boyne, at the Bridge of Boyne. The village was formerly called Weisley, and was a possession of Colpe Abbey. Here is an ancient church, and the Maiden Tower, which stands conspicuously on the strand.

MOROE, a vil. in the par. of Abington, bar. of Owneybeg, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, ? miles E. of Barringtonsbridge. It stands on the road from Cahirconlish to Newport Tip, among the Slieve Phelim mountains. Fairs are held on the 25th March, 29th April, 27th October, and 26th December.

MORPETH, a ward in two divs., E. and S., occupying the eastern section of co. Northumberland. Morpeth East ward contains the pars. of Bothal, Ulgham-with-Morpeth, Widdrington, Woodhorn, and parts of Felton and Warkworth; Morpeth South ward contains the pars. of Hebburn, Long Horsley, Nether Witton, and parts of Bolam, Brinkburn, Hartburn, Mitford, and Morpeth; together comprising 93,530 acres.

MORPETH, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in Castle and Morpeth wards, co. Northumberland, 15 miles N. by W. of Newcastle by road, or 16¾ by railway, and 289 miles N.N.W. of London by road, or 291½ viâ the Great Northern, or 320½ viâ the Midland railway. The North-Eastern and Blyth and Tyne railways have stations here. The town stands in a healthy valley, on a sort of peninsula formed by the windings of the river Wansbeck, which is here joined by the Cottingburn rivulet, and across which are three bridges: the one which carries the Newcastle road is a stone structure of three arches, designed by Telford; that on the W. is a suspension bridge, and the third is of wood, the two last being only for pedestrians. In ancient records it is called Morpathia and Morepath, signifying the town or path over the moor, and at the time of the Norman conquest was given to William de Merlay, whose descendants were lords of Morpeth. In the 14th century it passed to the Greystocks, who built the castle, the ruins of which occupy an elevated site on the other side of the river a little S. of the town, and having a deep natural valley to the N. and S. Some portions of the outer walls fronting the brow of the hill to the E., and the entrance gateway, which has recently been restored, are the only portions of this once strong fortress now remaining. From the Greystocks the lordship passed to the Dacre and Howard families, the latter of whom are the present barons of Morpeth, and bear the title of viscount from this place, in addition to that of earls of Carlisle.—Morpeth is a borough by prescription, and returned two members to parliament from the reign of Edward VI., who conferred on it a shield of arms, with the appropriate motto, "Inter sylvas et flumina habitans." Since the passing of the Reform Bill it returns only one member, at which time its boundaries were extended so as to include the tnshps. of Morpeth, Buller's Green, Catchburn-with-Morpeth-Castle, Hepscott, Newminster Abbey, Stobhill, and Tranwell-with-Highchurch, and the par. of Bedlington. The area of the old borough was 270 acres; that of the new borough 147,670, with a population in 1851 of 10,012, and in 1861 of 13,794. The municipal borough, which received its first charter of incorporation from Charles II., contained, in 1851, 4,096, and in 1861, 4,296 inhabitants. Under the Municipal Corporations Act, passed in 1835, it is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of the "mayor and burgesses of the borough of Morpeth." Its revenue is about £750. Morpeth is the head of a Poor-law Union containing 72 parishes and townships, and the seat of a new County Court district, also of a superintendent registry. It is a polling-place for the northern division of the county.—The appearance of the town, which is almost surrounded by the windings of the Wansbeck, has been much improved of late years. The streets are irregularly laid out, but contain several good residences, and two convenient hotels, besides many inns and shops. It is paved, lighted with gas, and supplied with water from a spring at Stobhill. The principal public buildings are the townhall, a stone edifice, with rustic piazza and turrets, situated on the S. side of the market-place; it was erected in 1714, at the expense of the Earl of Carlisle, from a design by Vanburgh, and faces the old market cross erected in 1699. The new gaol or county house of correction is a spacious stone edifice, resembling a baronial castle, and occupying a commanding site on the S. bank of the river Wansbeck; it was finished in 1828, at a cost of nearly £80,000, and is reckoned one of the most secure and commodious gaols in the kingdom. The gateway is an imposing mass of building, and contains the chapel, the sessions-house or hall for county business, in which the Easter sessions for the county are held, and other offices. The union poorhouse is a plain building, situated in Newgate-street. The old market-house was on pillars; and in Oldgate-street stands the clock-tower, containing the fire-engine, and a peal of musical bells, which, in consequence of the church being at some distance from the town, are used for the ordinary parochial purposes. The county asylum, situated in a commanding spot overlooking the valley of the Wansbeck, is a spacious structure, not yet completed. There are, besides, four commercial branch banks, savings-bank, a dispensary, gas-works, and the mechanics' institute, situated in Scotch-yard, near the market-place, which has a library of 2,700 volumes.—The principal employments are in the weaving of flannel, corn-mills, malting, tanning, brewing, brick and tile making, saw-mills, iron and brass founding, rope and twine making, market gardening, and manufacturing agricultural implements. Although the manufactures are not of much importance, the town enjoys a flourishing general trade, being situated in the midst of a rich agricultural district. Until recently the largest cattle market in England, except Smithfield, was held here for the supply of the populous districts of the Tyne and Wear, but this market has been removed to Newcastle, as more commodious. The petty sessions for the county, and the spring quarter sessions, are held at the new court-house.—Morpeth gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Lindisfarne, and dioc. of Durham. The living is a rect.* with the perpet. cur. of Ulgham annexed, in the dioc. of Durham, val. £1,611. The parish church, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, is a plain stone edifice of the 14th century, situated on an eminence called Kirk Hill, about a mile from the town. Besides the parish church there is the new church of St. James the Great, erected in 1846, at a cost of £7,000, and situated in Newgate-street. The rector is the incumbent. The Roman Catholic church, dedicated to St. Robert, is situated in Oldgate-street, and is adorned with a spire and several painted windows. There are places of worship for Presbyterians, Independents, and Wesleyans; also National and infant schools adjoining St. James's church in Newgate-street, and borough schools for girls and infants in Well-way. The free grammar school, founded by Edward VI. in 1552, was until recently held in the old chantry chapel, near the bridge; but since the termination, in 1857, of the Chancery suit "the Attorney-General versus Trevelyan," which lasted for about 150 years, a new schoolhouse, with class-rooms and lecture-rooms adjoining, and head master's residence, has been erected in a situation overlooking the town, and was opened in 1859. The school has an extensive playground of nearly 4 acres.—The principal antiquities are the remains of the castle, with its entrance gate mentioned above, and traces of a Cistercian abbey at Newminster, founded in 1138 by Ranulph de Merlay, the site of which, at the Dissolution, was given to the Brandling family.—Turner, the botanist, Gibson, who wrote a herbal, and Morrison, the missionary and eminent Chinese scholar, were natives; and Horsley, author of "Britannia Romana," was a minister here.—The races, formerly held at Cottingwood, have been discontinued. Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on the 25th March and 25th October for cattle and horses, and on the Wednesday and two following days before Whitsuntide, and the Wednesday before the 22nd July; also a statute fair for hiring servants on the Wednesday before Martinmas.

MORPETH-CASTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Morpeth, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland. It is situated within the limits of the borough, and contains the hmlts. of Catchburn, Parkhouses, and Stobhill, also the site of the old castle.

MORRELL-ROOTHING, a hmlt. in the par. of White Roothing, hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex. It was formerly a distinct parish, but is now a hamlet united to White Roothing.

MORREY, a vil. in the par. of Yoxhall, co. Stafford, 5 miles E. of Rugeley.

MORREY, THE, a tnshp. in the par. of Adderley, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Market-Drayton.

MORRICK. See Morwick, co. Northumberland.

MORRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ipstones, N. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles N. of Cheadle.

MORRISTON, a vil. in the par. and hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles N. of Swansea, within which borough it is situated. It lies on Swansea Bay, near the mouth of the river Taw, and takes its name from the Morris family, by whom it was founded. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the copper works and potteries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £90. The church is a modern edifice.

MORRISTOWNBILLER, a par. in the bar. of Connell, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing part of the town of Newbridge, which is its post town. The par. is 3½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2½ miles. The surface, lying near the Bog of Allen, comprises a considerable portion of swamp. The arable soil is generally good. The river Liffey traces part of the E. boundary, and the road from Dublin to Limerick passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with another, £190, in the patron. of the crown. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1828. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Moorefield is the chief residence.

MORROWE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 6 miles S.W. of Wisbeach.

MORSTON, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile W. of Blakeney, 6 miles E. of Wells, and the same distance N.E. of Walsingham. Cley is its post town. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the coast, and has a coastguard station represented by a lieutenant and six men. A portion of the land is marshy, and the parish is bounded on the N. by the harbour of Blakeney. The greater part of the land is arable, but there are more than 400 acres of saltmarsh, and about 80 acres of unenclosed common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £280 8*s*. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Stiffkey, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower. The chancel is separated from the nave by a carved screen, the panelings of which are painted with portraits of the Apostles. The Marquis of Townshend is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

MORTE BAY, on the coast of Devonshire, a little to the N. of Barnstaple Bay. It is about 3 miles wide, and has anchorage in 5 fathoms water, but its approach is obstructed by the Morte Stone rock, with a dangerous tide-race.

MORTHEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Whiston, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Rotherham.

MORTHOE, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, co. Devon, 5 miles S.W. of Ilfracombe, its post town. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated near Morte-Point, on Morte Bay, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Osborough, Shatesborough, and Eastacott. Off the coast is a large isolated rock, called Morte Stone, from the numerous shipwrecks it has occasioned. The substratum contains a variety of slaty stone, which is quarried for building purposes. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380, besides 30 acres of glebe; the vicarial glebe comprises 16 acres, valued at £20 per annum. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £128, in the patron. of the dean and chapter, who are the impropriators. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church has an altar-tomb of Sir William de Tracey, one of Thomas-à-Becket's murderers, who, after that event, founded a chantry here, and ended his days in a hermitage at this place. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship, and there is a National school.

MORTIMER'S-CROSS, a tnshp. in the par. of Amestry, co. Hereford, 6 miles N.W. of Leominster. It is situated on the river Lug. At Kingslandfield is a pillar, bearing date 1799, erected on the spot where Henry VI. and the Lancastrians were defeated by Edward Mortimer in the interest of Edward IV.

MORTIMER-STRATFIELD, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Theale, co. Berks, but partly in that of Lower Holdshott, co. Hants, 8 miles S. by W. of Reading. It is a station on the Basingstoke branch of the Great Western railway. The parish, which is extensive, includes some patches of fir plantation and common. The village is considerable. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £941, and the vicarial for £244, besides 83 acres of impropriate glebe valued at £60, and 32 acres of vicarial glebe valued at £40. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £246, in the patron. of Eton College. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. The Independents have a place of worship. There are parochial schools supported by subscription. In the vicinity are remains of a Roman amphitheatre attached to the ancient station of Silchester.

MORTIMER, WEST-END, a tythg. in the par. of Mortimer-Stratfield, cos. Berks and Hants, 8 miles N. of Basingstoke.

MORTLACH, a par. in the co. Banff, Scotland. It includes the vil. of Dufftown, and the post-office vil. of its own name. It extends about 12 miles N.N.E. in length, with an extreme breadth of 8½ miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Boharm, Botriphnie, Glass, Cabrach, Inveravon, and Aberlour. The surface is hilly, but fertile. On the mountainous boundary to the S. are Coryhabbie Hill and Cook's Cairn; and on the W. side of the western glen is the gigantic Ben Rinnes, towering 2,765 feet above sea-level. The principal portion of the land under culture occurs along the banks of the rivers Fiddick and Dullan, by which the parish is watered. The soil near the rivers is of a loamy nature, but a large extent of the uplands is barren rock. The district includes the Craig of Balvenie, with its old castle, and the Giant's Chair on the river Dullan, with the little cascade called the "Linen Apron." The prevailing rocks are granite, slate, and limestone, which are extensively quarried. There are several mineral springs, also a petrifying spring. The village of Mortlach is distant about 9 miles S.W. of Keith. It is situated on the river Spey, under Ben-Rinnes, and was the seat of a diocese from 1010 till 1139, when David I. joined it to Aberdeen. Near Glenlivet the Earl of Huntley defeated Argyll in 1594; and in the neighbourhood are numerous memorials of Malcolm's victory, as Conval camp, pillar stones, cairns, &c. This par. is in the presb. of Strathbogie and synod of Moray, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £226. The parish church, which is of great antiquity, was restored and enlarged in 1829. There are a Free church, a Roman Catholic chapel, also a circulating library, parochial school, and other schools. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in January (old style), second Thursday in July, and third Thursdays in August and December.

MORTLAKE, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 2 miles E. of Richmond, and the same distance S.E. of Brentwood. It has stations on the Windsor and Richmond and Thames Valley branches of the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Thames, and on the road from London to Richmond, and includes part of Richmond park. On the banks of the Thames are many residences and villas. The parish contains East Sheen, also traces of Mortlake House, anciently the residence of the archbishops of Canterbury. Edward III. resided here in 1352, and Queen Elizabeth frequently visited Dr. Dee. There was a tapestry factory established here in 1616 by F. Crane, the first in England, but was destroyed in the time of the Civil War. An extensive trade is done in malting and brewing, and there is a small pottery for stoneware. There is a savings-bank for this parish and that of Barnes held in the vestry-room. A great part of the land is occupied by market gardens, in which asparagus is largely cultivated. A farm comprising 80 acres, on the Richmond side of the parish, was formerly the private property of George III. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Worcester, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £180, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an ancient stone and flint tower, square and embattled, and containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains an old font presented by Archbishop Bourchier in the reign of Henry VI., at which time the church was restored or rebuilt; also several brasses and monuments of persons of distinction, including Sir Philip Francis, Dr. John Dee, and John Partridge. The church was enlarged in 1860. The register dates from 1577. The parochial charities produce about £177 per annum, of which £47 goes to Lady Capel's school, and £45 to Juxon's almshouses, also Colston's almshouses. There are National, British, Roman Catholic, and infant schools, also an industrial school for girls intended for domestic service. The Independents and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. Cromwell House is a red brick mansion, erected on the site of General Ireton's house, where, it is said, Cromwell frequently held his councils; it was subsequently the seat of Edward Colston, the great benefactor to the city of Bristol, who during his lifetime expended above £70,000 in the support of various charitable institutions. A cemetery was opened here in 1859.

MORTLESTOWN, a par. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Cahir, its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and about 1 mile broad. The soil is good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Oughteragh, £209, in the patron. of the bishop. Ruins of the church are seen, likewise of three castles.

MORTOMLEY, a vil. in the tnshp. and par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Sheffield. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring collieries and iron works.

MORTON, a par. in the district of Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It comprises Thornhill, a burgh of barony, and the larger portion of the vil. of Carronbridge. It extends in length about 7 miles from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of 4 miles, and is bounded on the N.E. by the co. of Lanark, and on the other sides by the pars. of Closeburne, Penpont, and Durrisdeer. The surface is of a hilly nature, and comprises both pastoral and arable land. Where cultivated it is well enclosed and fertile. The lower district is traversed by the road from Glasgow to Dumfries, and by the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The vil. of Morton is distant 3 miles N.E. of Penpont, and within easy access of the Carron-bridge and Thornhill station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It is watered by the rivers Nith, Cample, and Carron; and near a small tributary of the Cample stand the ruins of Morton Castle, which belonged to Randolph in the reign of Robert Bruce. The ruins cover a space of 100 ft. by 30 ft. in area, and include parts of the corner towers, and the S. wall between 30 ft. and 40 ft. in height. The castle passed from the Randolphs to the Douglases, who take from hence the title of earl. This par. is in the presb. of Penpont, and synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £236. The parish church was erected in 1841; and at Thornhill is an United Presbyterian church. There are a parochial school, and several district schools.

MORTON, a post-office vil. in the par. of Libberton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Edinburgh. The principal residence is Morton Hall.

MORTON, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 3 miles N.E. of Alfreton, its post town, and 1 mile S.E. of the Stretton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the line of the Midland railway, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the joint tnshp. of Brackenfield and Woolley-Moor. The land is chiefly in pasture, and the surface elevated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £360, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge, and G. Turbutt, Esq., alternately. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is a structure with a square embattled and pinnated tower containing three bells. The church was rebuilt in 1850. The interior of the church has some monuments. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is an old chapel at Brackenfield dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

MORTON, a par. in the lib. of Southwell and wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 2 miles S.E. of Southwell, its post town, and 2 S.W. of the Fiskerton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Midland railway and the river Trent. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Bleasby, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Dennis, is a brick structure with a square embattled tower containing two bells. Richard Daybell, in 1695, bequeathed an annuity of £2 10*s.* towards a school for the vils. of Fiskerton and Morton.

MORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bingley, upper div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Bingley, its post town. It is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and contains the hmlts. of East and West Morton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The village of East Morton is considerable, and occupies the sides and summit of a hill; and that of West Morton is chiefly a cluster of houses on the N. bank of the river Aire. On the banks of the Morton Beck, a stream flowing by East Morton, are several worsted, cotton, and paper mills. There are several collieries and stone quarries in the township. The living is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of Morton-Banks annexed, in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £160, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern structure dedicated to St. Luke.

MORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ormsby, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Stokesley.

MORTON, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Helmsley.

MORTON. See MORETON, co. Salop.

MORTON, an ext. par. place in the lower div. of the hund. of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.W. of Lincoln.

MORTON, ABBOT'S. See ABBOT'S-MORETON, co. Worcester.

MORTON, ABOVE and BELOW, tnshps. in the par. of Ruabon, Bromfield hund., co. Denbigh, 5 miles N. of Chirk. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the iron and coal works. Morton Hall is the principal residence.

MORTON ANGLICORUM, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruabon as above.

MORTON-BAGGOTT, a par. in the Alcester div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 3½ miles S.W. of Henley-in-Arden, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1806. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £188. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

MORTON-BY-GAINSBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainsborough, hund. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1½ mile N.W. of Gainsborough, its railway station and post town. The village is situated on the river Trent. The Hull and Gainsborough steamers pass by the village. There are wharfs, corn-mills, and maltings, also a rope-walk. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a modern structure. There is an endowed parochial school. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The Gainsborough cemetery is in this neighbourhood. The Right Hon. Charles Tennyson D'Eyncourt is lord of the manor.

MORTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalton-le-Dale, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 1½ mile S.W. of Dalton, and 7 miles N.E. of Durham. It is a station on the Hartlepool and Sunderland railway. A colliery is worked here, and there are coke ovens. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a National school chiefly maintained by the Hetton Colliery Company.

MORTON-GRANGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles S.W. of East Retford, 2 W. of Houghton-le-Spring, and 6 N. by E. of Durham. There is a station of the North-Eastern railway at Fenhouses. The Durham and Sunderland line attains its highest elevation at this place, where was a fixed engine of 70 horse-power to work the trains of waggons over an inclined plane 2,427 yards in length; the Haswell and Durham branches also diverge from this place. The soil consists of clay. The Earl of Durham is lord of the manor.

MORTON-GRANGE, and GREAT and LITTLE MORTON, hmlts. in the par. of Babworth, co. Nottingham, 2 miles S.W. of East Retford.

MORTON-JEFFERIES, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 5½ miles S.W. of Bromyard, its post town, and 8½ N.E. of Hereford. The village is inconsiderable. It is situated near the Hereford and Bromyard turnpike road. The soil consists of a stiff clay. A portion of the surface is laid out in hop-grounds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £50, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church has a small tower containing two bells. The interior has monuments to the Westwood family.

MORTON, MAIDS'. See MAIDS'-MORETON, co. Bucks.

MORTON-NEAR-BOURN, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles N. of Bourn, its post town, and 8 E. of Corby railway station. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the Cardyke navigation. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hanthorpe. The living is a vic.* with that of Hacconby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a cruciform structure with a tower containing a clock and five bells. It has some painted windows, and has recently been restored. There are numerous charities distributed to the poor in bread and fuel. There is a free school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. The Marquis of Exeter is lord of the manor.

MORTON-ON-THE-HILL, or HELMINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles from Reepham, and 8 N.W. of Norwich. The village, which is of small extent, is situate on the river Wensum, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is varied and well wooded. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £179. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £168. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a circular tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. The Hall, which stands in a commanding position, is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds. Thomas French Berney, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MORTON-PALMS, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Skerne, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles E. of Darlington. It is situated on the Stockton railway.

MORTON-PINKNEY, a par. in the hund. of Greens-Norton, co. Northampton, 10 miles N. of Brackley, and 8 W. of Towcester. Banbury is its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, is chiefly agricultural. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. The manufacture of lace is carried on extensively. The soil is chiefly clay on a substratum of iron and sandstone. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1761. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £167, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure with a low embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The church was restored and the chancel rebuilt in 1845. The parochial charities produce about £22 10*s.* per annum. There is a National school supported by subscription. The Baptists have a place of worship. Edward Candler, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MORTON-TYNEMOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 7 miles N.W. of Darlington, and 3 from Gainford. It takes the suffix to its name from having belonged to Tynemouth Priory, in Northumberland.

MORTON-UPON-SWALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ainderby-Steeple, wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Northallerton. It contains the Ainderby station of the Northallerton, Bedale, and Leyburn railway. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the E. bank of the river Swale.

MORVA, a quarter in the par. of Nevern, co. Pembroke, 2 miles E. by N. of Newport.

MORVAH, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 6 miles N.W. of Penzance, its post town, and 4 from St. Just. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, and is wholly agricultural. The par. contains Castle-Chun, the most regular Danish fortification in the county, and near it is a cromlech. The soil consists of killas, with a subsoil of rock. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Madron, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, which was rebuilt in 1828, is a stone structure with a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font and numerous monuments. A Sunday-school is held in the church. There is a school for both sexes.

MORVAL, a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.E. of East Looe, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Liskeard. The village, which is small, is situated on the canal which joins the Looe river near its termination at this place, and is chiefly agricultural. Morval formerly belonged to the Glyns, Coades, and Sir Hugh de Morville, one of Thomas-à-Becket's murderers. The substratum abounds with limestone, which is extensively quarried and sent to Liskeard by the canal. From Tregarlin Torr, in this parish, a view is commanded of the winding vale of Morval, terminated in the distance by Bindon Hill, which rises to the height of 900 feet above the sea. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £333, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Wenn, and contains tombs of the Mayows of Bray, the Coades, and other families. The charities produce about £23, which go to Buller's almshouses and a school. John Francis Buller, Esq., is lord of the manor and proprietor of Morval House, an old seat. The other seats, called Polgover and Lydcott, are now converted into farmhouses.

MORVEN, or MOR-VHEAN, a mountain in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Logie Coldstone. It has an elevation of about 2,700 feet above the sea. There is also another mountain of the same name in co. Caithness, near Latheron, which has an elevation of 1,221 feet.

MORVERN, or MORVEN, a par. in the district of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland. It comprises a post-office station of the same name; it also includes the islands of Oransay and Carna in Loch-Sunart. It extends 20 miles in length from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 15, and is bounded on the S.W. by the Sound of Mull, on the N. by Loch Sunart, and on the E. and S.E. by Loch Linnhe. The surface is of a hilly nature, its highest elevation being the summit of Beneaddan 2,306 feet above the sea-level. There are numerous other mountains of less altitude. Its uplands are partially wooded, and a great portion of the land is occupied in grazing farms. The village of Morvern is situated about 13 miles N.W. of Oban. In the neighbourhood are Druidical stones, also Killundine and Dunian forts. On Loch Aline, near Loch Arienas, is Ardtornish Castle, a fortress of great antiquity. This par. is in the presb. of Mull and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £155. There are two parish churches, both of which are situated near the coast, and about 9 miles distant from each other. At Morven there are a Free Church preaching station, a Roman Catholic chapel, also three parochial schools, besides other schools. The parish derives its name from Mor earran, i.e. "the great division."

MORVIL, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 5 miles S. of Newport. Haverford-West is its post town. It is situated near Precelly Mountain. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £81. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

MORVILL, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of Stottesden hund., co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Bridgnorth, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the turnpike road from Bridgnorth to Much-Wenlock. The par. is intersected by the Marl Brook, and contains the chplry. of Aston-Eyre. It formerly had a cell to Shrewsbury Abbey. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a clayey subsoil. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1773. The living is a perpet. cur. with that of Aston Eyre annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £204. The church, dedicated to St. George, or, according to others, to St. Gregory, is an ancient structure with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, chiefly arising from property bequeathed by Thomas Burtes in 1631, one moiety to the minister, and the other to the poor. There is a school which is entirely supported by the Countess Granville. The Roman Catholics have a chapel at Aldenham Hall, which is a stone building, and is the principal residence.

MORWICK, or MORRICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Warkworth, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.W. of Warkworth, and 6 S.E. of Alnwick. It is situated on the river Coquet, near the coast. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of sand. Morwick Hall is the principal residence.

MORWICK WITH SCHOLES, a tnshp. in the par. of Barwick-in-Elmett, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Leeds. It is joined with Scholes.

MOSBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Eckington, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 1 mile from Eckington church, 5 miles N.E. of Dronfield, and 6 S.E. of Sheffield. It is situated near the line of the North Midland railway and the river Rother. The village, which stands on an elevated site on the road from Sheffield to Worksop by Barlborough, commands extensive views, and was anciently a Roman settlement. Wooden hoop measures are manufactured, also sickles. The inhabitants are partly employed in the neighbouring collieries. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists, also an endowed school for the free education of fifteen children.

MOSCROFT. See MOLESCROFT, co. York.

MOSE, or MEASE, a river of co. Leicester, rises near Gopsall Park, and joins the Trent at Croxall in Derbyshire.

MOSEDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Caldbeck, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Hesket-Newmarket.

MOSELEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bushbury, co. Stafford, 4 miles N. by E. of Wolverhampton. It is situated on the North-Western railway and Grand Junction canal. In the neighbourhood is Moseley-Court, an old mansion formerly the place of concealment of Charles II., which contains his bed, &c., in the original state.

MOSELEY, a chplry. in the par. of King's-Norton, upper div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 2 miles S. of Birmingham. It is a station on the Bristol and Birmingham section of the Midland railway. The village, which is considerable, is a suburb of Birmingham. It formerly belonged to the Greveses, a family which came over at the Conquest. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bromsgrove. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was enlarged in 1822. There are National and other schools. Moseley Hall is the principal residence.

MOSS, a tnshp. in the par. of Campsall, upper div. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Doncaster, and 7 W. by N. of Thorne.

MOSS BANK, a hmlt. in the par. of Prescot, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.E. of Prescot, and 1¾ mile N. of St. Helen's. It is a station on the Ormskirk, St. Helen's, and Widnes railway.

MOSSDALE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hawes, and par. of Aysgarth, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Hawes, and 54 N.W. of York. It is situated in the valley of the river Ure, near Hardrow Force.

MOSSER, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Brigham, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles S. of Cockermouth, its post town. The township, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Cocker, and is divided into two parts, called High and Low Mosser. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £44. The church, dedicated to St. Philip, has one bell. General Wyndham is lord of the manor.

MOSSGIEL, a hmlt. in co. Ayr, Scotland, near the town of Mauchline. Here is the farm where the poet Burns once resided, and wrote some of his best pieces.

MOSSHOUSES-WITH-WAITHAM, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, near Broughton.

MOSSLEY, a hmlt. in the district of Hartshead, and par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N. of Staleybridge, and 9 E. of Manchester. It is a station on the Manchester and Leeds section of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the Huddersfield canal, near the river Tame, and under Hartshead Pike. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cotton and woollen mills. Near Hartshead Pike is a lofty circular tower, surmounted by a spire. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £127, in the patron. of the Rector of Ashton. The church was built in 1755, and enlarged in 1786. There is a place of worship for New Connexion Methodists. Fairs are held on the 21st June, and the last Monday in October, for cattle.

MOSSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Astbury, co. Chester, 2 miles from Congleton, and 28 E. of Chester. It is situated in the vale of the Dane, near the Macclesfield canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £127, in the patron. of the Rector of Astbury. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

MOSS-SIDE, a post-office vil. in the grange of Drumtullagh, in the bar. of Cary, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Bushmills. There is a Presbyterian meeting-house. Fairs are held on the 13th February, and 21st May, July, and November.

MOSS-SIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S. of Manchester, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is neatly built. In 1837 an Act was obtained for laying out an ornamental park. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £600. The church is a modern edifice. There are National and other schools.

MOSS-SIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lytham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.E. of Lytham, and 5 S.W. of Kirkham. It is situated near the river Ribble's mouth. It is a station on the Lytham branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

MOSSTODLACH, a vil. in the par. of Speymouth, co. Elgin, Scotland, near Fochabers.

MOSSTOWER, a hmlt. in the par. of Eckford, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Jedburgh.

MOSSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W.S.W. of Dunleer, its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2½ miles. The soil is all good. The White river, and the road from Dunleer to Collon, traverse the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Collon, £374, in the patron. of the primate and Viscount Massereene. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Dunleer and Dromyn.

MOSSWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Belton, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N. of Epworth.

MOSTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster-Forum, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 3 miles S. of Crewkerne, its post town, and 3 N. of Beaminster. The parish is situated on the road from Bridport to Taunton. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in flax-spinning. Sir Alexander Hood was a native of this parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £169. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of South Perrot, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church was rebuilt in 1833, and has a square tower. In the old churchyard is a tomb of the Hood family. There is a Sunday-school. Thomas Hussey, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MOSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary-on-the-Hill, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 3 miles N. by W. of Chester. The township is of small extent. The only object of attraction is Moston Hall, which is situated in a wooded park. Richard Massey, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The Chester and Birkenhead railway is here carried over the Ellesmere canal by a viaduct of eleven arches, the central arch having a span of 50 feet.

MOSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Warmingham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2½ miles N.W. of Sandbach. It is situated near the line of the Manchester railway. The Trent and Mersey section of the Grand Trunk canal passes through the township.

MOSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.E. of Manchester. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Leeds railway and Rochdale canal. The poor have the benefit of a small bequest made by W. Langley in 1821.

MOSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanton-upon-Hine-Heath, Whitchurch div. of the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Wem. It is situated on the river Roden.

MOSTRIM, a par. in co. Longford, Ireland. See EDGEWORTHSTOWN.

MOSTYN. See THE MOSTYN, co. Flint.

MOTCOMBE, a par. in the lib. of Gillingham, West Shaston div. of co. Dorset, 2 miles S.W. of Shaftesbury, its post town, and 4 from Gillingham. The village, which is large and straggling, is chiefly agricultural. Market gardening is carried on. The land is chiefly in pasture. The parish is celebrated for the production of cheese. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £350, and the vicarial for £700. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, annexed, with those of East and West Stower, to the vic.* of Gillingham. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower, and was rebuilt in 1846. The register dates from 1676. A new church, of cruciform construction, with a square embattled tower, has been erected at Enmore Green. The register dates from 1843. The parochial charities produce about £49 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a school, adjoining the church at Motcombe, known as the Marchioness of Westminster's school. It was erected, and is entirely supported, by the Marquis of Westminster, who is lord of the manor. Motcombe House is the principal residence.

MOTE, a hill in the par. of Elsdon, co. Northumberland, 9 miles S.W. of Rothbury. It is situated on the line of the ancient Watling Street, and has two circular camps on it, where Roman inscriptions have been found.

MOTE, THE, a seat of the Earl of Romney in co. Kent, 1 mile S.E. of Maidstone. It is built partly out of the remains of the old mansion once occupied by Cardinal Pole, and has a pavilion in its grounds erected in 1799 by the volunteers, who were reviewed here by George III.

MOTE, THE, a seat of Earl Cowper, in co. Kent, 2 miles E. of Canterbury.

MOTHELL, a par. in the bar. of Upperthird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Carrick-on-Suir, its post town. It is 7 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 5 miles. The surface is mountainous, comprising in the S.W. part of the Commeragh range. The river Cladagh passes through the interior, as also does the road from Carrick-on-Suir to Kilthomas. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with others, £591. The church was built in 1817 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathgormuck. There are three day schools, also remains of an abbey said to have been founded in the 6th century, and dedicated to St. Brogan.

MOTHELL, a par. in the bars. of Fassadinin and Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Castlecomer. Leighlinbridge is its post town. The surface, which consists of a main block and a detached district, covers an area of 7,093 acres. The river Dinin flows on the E. and N. sides. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with others £450, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1794. The Roman Catholic chapel is in the detached district. There are a Sunday and several daily schools. The principal attraction here is the Dunmore Caves.

MOTHER BANK, between Spithead and Cowes, co. Hants. It is situated off the coast of the Isle of Wight, and is 2 miles long, with 3½ fathoms water, and has outside an anchorage in 5 fathoms.

MOTHERBY AND GILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Greystoke, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 6½ miles W. by S. of Penrith, and 12 E. of Keswick. The township is of small extent, and the soil chiefly clay. There is a mixed school. Henry Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MOTHERWELL, a vil. in the par. of Dalziel, co. Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Hamilton. It is a station on the Caledonian railway where the Clydesdale branch turns off to Glasgow. Motherwell derives its name from a celebrated well, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and styled the "Well of Our Lady." In the neighbourhood are iron works and numerous collieries. In the village are a Free church, a Primitive Methodist chapel, and numerous schools.

MOTHVEY, or MYDDVAI, or MYDDFAI, a par. in the hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles S. of Llandovery, its post town. It is situated on the river Sevin, between the rivers Fowey and Usk. It includes the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Mothvey. The surface is hilly. There is a lead mine. The principal mansions are Cilgwyn and Llwynywormwood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £103, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Michael. The interior has a tomb to Bishop Owen. In the churchyard are a sycamore 54 feet in diameter, and a yew 25 feet.

MORTRAY WATER, a small river in co. Fife, Scotland. It rises under Norman's Law, near Abdie, and joins the Eden at its mouth.

MOTTINGHAM, a hmlt. chiefly in the par. of Eltham, hund. of Blackheath, and lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, but partly in the par. of Chiselhurst, hund. of Ruxley, co. Kent, 3 miles S. of Woolwich, 1 mile S. of Eltham Church, and 8 S.E. of London. It is situated on the road leading from London to Bromley. The village, which is small, is under the jurisdiction of the Woolwich and Central Criminal Courts.

MOTTISFONT, a par. in the hund. of Thorngate, co. Hants, 4½ miles N. of Romsey, its post town, and 12 from Salisbury. It has a railway station at Dunbridge. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley on the river Anton, and is chiefly agricultural. Prior to the reign of Henry VII. Mottisfont was of some importance. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500. The living is a rect.* with the curs. of Lockerley and East Dean annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £900. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient flint and stone structure with a square wooden belfry containing five bells. The church is partly covered with ivy, and is adorned with several stained windows. The principal residence is Mottisfont Abbey, an ancient mansion erected on the site of an Austin priory founded by William de Briwere in the reign of Kng John. It was intended to have been suppressed by Henry VII., who procured a bull to that effect from Pope Alexander, but it continued till the Dissolution, when its revenues were valued at £167 15*s.* 8*d.* The site was given to Lord Sandys by Henry VIII. in exchange for Chelsea, in Middlesex.

MOTTISTON, a par. in the Isle of Wight, lib. of West Medina, co. Hants, 6 miles S.E. of Yarmouth, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Newport. The village, which is small in extent, is situated near Brixton Bay, in the south-western part of the island, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Chilton, and commands extensive views of the country and the English Channel. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Messetone, and formerly belonged to the Lisles, Chekes, Leighs, &c. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Shorwell annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £403. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a small, ancient, but partly modernised structure, with a square tower. The interior of the church contains inscriptions to the Bassett family. Pitt Place is the principal residence, near which is a Druid stone. Foundations of great extent, and other remains, have been discovered here. Sir John Cheke, tutor of Edward VI., was born at the Manor House in 1514. The chalk cliffs at Mottiston Down are 698 feet in height, affording a prospect of the surrounding country.

MOTTRAM-IN-LONGDENDALE, a par. and small town in the hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 10 miles from Manchester, its post town, 4 S.E. of Ashton-under-Lyne, and 7½ N.E. of Stockport. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The town is situated on the edge of the moorlands, near the river Etherow, or Mersey, which separates the parish on the S. from the county of Derby, while the river Tame divides it on the N. from Lancashire. The par., which is very extensive, contains the tnshps. of Hattersley, Hollingworth, Matley, Mottram, Newton, Stayley, Tintwistle, and Godley. This place, which was anciently called the lordship of Tintwistle, was, in the reign of Edward II., forfeited by Thomas Earl of Lancaster, to the crown, and subsequently came through the Hollands, Lovells, Stanleys, and Wilbrahams, to the Tollemaches. Previous to the commencement of the present century the parish was wholly agricultural, but has recently become one of the most flourishing manufacturing districts in this part of the country. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive cotton mills and calico print works at the Hodge and Broadbottom, built on the banks of the river Mersey, which is here crossed by a stone bridge of one arch. There are also within the parish several large manufactories of cotton and woollen goods, paper, and machinery, also some collieries, and a foundry for smelting iron ore, which abounds in the S.W. portion of the parish. Mottram-Hill and Cat-Tor, both in the township, afford views of the surrounding country, including the vale of Longdendale with the windings of the Mersey, and the Derby, Cheshire, and Yorkshire hills. The substratum abounds in coal, slate, building stone, and iron ore, all of which are worked. The soil in the higher parts is rocky, but in the valleys a rich loam, alternating with clay and gravel. The town of Mottram is situated on a steep hill at the western extremity of the vale of Longdendale, and consists principally of one broad and well-paved street. In the immediate vicinity are numerous small hamlets and mills stretching along the bank of the river Mersey, which expands into a broad stream about a mile and a half from the town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £219, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, which is situated on a hill, is a structure of pebbly stone, with a lofty, square, embattled tower. It has been rebuilt on the foundation of a still more ancient edifice, and is dedicated to St. Michael. In the interior are some ancient monuments and sepulchral chapels belonging respectively to the manors of Hollingworth and Stayley, also an old stone font, and tombs of Serjeant Bretland, "Old Roe and his wife," &c. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. St. Mary's, Newton; St. Paul's, Stayley; Christ Church, Tintwistle; St. John's, Godley-cum-Newton-Green; St. James's, Millbrook, and the ancient chapel of Woodhead, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £200 to £90. The parochial charities produce about £150 per annum. There is an endowed grammar school, founded in 1620 by Robert Garsett and Sir Richard Wilbraham, which has an income of £90 from lands and rent-charges. The Independents, Wesleyans, Moravians, and New Connexion Methodists have places of worship within the parish. There are also National and denominational schools. In the parish are traces of Bucton Castle, supposed to be of British origin, and near the old parsonage-house intrenchments resembling those of a Roman station.

MOTTRAM ST. ANDREW, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 4½ miles N.W. of Macclesfield. The village is small, but neatly built. There is a National school.

MOUGHTREY, or MOCHTRE, a par. in the hund. and co. of Montgomery, 3 miles S.W. of Newtown, its post town and nearest railway station, and 9 from Llanidloes. It is situated on a branch of the river Derwent, not far from the river Severn, and on the Caer Sws Roman way to Abbey Cwmhêr. It comprises the tnshps. of Moughtreyllan and Eskirgilog. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £86, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to All Saints.

MOUGHTREYLLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Moughtrey, hund. and co. of Montgomery, 3 miles S.W. of Newtown.

MOULD-GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Dalton, and par. of Kirk-Heaton, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Huddersfield. It is situated near a branch of the river Calder.

MOULDSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 3 miles N.E. of Tarvin, and 9 N.E. of Chester. It is situated near Delamere Forest. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists, in which a Sunday-school is held. J. France, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MOULIN, a par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Pitlockrie, Moulin, and Kinnaird. It extends about 16 miles S.W. in length, with an extreme breadth of 8½ miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Blair-Atholl, Kirkmichael, Dowally, Logierait, and Dull. Its surface is of a hilly nature, the highest point being the pyramidal Benvrackie; the other hills are of less altitude, and are mostly clothed in heath. The best cultivated portion of the land is in the How of Moulin, a space 1½ mile long by one half broad, which is moderately even, and has been called the Garden of Atholl. Granite, millstone, and limestone exist, but are not extensively worked. In the parish are four distilleries, a brewery, corn-mill, dye works, and three saw-mills. The parish is traversed by two roads, which are connected by a third road; one of them leads up the valley of the Tumel and the Garry, while the other passes up the Ardle and the Briarachan. The village of Moulin is distant about 5 miles from Logierait, and 23 N. of Perth. It is situated on the river Tumel, at its confluence with the Garry and Briarachan. At Killiecrankie Pass is "Tomh Clavers," where Claverhouse was killed in 1689 at the moment of victory. In the neighbourhood are Druidical stones, and the ruins of the ancient castle of Letochbeg, a seat of the Cummings, measuring 76 feet by 80, including part of a turret, &c. This par. is in the presb. of Dunkeld and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister has a stipend of £150. The parish church, which stands in the village of Moulin, has a tower, and was erected in 1831. There is a Free church, also a parochial school, besides other schools. An annual fair for the sale of horses, seed, corn, &c., is held on the first Tuesday in March.

MOULINE, an ancient par., now joined to Johnston, co. Dumfries, Scotland.

MOULSEY. See MOLESEY, co. Surrey.

MOULSFORD, a par. in the hund. of Moreton, co. Berks, 4 miles S.W. of Wallingford. It is situated near the Thames, and on the line of the Great Western railway. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £225. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £60. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a village school.

MOULSHAM, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, three-quarters of a mile S.W. of Chelmsford. The village, which is considerable, may be considered a suburb of Chelmsford. It formerly belonged to Westminster Abbey, and was given at the dissolution of monasteries to the Mildmay family, who still reside at Moulsham Hall, which was rebuilt by Leoni for Earl Fitzwalter. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £200, in the patron. of the Rector of Chelmsford. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern structure, containing 540 sittings, 300 of which are free. There are National schools. In 1850 several Roman antiquities were found here.

MOULSOE, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Newport-Pagnell, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the summit of a hill near the river Ouzel, and on the road from London to Northampton. At Moulsoe Wood is a meet for the Oakley hounds. The parish is wholly agricultural, but is connected with Newport-Pagnell by the Grand Junction canal. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 150 acres of woodland. The soil is a strong loam, alternating with clay. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1802. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower. There is a free school, endowed with a rent-charge of £14 per annum bequeathed by the Countess-Dowager of Northampton. Lord Carrington is lord of the manor.

MOULTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2½ miles S.E. of Northwich. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the Grand Junction railway and the river Weaver. There are extensive salt-works belonging to the Newbridge Salt Company. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Moulton Hall, formerly the seat of the Bostock family, is the principal residence. John Hoskin Harper, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor.

MOULTON, a par. in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 5 miles E. of Spalding railway station, and 3 W. of Holbeach. It is a station on the Norwich and Spalding branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural. It is situated about half a mile to the S. of the road from Spalding to Lynn. The par. includes the hmlts. of Austindyke, Eangates, and Seasend. It is celebrated for its production of honey. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1793. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £456. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower, surmounted by a spire 180 feet in height, containing five bells. There is also a district church called Moulton chapel, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £90. The parochial charities produce about £690, of which £500 goes to Harrox's free grammar school, founded in 1561, the management of which has recently been invested in 12 governors. There are two almshouses for widows, who receive £10 per annum in coals and money. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Lord Boston is lord of the manor, which once belonged to Thomas de Multon, one of the barons who signed Magna Charta in the reign of John.

MOULTON, a par. in the hund. of Walsham, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of Loddon, 2 N. of the Cantley railway station, and 2½ S. of Acle, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is irregularly built, and wholly agricultural. About half the land is arable, and the remainder meadow and marshy grounds. The old hall, which is situated near the church, is surrounded on three sides by a moat. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £177. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a circular tower. In the chancel is a monument to the Anguish family. The register dates from 1570. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum, chiefly arising from land allotted to the parish under an Enclosure Act. Lady C. Melville is lady of the manor.

MOULTON, a par. in the hund. of Spelhoe, co. Northampton, 4 miles N. of Northampton, its post town, and 8 W. of Wellingborough. The village, which is of large extent, is chiefly agricultural. It is situated near the river Nen, and includes the ext. par. place of Moulton Park. The surface is generally flat, and the soil a stiff clay alternated with red sand. The land is nearly all arable. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £391. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone edifice, with a square tower, which has recently been made higher. The parochial charities produce about £120 per annum, besides cottages for the poor. There are National schools for both sexes, also schools for the instruction of girls in making lace. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Moulton Grange and Thorplands are the principal residences.

MOULTON, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Newmarket, its post town, and 2 S. of the Kennet station on the Cambridge and Bury branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Lark, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is sandy, and the subsoil gravel with chalk. An Enclosure Act was passed in 1839. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £587. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £477, in the patron. of Christ College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure, with a lofty tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £111 per annum, chiefly the produce of the poor's land. There is a free school for both sexes, erected in 1849 at the expense of the rector, by whom it is entirely supported. Moulton Paddocks is the principal residence. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

MOULTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton-Tyas, wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.W. of Middleton-Tyas, and 4½ miles N.E. of Richmond. It is a station on the Richmond and Darlington branch of the North-Eastern railway. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of High and Low Gaterley. There is a small chapel-of-ease, with a tower containing one bell. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

MOULTON-CHAPEL, a chplry. in the par. of Moulton, wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N.E. of Crowland, and 6 S.E. of Spalding. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Moulton. The church, which was erected in 1722, is a small edifice of an octagonal form.

MOULTON, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Moulton, hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 3 miles W. by S. of St. Mary-Stratton. It was formerly a distinct parish, but is now united to Great Moulton. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a discharged rect., valued in the king's books at £4 3*s.* 1½*d.* The church was demolished in 1570. The site of the ancient church is called the Sanctuary.

MOULTON-PARK, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Spelhoe, co. Northampton, 2 miles S.W. of Moulton.

MOULTON ST. MICHAEL, or MOULTON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 3 miles W. by S. of Long-Stratton, 2 S. of the Forncett station on the Ipswich and Norwich railway, and 2 N. of the Tivetshall railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. It includes the hmlt. of Little Moulton, which was a separate parish previous to 1570. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £453. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £440. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower surmounted by an octagonal lantern. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. There is a National school. John Moulton, a Carmelite preacher, who flourished about 1400, was born in this parish. Thomas and Edwards Betts, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

MOUNDS, a bog in co. Kildare, Ireland, 2 miles N. by W. of Newbridge.

MOUNT, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N. of Cardigan, its post town. It is situated on the coast near Mount Bank. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £55. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross.

MOUNT, a prefix to the names of many places in the United Kingdom, the chief of which will be found below; but besides these, there are numerous private seats and clusters of cottages too insignificant to require a separate notice.

MOUNTAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangathen, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles W. of Llandilofawr.

MOUNTAIN ASH, a station on the Aberdare branch of the Taff Vale railway.

MOUNTAIN, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Pentrobbin, co. Flint, 1 mile S.E. of Mold.

MOUNTAIN RIVER, a feeder of the Blackwater, rises in the Slieve Beagh hills, co. Monaghan, Ireland.

MOUNT-BELLEW, a post-office vil. in the par. of Moylough, bar. of Killian, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Newtown Bellew. It is situated on the road from Ballinasloe to Tuam. Mount Bellew is the seat of Sir Christopher Bellew. There is a Franciscan friary.

MOUNT BENGER, a demesne in the co. of Selkirk, Scotland, 9 miles W. of Selkirk. It is situated near St. Mary's Loch, and was once the property of Hogg, the Ettrick poet.

MOUNTBOLUS, a vil. in the par. of Killoughy, in the bar. of Ballyboy, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E.N.E. of Frankford. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and police station.

MOUNT BURES. See BURES MOUNT, co. Essex.

MOUNTCASHELL, or THE ROCK OF CASHEL, co. Tipperary, Ireland. It gives title of earl and viscount to the Moores of Moore Park.

MOUNT CHARLES, a post-office vil. in the par. of Inver, bar. of Bannagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles W.S.W. of Donegal, and 147 from Dublin. It is situated in an elevated spot on the road from Donegal to Killybegs, and contains a police station and a dispensary within the Donegal Poor-law Union. Mount Charles Hall is the seat of the Marquis of Conyngham, who is the proprietor, and takes from hence the title of viscount. Fairs are held on the 18th January, 20th February, 28th March, 20th April, 5th May, 9th June, 22nd July, 18th August, 22nd September, 22nd October, 18th November, 20th December.

MOUNT EAGLE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Dingle. In the vicinity is Eagle Hill, which attains an elevation of 745 feet, and where the rare fern Trichomanes speciosum has been found.

MOUNT EAGLE, a mountain of co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles N. by E. of Newport. It has an elevation of 1,390 feet above sea-level, and gives title of Baron Monteagle to the Marquis of Sligo.

MOUNT EDGECUMBE, the demesne of Earl Mount Edgecumbe, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Plymouth. The mansion is a square pile with corner towers, and commands a view of the Sound, with Plymouth harbour and Dartmoor Forest. It has a grand hall in the centre, and contains numerous portraits of illustrious persons, as Charles I., Prince Rupert, the famous Duke of Monmouth, William III., &c. In the grounds are an orangery, alcove, and a fort built at the time of the Armada.

MOUNTFIELD, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Netherfield, but partly in that of Staple, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 3 miles S. of Robert's Bridge railway station, and 3½ N. of Battle. Hurst Green is its post town. The village, which is situated on the road from London to Hastings, is of small extent and chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating and in parts richly wooded. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The substratum abounds in blue and grey limestone. There are traces of an ancient iron furnace. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170, and the vicarial for £210. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £189. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower surmounted by a spire. There is a National school for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Mountfield Court and Rushton Park are the principal residences. The latter is situated on rising ground, with pleasure gardens 5 acres in extent. The house is supplied with gas made within the grounds. The Earl of Ashburnham, William Rushton Adamson, Esq., and E. C. Egerton, Esq., M.P. are lords of the manor.

MOUNT GRACE, a vil. in the par. of East Harlsey, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Northallerton. It is situated in a secluded spot with the ruins of a church and Lady chapel of a Carthusian priory founded by Thomas de Holland, Duke of Surrey, in Richard II.'s time. Its revenues at the Dissolution were valued at £382 5*s.* 11*d.*

MOUNT HAWK, a hmlt. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N. of Redruth. It is situated in a mining district. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

MOUNT-HEALY, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles S.E. of Rothbury. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MOUNT LEINSTER, a mountain in co. Carlow, Ireland, 6 miles E. by N. of Borris. It attains an elevation of 2,610 feet above the sea-level.

MOUNTMELLICK, a post and market town, partly in the par. of Ardea, bar. of Portnahinch, and partly in the par. of Rosenallis, bar. of Tinnahinch, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Maryborough and 50 from Dublin. It is situated on the Royal canal and a small stream called the Oweness. It contains the parish church of Rosenallis, four chapels, two meeting-houses belonging to the Society of Friends, schools, courthouse, a dispensary within the Mountmellick Poor-law Union, also a branch bank, breweries, soap factories, tanneries, potteries, and union workhouse. The town enjoys a brisk general trade, and is a seat of manufacture. It has a chief police station, and petty sessions are held at the courthouse. The Poor-law Union contains 16 electoral divisions in King's and Queen's counties. Wednesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on 1st February, 17th March, 2nd May, 20th June, 26th August, 29th September, 1st November, and 11th December.

MOUNTNESSING, or MOUNTNESSING-STREET, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 3 miles N.E. of Brentwood, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Ingatestone station on the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on a branch of the river Wid, and is chiefly agricultural. There are remains of Thoby Priory, founded by Michael Capra in 1141 for Augustine canons. It was dedicated to SS. Mary and Leonard, and at the Dissolution had a revenue of £75 6*s.* 10*d.* The refectory and two arches of the cloisters are all that are now remaining. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £210 with 13 acres of glebe, and the vicarial 21 acres valued at £22 per annum. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £90. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. On the S. side is a small chantry chapel containing several inscriptions. The parochial charities produce about £53 per annum, of which £30 goes to a school founded by Richard Beyley in 1743.

MOUNT-NORRIS, a post-office vil. in the par. of Loughgilly, bar. of Lower Orior, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of Markethill. It is situated on the road from thence to Newry, and has a Presbyterian meeting-house. A fort was built here by General Norris in the time of Elizabeth, which was given to Bishop Usher by Charles I. Fairs are held on the second Monday in every month.

MOUNT-NUGENT, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilbride, bar. of Clonmahon, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 15 miles S.E. of Cavan, and 57 from Dublin. It contains the parish church, a police station, where petty sessions are held, also a dispensary within the Oldcastle Poor-law Union. Fairs are held on 1st May and 1st June.

MOUNTON, a par. in the upper div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 1 mile S.W. of Chepstow, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on a small rivulet which runs into the Bristol Channel at the mouth of the Severn. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £87. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

MOUNTON, or MONCKTON, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S.W. of Narberth, its post town. There is no village, only two or three farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Narberth, in the dioc. of St. David's.

MOUNT ORGUEIL, an eminence near Grouville Bay, Jersey, Channel Islands, 4 miles E. by N. of St. Heliers. On its summit is the old castle built by Robert Curthose and restored by Elizabeth. It was taken by the French in the reign of Henry VI., and was made the prison of Prynne in that of Charles I.

MOUNT PLEASANT, a vil. in the par. of Abdie, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Newburgh. It is situated on the Frith of Tay, under the Ochills.

MOUNT PLEASANT, a hmlt. in the par. of Tottenham, hund. of Edmonton, co. Middlesex, 1½ mile S.W. of Tottenham Cross, and 5½ miles N. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated near Crouch End and Wood Green. The New River and the Great Northern railway pass in the vicinity.

MOUNT PLEASANT, a station on the Dublin and Belfast Junction railway, 4 miles from Dundalk. There are also numerous other small places of this name in various parts of Ireland.

MOUNT PRIORY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Little Haywood, pars. of Colwich and Stowe, co. Stafford, 5 miles S.E. of Stafford. It is situated near the river Trent and Grand Trunk canal.

MOUNTRATH, a post and market town in the par. of Clonenagh, in the bar. of West Maryborough, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles W.S.W. of Maryborough, and 59 from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on a small tributary of the river Nore, and on the road from Dublin to Limerick. Here are the parish church, four chapels, a nunnery, monastery, bridewell, schools, market house, mills, brewery, and a dispensary, which last is in the Mountmellick Poor-law Union, also a chief police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. There is a brisk general trade carried on, besides some cotton weaving. The town owes its foundation to the Coote family in 1628, who took the title of earl from it. Forest House is the principal seat in the vicinity. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 17th February, 8th May, 20th June, 10th August, 19th September, and 6th November.

MOUNT-SHANNON, a demesne of the Earl of Clare, co. Limerick, Ireland. It is situated at Newtown Perry, W. side of Limerick.

MOUNT-SHANNON, a post and market vil. in the par. of Inishcaltra, bar. of Leitrim, co. Galway, prov.

of Connaught, Ireland, 40 miles S.E. of Galway, and 123 from Dublin. It stands on the road from Scarriff to Portumna, near Lough Derg. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, market house, and police station, where petty sessions are held. Fairs are held on 28th February, May, August, and November.

MOUNT'S BAY, in the S.W. div. of co. Cornwall, near Penzance, where is a pier, harbour, and lighthouse. The bay is nearly 18 miles across from the Lizard to Penwith Point, and is 8 miles deep, with from 3 to 30 fathoms water. It derives its name from St. Michael's Mount, situated off Marazion. Actynolite is found in the felspar rocks which bound its coasts.

MOUNTSORREL, a market town and chplry. in the pars. of Rothley and Barrow-upon-Soar, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester. 4 miles S. of Loughborough, 7 N. by. W. of Leicester, and 1½ mile W. of the Sileby and Barrow stations of the Midland Counties railway. It comprises the two tnshps. of Mountsorrel North End in the parish of Barrow-upon-Soar, and that of South End in the parish of Rothley. The town is situated on the western bank of the river Soar, which has been made navigable to Loughborough, and is here crossed by an old bridge of four arches. It consists chiefly of one main street containing several good houses built of red and grey syenite, or granite, with which material the streets are also paved. It contains a small market-house with a cupola and an entablature of freestone, supported by eight cylindrical columns, built by the late Sir John Danvers, who removed the old market cross which stood on its site to his park at Swithland. The inhabitants in 1861 were 1,597, of whom many were employed in the Mountsorrel granite works, or in the neighbouring quarries, which are excavated in the range of hills extending from Charnwood Forest, and from which vast quantities of stone are sent to the metropolis and other parts of the kingdom, and from which a branch line has been made to the main line. Stocking-weaving and the manufacture of bobbin-net lace are still carried on, but worsted spinning has become extinct since the application of steam-power. Overhanging the town is Castle Hill, rising precipitously to the height of 100 feet, and on which formerly stood a castle occupied by the barons in the wars of John's reign, but subsequently dismantled by Henry III. Courts leet and baron are held every Michaelmas by the Earl of Lanesborough, who is lord of the manor, also a court of pleas for the hunds. of East and West Goscote, of which the earl is lord. The livings of North End and South End are both perpet. curs.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, the former val. £157, and the latter £130. The church at North End, called the Old Church, is an ancient edifice with a square parapeted tower containing three bells, and is dedicated to St. Peter. The church at South End, called Christ Church, is a modern structure, with a tower surmounted by a spire, and containing one bell. It was erected in 1844 at a cost of about £6,000, defrayed by Miss Brinton. The Wesleyans, Association Methodists, and General Baptists have chapels, in which last edifice the celebrated Nonconformist divine, Dr. Watts, used occasionally to officiate. There is a free school for twelve boys, founded and endowed by Sir. Joseph Danvers in 1742, also National schools for boys and girls, and an infant school, built in 1847 at the cost of the Countess of Lanesborough. There are several parochial and other charities bequeathed to the inhabitants of Mountsorrel. The Earl of Lanesborough is lord of the manor. Monday is market day. A fair of nine days is held in July.

MOUNT-STEWART, a seat of the Marquis of Bute, in co. Bute, Scotland. It is situated on the E. coast.

MOUNT-STEWART, a seat of the Marquis of Londonderry, co. Down, Ireland, near Grey Abbey. It has a view of Loch Strangford.

MOUNT-TALBOT, a post-office vil. in the par. of Tisrara, bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles S.S.W. of Roscommon. It is situated on the river Suck, which is here spanned by a bridge. It contains the church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a police station, where petty sessions are held. Mount Talbot House is the seat of W. Talbot, Esq., the proprietor of the village. Fares are held on 8th May, 14th June, 1st November, and 21st December.

MOUNT TEMPLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ballyloughloe, bar. of Clonlonan, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W.N.W. of Moate. Here are a church, Roman Catholic chapel, and police station. Mount Temple House is the principal residence.

MOUNT TEVIOT LODGE, a seat of the Marquis of Lothian, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Jedburgh. It is situated near the Waterloo Tower.

MOUNT-VENUS, a hmlt. in the par. of Cruagh, bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Dublin. Mount-Venus House is the principal residence.

MOURNE, a bar. of co. Down, prov. Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by Upper Iveagh, Lough Carlingford, and the sea. Its area is 47,883 acres, and it contains the par. and town of Kilkeel. It is traversed by the Mourne range of mountains between Carlingford and Dundrum bays, the highest point of which, called Slieve Donard, attains an elevation of 2,800 feet above the sea-level. Imbedded in the rocks, which are chiefly granite and slate, many beryls resembling emeralds are found.

MOURNE, a river of co. Tyrone, Ireland. It is formed by the junction of the Stride and Owenkillow rivulets, and, after being joined by the Derg, unites its waters with those of the Foyle at Lifford, turning many mills in its course.

MOURNEABBEY, or BALLINAMONA, a par. in the bars. of Barretts and Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Mallow, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 5 broad. The soil is mostly good. The small stream Cladagh effects the drainage. The par. is intersected by the road from Cork to Limerick. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £427, in the patron. of the crown. It contains a church and a Roman Catholic chapel; the latter is united to that of Granaugh. There are two or three daily schools, and ruins of a preceptory for Knights Templars founded in the time of King John by Alexander de Sancta Helena. This place, under the name of Ballinamona, appears to have once been a corporation, and to have been walled round. It was a possession of the M'Carthys, who were overpowered by the Earl of Ormonde in 1571, and forfeited their estates in 1641.

MOURNE, LOUGH, two small lakes of this name in Ireland; one in co. Antrim, near Carrickfergus, the other in co. Donegal, forming the source of the Mourne Beg rivelet, which joins the Derg at Foggy Hill.

MOUSA, an island in the par. of Dunrossness, Shetland Islands, Scotland, 10 miles S. by W. of Lerwick. It is situated on the E. side of Mainland, near the coast of Sandwick, and extends in length from N. to S. 2 miles by about 1½ mile in breadth; it is chiefly in sheep-walks, and has but two houses. On the island is an interesting Scandinavian fortress, called the Burgh of Mousa, built of unhewn blocks of schistose stone, fitted together without cement. It is about 42 feet high, and about 50 feet in diameter at the base, bulging out below, and tapering off towards the top. The only entrance is by a low, narrow doorway opening into a passage 15 feet deep, which communicates with the open area in the centre.

MOUSDALE, or LADY ISLAND, in co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated in Loch Linnhe, on the S.W. side of Lismore Island, and has a lighthouse on it 103 feet above high water, put up in 1833.

MOUSE, a river of co. Lanark, Scotland, rises near Wilsontoun, and, passing under Cartland Crags, joins the Clyde near Lanark.

MOUSEHOLD or MOUSEWOLD HEATH, an elevated spot outside the city of Norwich, co. Norfolk, 1 mile E. of Norwich. It commands a view of the city, and derives its name from the numerous caves made by digging for chalk clunch used by builders. It is particularly interesting on account of its historical associations connected with the rebellion of Ket, who kept his "state" under the Oak of Reformation in the grounds of Mount Surrey House, a seat of the Duke of Norfolk, which he burned, and the remains of which are still known as "Ket's Castle." The heath is now partly enclosed to form Thorpe Park.

MOUSEHOLE, a vil. in the par. of Paul, hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Penzance. It is situated on the western shore of Mount's Bay, in the English Channel, and is a coastguard station, and seat of an extensive pilchard and mackerel fishery. The village, sometimes called Porth Enys, was formerly of more importance than at present, and had a market and quay, the latter constructed in 1392. It continued to flourish till 1595, when, with the adjoining village of Newlyn, it was burnt by the Spaniards, since which time its market and fair have been discontinued. The inhabitants are now chiefly supported by the fishing, in which about eighty seine-boats are employed belonging to the port. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. On St. Clement's Island, opposite to the village, Leland mentions in his time a chapel, and on the extreme verge of the shore was another chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, which was washed away by the sea in 1414.

MOUSE ISLAND, an islet in the lower lake of Killarney, co. Kerry, Ireland.

MOUSE ISLANDS, a cluster of islets, or rocks, on the N. coast of Anglesea, comprising East, Middle, and West Mouse, with several smaller rocks.

MOUSE SANDS, a bank at the mouth of the river Thames, co. Essex, 8 miles E. of Shoeburyness. It is marked by a fixed light on the W. side, put up in 1838, which is visible for 10 miles.

MOUSON, or MOWSON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S. of Belford. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. In this township are vestiges of a Roman camp.

MOUSWALD, or MOSWALD, a par. in co. Dumfries, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of Dumfries, and 10 W. by. N. of Annan. It is situated in that district formerly called the Stewartry of Annandale, midway between the rivers Nith and Annan, and was anciently covered with wood, as its name implies, "The Wood near the Moss." It is bounded by the pars. of Lochmaben, Dalton, Rothwell, and Torthorwald, and contains the post-office vil. of its own name, and the hmlts. of Old Brocklehurst and Cleughbrae. It is about 5 miles in length, with a mean breadth of 2 miles, comprising an area of 8½ square miles. The surface is mostly level, with some rising grounds, but the ascent of which is so moderate as to admit of cultivation to their very summits. The soil is in general light and sandy, except in the eastern part, where it is a rich loam, and in the S., which is occupied by Lochar Moss, comprising 8,828 acres. There are some thriving natural woods and extensive plantations, but the land is in general arable, the proportion of cultivated to unreclaimed being as 33 to 10. The only rivers are the Lochar-water, which touches the parish on the S.W., and the Wath-burn, which enters it from the N. and flows along the western boundary to its confluence with the Lochar. The prevailing rock formations are greywacke and clay slate, and the fuel in general use is peat. The village of Mouswald stands on the road from Dumfries to Annan, about 7 miles from the former, and is wholly agricultural. The principal mansion is Rock Hall, the seat of Sir Alexander Grierson, Bart., who, with seven other proprietors, claims the whole of the land. The parish is traversed by the Glasgow and South-Western railway, and by the coach roads from Dumfries to Annan and Ruthwell. The par. is in the presb. of Lochmaben and synod of Dumfries. The minister's stipend is £250, besides a glebe valued at £20. The original church was dedicated to St. Peter, but a modern edifice has been built on a conspicuous site near the village. In the church is a very ancient circular stone font described in "Archæologia," vol. ii. p. 106, also a monument to Sir Simon Carruthers, "the belted knight" and laird of Mouswald, whose seat was the border fortress of Mouswald Mains, sometimes called The Place, but now in ruins. There are parochial and other schools. The ruinous castle of Lag, once the seat of the Grierson family, stands in a deep, narrow ravine called the Glen of Lag, and was anciently surrounded by a lake, which is now a marsh. There are also several cairns, and traces of ancient British camps, one of which, at Burron-hill, is surrounded by a strong double fosse.

MOVEEN, a vil. in co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Kilkee. It was almost depopulated in the famine of 1848.

MOVIDDY, a par. in the bar. of East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.N.W. of Bandon. Crookstown is its post town. It is 4½ miles long by 3 broad. The soil is of medium quality. The river Bride passes through part of the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £432, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a church and a Roman Catholic chapel, the latter united to the chapels of Cannaway and Kilmurry. There are three or four day schools. Ryecourt is the chief seat. Castlemore is an old seat of the MacSweenys.

MOVILLE ABBEY, a ruin in co. Down, Ireland, near Newtown Ards. It consists of the remains of a church belonging to the Austin friary founded here by St. Finian, and given to the Claneboys at the suppression of religious houses.

MOVILLE, LOWER, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Inishowen, East, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par. is 5 miles long by 4½ broad. The surface lies along the coast of Lough Foyle. The interior is mostly mountainous, with an inferior soil. The coast is bold and rocky, and is indented by several small creeks, including Kinigoe Bay, where are the Inishowen lights. The town is situated on the coast of Lough Foyle, and on the road from Inishowen Head to Londonderry, 30 miles N.E. of Letterkenny, and 162 from Dublin. It is a police and coastguard station, and a bathing place. It has a neat and cleanly appearance, with good accommodation for visitors. A pier was constructed here in 1850. Petty sessions are held once a month. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £415, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands near the coast, was erected at the end of the 18th century. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Ballymacrag and Ballybrack. There is also a Presbyterian meeting-house in the parish. Moville Lodge and Summer Hill are the principal residences. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 28th January, April, July, and October.

MOVILLE, UPPER, a par. in the bar. of Inishowen East, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Moville, its post town. It is 8 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3½ miles. The surface comprises a good deal of mountain land, with a bold coast line. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £476, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1741. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Lower Moville; also several Sunday and day schools in the parish. Redcastle and Churchhill are the two principal seats. There are some remains of an abbey said to have been founded previous to 590, and demolished in 1688.

MOW-COP. See MOLE-COP, co. Stafford.

MOWNEY, a par. in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Killenaule, its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1 mile broad. The soil is of superior quality. The road from Littleton to Mullinahone traverses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Lismullen, £785, in the patron. of the bishop. Wilford and Fortfield are the chief seats.

MOWSLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Knaptoft, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Market-Harborough, its post town, and 2 N. of Theddingworth railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It is situated near the Grand Union canal, which passes to the S. The land is hilly, and principally in pasture. The tenants are exempt from tolls at markets and fairs. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1788. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Knaptoft, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small ancient structure, with a turret containing one bell. There are places of worship for the Baptists and Independents. A court is held twice yearly for the Duchy of Lancaster at the Staff of Life inn. The manor belongs to the crown.

MOWSON. See Mouson, co. Northumberland.

MOWTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Terrington, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of New Malton.

MOXBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Morton-in-the-Forest, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 4 miles E. of Easingwold. A Benedictine nunnery formerly stood here, founded by Henry II. prior to 1167. It had at the Dissolution a revenue of £32 6*s.* 2*d.*, and was given to the Archbishop of York.

MOXHALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Whishaw, Birmingham div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 4 miles N. by W. of Coleshill. It is situated on the road to Tamworth, near the Fazeley canal, and formerly belonged to the Lisles and Hackets. Moxhall Hall is the principal residence.

MOXLEY, a vil. in the par. of Wednesbury, hund. of South Offlow, co. Stafford, 8 miles N.W. of Birmingham. It has a joint station with Bradley on the Birmingham and Wolverhampton section of the Great Western railway. It is a modern manufacturing village, situated near the Birmingham canal and river Teme. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £213, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a neat modern edifice.

MOY, a post and market vil. in the quoad sacra par. of Moy, bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 24 miles E.S.E. of Omagh, and 87 from Dublin. It is a station on the Ulster and Omagh Junction railway. It is situated on the bank of the river Blackwater, which is here crossed by a bridge connecting the town with the village of Charlemont. There are chapels, schools, a market-house, and police station. Petty sessions are held in the town. The linen trade is carried on briskly, and much business is done in the general trade. Small vessels can come up the river to the town. Roxborough Castle is the principal seat, and the residence of the proprietor of the place, the Earl of Charlemont. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Friday in every month.

MOY, an ancient par. in co. Elgin, Scotland, now joined to Dyke.

MOY, anciently called Muadus, a river of cos. Sligo and Mayo, Ireland. It rises near Tobercurry, and, after a course of 35 miles, falls into Killala Bay.

MOYACOMB, or CLONEGALL, a par. in the bars. of St. Mullins Upper, Scarawalsh, and Shillelagh, cos. Carlow, Wexford, and Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the town of Clonegall. The united districts of this parish extend over an area of 17,334 acres. The surface, which is diversified with mountain and dale, has some bog, and a soil of indifferent quality. The river Derry intersects the parish, and falls into the Slaney in the vicinity. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £637. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1819. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kildain. There are also a Methodist meeting-house and four daily schools. There are numerous seats scattered over the parish. Huntingdon Castle is a quondam seat of the Esmondes of Ballynastra.

MOYADDABEG, a bog in co. Clare, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Kilrush.

MOYALIFF, a par. in the bar. of Upper Kilnamanagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles W.S.W. of Thurles, its post town. It is 5 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 3 miles. The surface is hilly, and includes much waste, with a small proportion of good soil. The Cladagh and Owenbeg are streams of the interior, which is also intersected by the road from Templemore to Tipperary. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift of the late Board of First Fruits in 1790. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Upperchurch. Here are a Sunday and several week-day schools. Moyaliff House and Farney Castle are the principal residences; the latter is the seat of Captain Armstrong. Ruins of two old castles and of a church are seen. Building-stone and limestone are quarried.

MOYALLEN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Tullylish, bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Gilford. It is situated on the banks of the river Bann, and on the road from Banbridge to Portadown. It contains two chapels, schools, and some extensive bleach-greens. The village was founded in 1698 by Quaker settlers.

MOY AND DALAROSSIE, an united par. in cos. Inverness and Nairn, Scotland, 12 miles S.E. of Inverness. It is situated near Starsach-na-Gal, or "Gael's pass to the Moray lowlands," where in 1746 Donald Fraser Smith, with a handful of Highlanders, drove back the Earl of Loudoun, and frustrated his attempt to surprise Prince Charles Edward at Moy Hall. The united parish of Moy and Dalarossie consists almost wholly of two glens, that of the upper part of the river Findhorn, and that of Loch Moy, extending in length from N.E. to S.W. about 30 miles, with an average breadth of 5 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Ardclach, Alvie, Calder, Dunlichity, and Daviot, and contains the post-office station of Moy. The glen of the Findhorn or Strathdearn is less than a mile across its lower grounds, being screened on either side by ranges of the Monadhleadh mountains, which are heathy and well wooded, abounding with red deer and other game. Near its southern end the glen runs into the close mountain vale of Loch Moy, with its lake about 1¾ mile long and half a mile broad, and surrounded by a hanging forest of birch and pine. The river Findhorn or Earn, which rises from several springs at the head of the glen, and the Funtack, which has its source near Loch Moy, receive in their course the tributary waters of many brooks which thread their way through the mountains by small lateral glens. The mountains are neither bold nor rugged in outline, and nowhere rise more than 2,500 feet above the sea. They consist chiefly of gneiss and granite, and were anciently covered with a continuous native forest, chiefly of birch, aspen, and mountain ash, but have been cleared in parts, and now comprise near 90,000 acres of either waste ground or bare sheep-walks, interspersed with recent plantations of larch and Scottish pine. Considerable progress has recently been made in agriculture, which was formerly very backward in these parts, and many acres of waste lands have been brought into cultivation within the last few years. The great Highland road from Inverness to Perth traverses about 10 miles of the parish, and crosses the Findhorn by a modern bridge of wood and stone, built to replace the former one, which was swept away by the memorable flood of 1829. There are ten landholders, but only one resident, A. Macintosh, Esq., chief of the clan Chattan, whose family seat, Moy Hall, built in 1665, stands on an island in the lake, as also does the Macintosh pillar, 70 feet high. Here are still preserved the swords of James V. and Claverhouse, the former presented by Pope Leo X. The par. is in the presb. of Inverness, and synod of Moray. The minister has a stipend of £235. There are two parish churches, belonging respectively to Moy and Dalarossie, formerly distinct parishes, in which divine service is performed on alternate Sundays; the former was built in 1765, and the latter in 1790. There are also a Free church at Moy, and two schools. Fairs are held at Freeburn.

MOYANNA, a par. in the bar. of Stradbally, Queen's County, prov. of Leicester, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.E. of Stradbally. It is 3½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The surface lies along the banks of the Grand canal and the river Barrow. The road from Monastereven to Stradbally crosses the parish. The soil is mostly a light sandy mould. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Stradbally, £190. There are one or two daily schools. Moyanna House is the chief seat of the neighbourhood.

MOYARTA, a bar. in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Ibrickan, Clonderalaw, and the mouth of the Shannon and the sea. Its area is 83,152 acres, and it contains the pars. of Kilballyowen, Kilfearagh, Kilrush, Moyarta, and part of Kilmacduane.

MOYARTA AND ISLANDS, a par. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is 7 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 3 miles, containing the vils. of Carrigaholt, Bellina, Doonaha, and Lisheen. The surface lies along the coast at the mouth of the river Shannon, and abounds in rock scenery. The principal objects along the coast are Poolanishery Harbour, Kilbaha Bay, Loophead, and Kildrahane lighthouse. This locality suffered severely in the famine of 1848, when a hamlet of Moveen was entirely depopulated. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, united with Kilrush. The church is in ruins. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and several schools. Moyarta Cottage is the chief seat. The ruins of Dunlicky and Knocknagarhoon castles are still remaining.

MOYASHAEL AND MAGHERADERNON, a bar. in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Fore, Delvin, Farbill, Fartullagh, Moycashel, Rathconrath, and Cookaree. Its area is 42,845 acres, and it contains the par. of Rathconnell and parts of Dysart and Mullingar.

MOYBOLOGUE, a par. partly in the bar. of Lower Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, and partly in the bar. of Clankee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated near Bailieborough, its post town. The river Kilmainham passes along the eastern border, and the Hill of Loughanleagh is partly included within its limits. The road from Bailieborough to Navan passes through the parish. It is ecclesiastically identical with Bailieborough, and has a Roman Catholic chapel.

MOYCARKY, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of Thurles, its post town. It is 3½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. The soil is of medium quality. The road from Dublin to Cork passes through the interior. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, with Clogher, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Borris. Moycarky Castle, now the property of Viscount Hawarden, was formerly a seat of the Cantwell family.

MOYCARN, a bar. in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is bounded by the rivers Suck and Shannon, and by the bar. of Athlone. Its area is 29,881 acres, and it contains the pars. of Creagh and Moore.

MOYCASHEL, a bar. in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Moyashel, Fartullagh, King's County, and Rathconrath. Its area is 47,333 acres. It contains the pars. of Castletownkindalen, Kilbeggan, Rahugh, and parts of those of Ardnurcher, Durrow, Dysart, Kilcumreragh, and Newtown. This bar. comprises the ancient district of Kinelfiachia.

MOYCLARE, a bog in King's County, Ireland, near Ferbane.

MOYCULLEN, a bar. in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. Its boundaries are the bars. of Ross, Clare, and Galway, and the Atlantic Ocean. Its area is 220.233 acres, and it contains the pars. of Kilcummin, Killannin, Moycullen, and part of Rahoon, with the town of Oughterard. This bar. comprises the ancient territory of the O'Flaherty family, and was named Dealbna-Feadha.

MOYCULLEN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Galway. The par. is 7½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 5½ miles. The surface, which includes a small part of Lough-Corrib, runs down to the coast of Galway Bay. There is a large amount of bog and waste land, and a very small per-centage of good soil. The roads passing through the parish are those from Galway to Oughterard, and from Galway to Cashleh Bay. The living is a rect. forming part of the benefice of Galway, which see. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels, a National and two other day schools. The chief seats are Moycullen House, Kilcullen, and Danesfield. O'Flaherty, the antiquary, was born here. Fairs are held on the 1st February, 28th May, 2nd September, and 8th December.

MOYDART, a loch in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Loch Sheil. It is about 3 miles long by 2 broad, and is known in history as the spot where Prince Charles landed in 1715.

MOYDDYN, a hund. in the co. of Cardigan. It contains the pars. of Bettws-Bleddrws, Bettws-Leiki, Cellan, Llanarth, Llandisilio-Gogo, Llanfair-Clydogan, Llanfihangel-Ystrad, Llangranog, Llangyby, Llanina, Llanllwchaiarn, Llanwenog, Llanwnen, Silian, and parts of Dihewid, Lampeter-Pont-Stephen, Llandyssil, and Llanerch-Ayron.

MOYDOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle-Caereinion, co. Montgomery, 4 miles S.E. of Llanfair.

MOYDOW, a bar. in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Longford-Ardagh, Abbeyshrule, Rathcline, and co. Roscommon. Its area is 34,519 acres, including the par. of Moydow and parts of Ardagh, Ballymacormick, Kilcommock, Kilglass, Killashee, and Taghsheenod.

MOYDOW, a par. in the bar. of Moydow, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Ardagh. Longford is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2½ broad. The soil is mostly good. The roads from Keenagh to Ardagh and from Abbeyshrule to Longford cross each other in the interior. In the village is a police station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with another £439, in the patron of the bishop. The church is nearly a century old. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools. Mount Jessop is the chief seat. Near Slieve Gouldry is the castle of the O'Ferralls.

MOYDRUM CASTLE, the seat of Viscount Castlemain, in co. Westmeath, Ireland, near Athlone.

MOYFENRATH, LOWER and UPPER, two bars. in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The former is bounded by the bars. of Lune, Upper Navan, Lower and Upper Deece, and co. Kildare. Its area is 40,313 acres, containing the pars. of Laracor, Rathcore, Rathmoylan, and a part of Trim, with the vils. of Summerhill and Innfield. The latter bar. is bounded by Lune, Lower Moyfenrath, King's County, Westmeath, and Kildare. Its area is 31,696 acres, containing the pars. of Ballybogan, Clonard, Killyon, and parts of Castlejordan and Castlerickard.

MOYGAWNAGH, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Crossmolina, its post town. It is 8 miles long and 3 broad. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Killala, val. £99, in the patron. of the Vicar of Crossmolina. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and a day school. Millbrook is the principal seat in the vicinity.

MOYGLARE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Deece, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile E. of Kilcock. Maynooth is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is mostly good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £172. The church is old, and near it are the ruins of an ancient castle. Moyglare House is the principal seat.

MOYGOISH, a bar. in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by co. Longford, and the bars. of Fore, Moyashel, Magheradernon, and Rathconrath. It contains the pars. of Kilbixy, Kilmacnevan, Rathaspick, Russagh, Templeoran, and part of Street, with the vils. of Rathowen and Ballinacargy. This bar. comprises the ancient district of Hy-Macnaish, comprising about 40,277 acres.

MOYLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Oldcastle, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2½ broad. The soil is light and fertile. The river Inny intersects it. The road from Oldcastle to Castlepollard traverses the interior, which is diversified by several lakes. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Loughcrew £347, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Oldcastle. There is a hedge-school. Baltrasna House is the principal residence.

MOYLARY. See MULLARY, co. Louth.

MOYLE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Strabane, co. Tyrone, Ireland, 2 miles from Newtown Stewart. The principal residence is Moyle Castle.

MOYLE'S COURT, an old mansion in co. Hants, 3 miles N. of Ringwood. It was once the seat of Colonel Lisle, who sat on the trial of Charles I., and whose wife, Dame Alicia, was condemned in her old age by Jeffreys at the Western Assizes.

MOYLGROVE, or TREFGWYDDEL, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.W. of Cardigan. It is situated on the coast, and is a small agricultural village. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Bayvill, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. George.

MOYLISKER, a par. in the bar. of Fartullagh, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Mullingar, its post town. It is 2½ miles long, and its extreme breadth is 1½ mile. The surface consists of parts of the shore of Lough Ennel. The soil is rich. The parish is crossed by the road from Mullingar to Tyrrels-Pass. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with others, £286, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which is an ancient structure, was enlarged in 1807. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, and three day schools. Belvedere is the seat of Lord Lanesborough. Here are ruins of a castle and raths. Petty sessions are held in the village.

MOYLOUGH, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Killian and Tiaquin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It contains the vils. of Newtown-Bellew and Mount Bellew. The par. is 8½ miles long, with an extreme breadth of 7 miles. The road from Ballinasloe to Westport passes through the parish, which comprises several small lakes. There is a large proportion of bog and waste land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with others £658, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools. Mount Bellew is the seat of Sir Christopher Bellew.

MOYMET, a par. in the bar. of Upper Navan, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Trim. It is 3 miles long, and about 2½ broad. The soil is generally good. The road from Trim to Kells passes through the parish. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Meath. Kilbride is the chief seat.

MOYNALTY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Lower Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 17 miles N. of Trim, and 43 from Dublin. The par. is 5½ miles in length, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The western portion is drained by the river Moynalty. The soil varies in quality. The interior is traversed by the roads from Kells to Kingscourt, and from Dublin to Bailieborough. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £438, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1819. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Newcastle. There are National and other day schools. Moynalty Lodge is the principal residence. Here is a dispensary within the Kells Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held every fortnight.

MOYNALVY, a vil. in the par. of Kilmore, in the bar. of Upper Deece, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Summerhill. It gives name to a Roman Catholic parish.

MOYNE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.E. of Thurles. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface is extremely boggy, but the arable soil good. It is intersected by the road from Templetuohy to Thurles. The living in a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with another, £441, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was the gift of the late Board of First Fruits in 1815. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Templetuohy. There are two or three day schools, also a police station in the village.

MOYNE, a par. in the bar. of South Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Aughrim. Rathdrum is its post town. It is 8 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface, which is mountainous and boggy, includes but a very small proportion of good land. The Slaney and Little Slaney have their sources in the N.W. side of the parish, where is the lofty summit Lugnaquilla. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £158, in the patron. of the Vicar of Hacketstown. The church was erected in 1814. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. This parish was part of Hacketstown up to 1813.

MOYNOE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Scarriff. Killaloe is its post town. It is 7 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface, which lies partly upon Scarriff Bay, is somewhat mountainous. The interior is watered by the small river Bow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Inishcaltra, £111, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a day school. Moynoe House is the principal seat of the vicinity.

MOYNTAGH. See MONTIAGHS, co. Armagh, Ireland.

MOYRAGH. See MOIRA, co. Down, Ireland.

MOYREISK, the seat of Lord Fitzgerald, co. Clare, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Ennis.

MOYRUS, a par. in the bar. of Ballynahinch, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Clifden. It is 14 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 13 miles. It includes the vil. of Roundstone, which is its post town. The surface consists of the greater portion of the Connemara range, including the summits known as the Twelve Pins. Killery Harbour and Ard Bay flank the par. on either side. Along the coast are Birterbury Bay, Slyne Head, Lough Ina, and several other loughs and islands. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Beauchamp, £75. Here are a church, a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Ballinafad, and three or four daily schools. The principal residence is Ballinahinch.

MOYS, a vil. in the par. of Tamlaghtfinlagan, bar. of Keenaght, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, not far from Newtownlimavady.

MOYTEOGE, a headland on the W. side of Achill, co. Mayo, Ireland, near Keem.

MOYVALLEY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Moyfenrath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Johnstown. It is a station on the Midland Great Western railway. The village is situated on the Royal canal. Moyvalley House is the principal residence.

MOYVILLY, a river of co. Galway, Ireland. It rises near Monivea, and falls into Galway Bay at Claren Bridge.

MOYVORE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Templepatrick, bar. of Rathconrath, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Ballymore. Here is a police station. Fairs are held on 4th May, 20th August and 5th December.

MUCCLESHELL, a tythg. in the par. of Holdenhurst, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Christchurch.

MUCH-COWARNE, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford. See COWARNE-MUCH, and the like for other places with this prefix.

MUCHELNEY, a par. in the hund. of Pitney, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Langport, its railway station and post town, and 5 N.W. of Martock. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Parret, and on the turnpike road leading from Crewkerne to Langport. The par. includes the hmlts. of Muchelney-Ham and Thorney. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay. The land is principally rich meadow, subject to inundation from the river Parret. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £336 11*s*. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £95.

The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient stone structure with a square embattled tower, containing five bells. A Sunday-school is held at the vicarage. In the neighbourhood are the remains of a Benedictine nunnery, founded by King Athelstane in 939, and now converted into a farmhouse. It flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenue was returned at £498 16*s.* 3*d.* Walter Long, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

MUCH-MARCLE, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 5½ miles S.W. of Ledbury, its post town, and 7½ from Ross. The village is situated on the high road leading to Ross, and is wholly agricultural. The par., which is of large extent, contains the tnshp. of Yatton. A portion of the land is laid out in hop-grounds. At a spot called the Wonder, near Marclay Hill, an extensive landslip took place in the reign of Elizabeth, carrying with it houses, fences, and cattle. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Yatton annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £841. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a commodious stone structure with a square tower containing six bells. The church contains monuments of the Mortimer and Kyrle families, to which latter the "Man of Ross" belonged. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes endowed with an annuity of £6. Yatton chapel is a stone structure of recent erection. At Quarry Wood in this parish are traces of Ellingham Castle. William Money Kyrle, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MUCH-WOOLTON, a chplry. in the par. of Childwall, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 6½ miles S.E. of Liverpool, its post town. The village, which is extensive, contains numerous streets well lighted with gas. Much-Woolton, anciently called Wolveton, belonged to the Norris, Brettargh, Ireland, and Lathom families. Stone is quarried here to a great extent. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £220, in the patron. of the Vicar of Childwall. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern stone structure. There are National schools for both sexes. Woolton Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a commanding position. The Marquis of Salisbury is lord of the manor. An annual wake is held at Woolton Green on Midsummer-day.

MUCK, an island off the coast of Argyle, Scotland, 5 miles N. by W. of Ardnamurchan. It was formerly a separate parish belonging to the Macleans, but is now included in the parish of Small Isles. It is near 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, with a rocky coast and uneven surface, the highest elevation being 800 feet above sea-level.

MUCK, an islet off the coast of Antrim, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Carrickfergus. It is about half a mile long, and is situated near Islandmagee.

MUCKAIRN, a par. in the district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, 10 miles E. of Oban, and 112 from Edinburgh. It is situated under Cruachan Ben, near Loch Etive, and includes Calnadaluck and Stonfield. It was once called Kilspickarrol, and was part of Ardchattan. There is a parish church, erected in 1829, also a Free church and a parochial school.

MUCKALEE, a par. in the bars. of Iverk and Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Pilltown. Castlecomer is its post town. It is 3 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 1 mile. The surface has a good proportion of fair soil, the remainder being mountain and waste. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Killcullikeen, £107, in the patron. of the Bishop of Cashel.

MUCKALIE, a par. in the bar. of Fassadinin, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Castlecomer, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is hilly, but comprises a fair proportion of good arable soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Dunmore, £179, in the patron. of the crown. There are two day schools. Rockbrook is the chief seat of the locality. This spot is interesting as being the place where Cormac, king of Munster, was slain.

MUCKAMORE GRANGE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Massareene, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Antrim, containing the vil. of Massareene. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. The surface lies along the S. bank of the Six-mile-water, and touches the shore of Lough Neagh. The soil is very productive, and the district is famous for its cheese. Muckamore is a parochial grange, united to the par. of Antrim, in the dioc. of Connor. There are two day schools. Muckamore Abbey, Summerhill, and Greenmount, are the principal seats. There are ruins of an abbey founded by St. Columb in 550, also Druidical remains. It was granted to the Langford family by Queen Elizabeth.

MUCKARSIE, an ancient par. in co. Perth, Scotland, now joined to Forteviot.

MUCKART, a par. in the Ochill district of co. Perth, Scotland, 8 miles W. of Kinross. It lies on the border of the county, adjoining the shires of Clackmannan and Kinross, and is bounded by the pars. of Dollar, Fossaway, and Glendevon. It has an extreme length from S.W. to N.E. of 5 miles, and its greatest breadth is near 3 miles. It comprises the post-office vil. of its own name, and the hmlts. of Pool and Yetts of Muckart. The surface rises gradually from the W., where it is only 60 feet above the sea-level, towards the E. and N., taking in part of the spurs of the Ochill hills, the highest point of which, called Seamale, attains an elevation of 1,350 feet above sea-level. The soil is in general light and gravelly, alternating with clay, and in the lower grounds sandy but fertile. Oats are extensively cultivated, and the hill sides afford excellent pasture for sheep. The predominant rock in the highlands to the N. is trap, but the underlying rocks in the valley of the Devon are of the carboniferous formation, comprising mountain limestone, sandstone, ironstone, and coal, all of which are worked, the ironstone chiefly on the Fossaway side of the Devon, and coal on the Muckart side. The parish is watered by the river Devom, or Devon, and its tributaries, which in its course forms the scenes of the Rumbling Bridge and the Cauldron Linn. The village, which is ancient, suffered much damage in 1645 by the Marquis of Montrose, who, as the enemy and rival of the house of Argyle, carried fire and sword through this district. There are five principal landowners, besides three times that number of small proprietors. The climate is cold and rainy, but not unhealthy. The parish is intersected in an easterly direction by the road from Dollar to the Crook of Dovan, and in a northerly by a road from the Rumbling Bridge to Strathearn. The Tillicoultry branch of the Stirling and Dunfermline railway also passes in the vicinity. The par. is in the presb. of Kinross and synod of Fife, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £159, with glebe valued at £20. The church was built in 1838. There are also an United Presbyterian church, a public library, and schools.

MUCKCROFT, a vil. in the par. of Cadder, co. Lanark, Scotland, 6 miles E. of Glasgow.

MUCKING, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 16 miles S. of Romford, its post town, and 2 N. of East Tilbury. It is near the Stanford-le-Hope station on the Southend railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a creek of the Thames, and is included in the eastern metropolitan district. It is chiefly agricultural, about two-thirds being arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. Here was formerly a priory cell to Barking Abbey. The parish is bounded on the E. by the Thames. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £219, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a stone tower surmounted by a shingled spire, and containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a parochial school erected in 1855.

MUCKISH, a mountain in co. Donegal, Ireland, 5 miles S. by W. of Dunfanaghy. It attains an elevation of 2,190 feet above sea-level.

MUCKLAGH, a group of rocks in Ballyheigue Bay, co. Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Kerry Head.

MUCKLEFORD, a hmlt. and tythg. in the par. of Bradford-Peverell, hund. of George, co. Dorset, 5 miles N.W. of Dorchester.

MUCKLESTONE, or MUXTON, a par. partly in the Drayton div. of North Bradford hund., co. Salop, and partly in the N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 4½ miles N.E. of Market-Drayton, and 6 W. of the Whitmore railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Tern, and is wholly agricultural. The par. is extensive, containing the tnshps. of Woore, Aston, and seven others. The river Tern here divides the county of Stafford from that of Shropshire. There are several quarries of good building-stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,036. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £1,072. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1790, with the exception of the tower, from which Queen Margaret of Anjou is said to have witnessed the defeat of the royalists by Neville on Bloreheath in 1459. The register dates from 1556. There is also a district church at Woore, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £96. The parochial charities produce about £172 per annum, of which £31 goes to Orsley's school and £15 to Elkin's. Oakley Hall is the principal residence, and is situated in an extensive park. Lord Crewe is lord of the manor.

MUCKLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Shawbury, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Wellington, and 9½ E. by N. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on the river Roden, near Muckleton-Moss.

MUCKLEWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Hyssington, lower div. of the hund. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 5 miles N. of Bishop's-Castle. It is situated near Stiper-Stones.

MUCKNO, a par. in the bar. of Cremorne, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing its post town, Castle-Blaney. It is 5½ miles long, and its extreme breadth is 4 miles. The surface, which lies near Lough Muckno, is hilly, including Mullyash, which is 1,034 feet high, being a conspicuous summit. Several islands in the lake belong to this parish. The road from Dublin to Londonderry passes through the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1810. There are two united Roman Catholic chapels, a Presbyterian meeting-house, and several schools. Castle Blayney, Lord Blayney's seat, is in the vicinity.

MUCKRIS POINT, a headland on the coast of Donegal, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Feelin Bay.

MUCKRUSS HEAD, a promontory on the S. coast of co. Cork, Ireland, 3 miles S. by E. of Clonakilty.

MUCKRUSS or MUCROSS ABBEY, a demesne in co. Kerry, Ireland. The mansion is a modern edifice, situated on a point between the Middle and Lower lakes of Killarney, and takes its name from the Franciscan abbey founded here in 1340 by the McCarthys, the ruins of which are still very imposing,—the abbey church, now overgrown with ivy, and parts of the refectory, dormitory, and cloisters, which are raised on 22 arches.

MUCKTON, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey. co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Louth, its post town, and 1¾ mile from the Anthorpe railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a stiff clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £108. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a modern structure, with a turret containing one bell. The register dates from 1695. The parochial charities produce about 10*s.* per annum. The Rev. Joseph Martin Lister is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

MUDDIFORD, a vil. in the par. and hund. of Christchurch, co. Hants, 1½ mile E. by S. of Christchurch. It is a small watering-place situated on the northern bank of the mouth of the river Avon, which here falls into Christchurch Bay.

MUDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Stone, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Yeovil. Ilchester is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Yeo, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Hinton and Stock. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £322, and the vicarial for one of £225, besides £25 paid to the Vicar of Ashington. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £180, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure, with a tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

MUFF, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Inishowen, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 19 miles N.E. of Letterkenny. The par. is 6 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4 miles. The surface extends along the W. shore of Lough Foyle. It is hilly, but has a good proportion of profitable soil. The road from Londonderry to Moville follows the coast. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £98, in the patron. of the Dean of Derry. The church is old. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Burt and Inch. There are likewise a Presbyterian meeting-house, two Sunday, and four or five daily schools. Muff House and Ballynaggard are the chief residences. The village contains a dispensary, which is in the Derry Poor-law Union, and a police station where petty sessions are held. Aileach Castle is an ancient seat of the O'Dohertys. A fair is held on the 11th December.

MUFF, a vil. in the par. of Inniskeen, bar. of Clonkee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Kingscourt. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, also ruins of an old castle. A fair is held on the 12th August.

MUFF, a post-office vil. in the par. of Faughanvale, bar. of Tirkeeran, co. Londonderry, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Londonderry. It is situated on the road from Londonderry to Coleraine, near Lough Foyle. Here are the parish church, schools, courthouse, market-house, and a dispensary within the Londonderry Poor-law Union. There is also a police station in the village, and petty sessions are held regularly at the courthouse. The town was founded in the time of James I. by the Grocers' Company, to whom with adjacent lands it now belongs. Fairs are held on the first Thursdays in February, May, August, and November.

MUGDOCK CASTLE, an old moated tower in co. Stirling, Scotland, near Strathblane. It is famed for a six-syllable echo, which is most distinctly heard about 300 yards from it.

MUGDRUM, an island in the river Tay, co. Fife, Scotland, opposite Newburgh. It is about 1 mile long, but very narrow.

MUGGERHANGER, a hmlt. in the par. of Blunham, hund. of Wixamtree, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.W. of Biggleswade. It is situated between the rivers Ivel and Ouse. Colonel Godfrey Thornton is lord of the manor.

MUGGINTON, a par. in the hunds. of Appletree and Morleston, co. Derby, 7 miles N.W. of Derby, its post town, and 4 W. of the Duffield railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Derwent, and is wholly agricultural. The par. is of large extent, containing the tnshps. of Weston-under-Wood, Mercaston, and Ravensdale Park. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £365. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing four bells. The chancel has a monument to Sir R. Kniveton bearing date 1400. The parochial charities produce about £69 10*s.* per annum, of which £64 go to Mrs. Pole's school, and the remainder distributed in flannel to the poor. There is a girls' school supported by subscription. Lord Scarsdale is lord of the manor of Ravensdale Park, and Thomas Hallowes, Esq., of the manor of Mugginton.

MUGGLESWICK, a parochial chplry. in the W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 8 miles N. of Wolsingham, and 9 from Stanhope. Gateshead is its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Derwent, near the Stanhope railway, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Rowley and part of Castleside, and at a remote period was granted to the convent of Durham in exchange for Hardwick. The southern portion of the parish abounds in rough hills and moors, above 3,000 acres being moorland and common. The enclosed land is nearly evenly divided between pasture and arable, with 340 acres of woodland. The soil is of various qualities, but in general poor and unreclaimed. Along the bank of the river is a range of hills abounding with very productive lead mines containing some silver. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small stone structure and contains one bell. It was rebuilt on the site of a more ancient one in 1728, and chiefly of the same materials. The register dates from 1730. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship. There is a parochial school erected in 1852 and supported by voluntary contributions and payments of the children. The Dean and Chapter of Durham are lords of the manor.

MUGLIN, a rock in Dublin Bay, near Kingstown, co. Dublin, Ireland, a quarter of a mile E. of Dalkey Island, and 8 S.E. of Dublin. It is surrounded by sunken rocks and with the adjoining island of Dalkey was formerly the dominion of the mock king of Dalkey and emperor of the Muglins, who was elected by the citizens of Dublin in June, and the ceremony duly reported in the Dalkey Gazette.

MUICK LOCH, a sheet of water near Balmoral formed by the Muick Water, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is near 2½ miles long and abounds with trout.

MUICK WATER, a river in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, rises in Dhu Loch, near Lochnagar, and after flowing through Glenmuick, passes over a fall of 40 feet, and joins the Dee at Ballater.

MUINTER-HAGAN. See KILCOURSEY, co. Westmeath.

MUIR-AVON-SIDE, or MORANSIDE, a par. in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Linlithgow. It was anciently part of the parish of Falkirk, but was formed into a separate parish at the beginning of the 17th century. It lies on the eastern border of the co., and is bounded on the W. and S.W. by the pars. of Polmont and Slamannan, and on all other sides by the co. of Linlithgow, from which it is separated by the windings of the river Avon, hence the derivation of its name. Its length from N.E. to S.W. is 6½ miles, and its greatest breadth 3½ miles, with an area of 15 square miles. It contains the post-office vil. of Avonbridge. and the vils. of Maddiston and Rumford, with part of the vil. of Linlithgow Bridge. The surface rises regularly in a series of varying ridges from the valley of the Avon, the banks of which are fringed with wood, to the highlands in the W. which form part of the S. side of the great valley of the Forth and Clyde canal. In ancient times the greater part of the land was waste, being moor and moss, but is now reclaimed and is chiefly arable, except a small portion of moorland in the W. In the valley of the Avon the soil is light and gravelly, but in the uplands chiefly clay with a mixture of moss and muir. From the highest grounds, which have an elevation of about 400 feet above the sea-level, an extensive prospect is commanded of the basin of the Forth, extending from the Lothians to Stirling, and from the carses of Forth to the Ochills. The principal landed proprietor is Forbes of Callandar. The prevailing rocks in the uplands are eruptive, or igneous, but in the valley chiefly of the carboniferous formation. There are quarries of whinstone and sandstone, with a fracture resembling that of marble, also several coal mines, and ironstone in great plenty; these two last are now very extensively worked. The valley of the Avon is here crossed by an aqueduct and viaduct, one extremity of which is in Linlithgowshire, and the other in Stirlingshire. The parish is traversed by the Slamannan railway, and by the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, which has a station at Linlithgow, about 3 miles E. of the village. It is also crossed by the high road from Edinburgh to Falkirk, and by the Union canal. This par. is in the presb. of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £231, with a glebe valued at £10. The parish church was built at the commencement of the present century. There is also an United Presbyterian church at the village of Avonbridge, built in 1803. There are a parochial library and a non-parochial school. The old church, which was a chapel-of-ease to Falkirk, stood on the bank of the Avon, about 3 miles to the W. of the present church. Near the church are the remains of an old castle called Almond Castle, formerly a seat of the earls of Callandar; and on the bank of the Avon, about half a mile above Linlithgow Bridge, are the ruins of an old priory called Emanuel, which was founded in 1156 by Malcolm IV.

MUIRDRUM, a vil. in the par. of Panbride, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Arbroath. It is situated near the coast, which is low and rocky. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries and some in the neighbouring bleach works. It has a post-office.

MUIRFORT, an ancient par. now joined to Temple, co. Edinburgh.

MUIRHEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Kettle, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Falkland.

MUIRHEAD, a hmlt. in the pars. of Liff and Invergowrie, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Dundee. It is situated under Balgay Hill and near the river Tay.

MUIRHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Cadder, Lower ward, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles N. by E. of Glasgow. It is situated near the river Kelvin and the great canal.

MUIRHOUSE. See MURROES, co. Forfar, Scotland.

MUIRHOUSES, a vil. in the par. of Carriden, co. Linlithgow, 3 miles N. by E. of Linlithgow. It is situated near Antoninus's Wall on the Frith of Forth.

MUIRHOUSETON WATER, a stream of co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It rises in the moors on the borders of Peeblesshire, and joins the river Almond at Mid-Calder.

MUIRKIRK, a par. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It comprises the post town of its own name, and the vil. of Glenbuck. It extends 9 miles in length from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 8½ miles, and is bounded on the N. and E. by the co. of Lanark, and on other sides by the pars. of Auchinleck, Sorn, and Galston. The surface is very uneven, consisting chiefly of moorish hills, with an altitude of from 800 to 1,000 feet above the sea-level, the highest point being Cairntable, near the S.E. extremity, which rises 1,650 feet above sea-level. It is a rude and bleak district, the land being but partially reclaimed from its original mossy and moorish character. A considerable portion has recently been drained, and converted into grazing and pasture land, on which the black-faced sheep prosper so much as frequently to have obtained the highest prize awarded at the Highland Society's shows. Coal, ironstone, and limestone abound, all of which are worked to a considerable extent. The parish is traversed in an easterly direction by the road between Ayr and Edinburgh, and in a southerly by the road between Glasgow and Dumfries, by way of Strathaven. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £157. The parish church was erected in 1813. There are a Free church, a Roman Catholic chapel of recent erection, a Free Church school, also two schools supported by the Muirkirk Iron Company, besides various other schools. The town of Muirkirk is distant about 13 miles S. of Strathaven, and 51 from Edinburgh. It is a station on the Kilmarnock railway. The town stands at the head of Ayr and Greenock waters, and occupies nearly a central position in the parish. The town has rapidly increased in prosperity within this last quarter of a century, and may now fairly be reckoned one of the great iron-producing districts of Scotland.

The houses and streets are well built. There are a branch of the Western Bank of Scotland, a savings-bank, and a large circulating library.

MUIR-OF-ORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilmorack, co. Ross, Scotland, 3 miles N. by W. of Beauly. It is a station on the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway. Markets for the sale of cattle are frequently held here.

MUIR-OF-RYNIE, a hmlt. in the par. of Strathbogie, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Auchindoir. Two annual fairs are held here, one on the Thursday before the second Wednesday in June, and another in September on the day following Keith fair.

MUIRREITH, an ancient par. in the co. of Wigtown, Scotland, now joined to Glasserton.

MUIRSIDE, a vil. in the par. of Logie Pert, co. Forfar, Scotland, 8 miles N.W. of Montrose.

MUIRTON, a vil. in the par. of St. Ninian's, co. Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Stirling. It is situated near the line of the Scottish Central railway, and Bannockburn Water, which falls into the Forth below Stirling.

MUIRTON, a hmlt. in the par. and co. of Inverness, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Inverness. It is situated on Moray Frith, under Craig Phadric Hill, where Prince Charles and the Duke of Cumberland encamped in the years 1745 and 1746.

MUKER, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Grinton, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 20 miles S.W. of Richmond, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Hawes. The township, which is very extensive, is situated in the moorlands, on the river Swale, and near Shunner Fell. It comprises Angram, Rampsholme, and 14 other hmlts. Above 20,000 acres are unenclosed common, and the remainder meadow and pasture. Muker is very productive of lead and iron ores. There are also collieries, limestone quarries, and smelting mills, giving employment to a large number of the inhabitants. In this township the river Swale forms a cataract called Keasdon Force. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Grinton. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, built in 1580, with a small tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Knowles and Calvert families. There is a free National school, with an income from endowment of about £25 per annum. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each a place of worship. Thomas Smith, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MULBARTON, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.W. of Norwich, its post town, and close to the Swainsthorpe railway station on the Great Eastern line. It was formerly held by Roger Bigod, and was a market town under the St. Omers. This parish was consolidated with Keningham in 1452. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Norwich to New Buckenham. It is chiefly agricultural. Petty sessions are held every third Monday in each month at the inn. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture, and about 40 acres of common. There are no remains of the ancient church of Keningham. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Keningham, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £606. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient flint structure with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The living was once held by the father of Chief Justice Richardson, of the Common Pleas, who was born in this parish in 1626. The interior of the church has some stained windows, and the tomb of Sir E. Rich. The register dates from 1687. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, which goes to Metcalfe's school.

MULDONICH, an islet in the Western Islands, coast of Scotland, 3 miles S. of Barra.

MULE, a rivulet of co. Montgomery. It rises near Llyngarw, and joins the Severn at Abermule, near Neuadd Fraith.

MULGRAVE CASTLE, the seat of the Marquis of Normanby, in the tnshp. of Hutton-Mulgrave, and par. of Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Whitby. It is situated a little S. of Lythe village, near Runswick Bay, and gives title of earl to the marquis. Near it are the remains of a castle which belonged to Wada the Saxon, and was afterwards rebuilt in the reign of John, but was razed by order of parliament.

MULGRAVE-NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lythe, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of Whitby. It is situated near Runswick Bay.

MULHUDDART, a par. in the bar. of Castleknock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles W.N.W. of Dublin. Castleknock is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is good. The road from Dublin to Enniskillen passes through the parish. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Castleknock, £606, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church has long been in ruins. There is a day school. Tyrrellstown and Hollywoodrath are the chief seats.

MULIGRACH, an islet near the mouth of Loch Broom, co. Cromarty, Scotland, 14 miles N.W. of Ullapool.

MULKERN, a river of co. Tipperary, Ireland. It rises in the Doon hills, and after receiving the tributary waters of the Deal and Newport, joins the Shannon below Anmacotty.

MULL, an island and district in the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is situated outside Loch Linnhe, on the W. coast of Argyleshire, and is the third in magnitude of the Hebridean islands. It is separated from Ardnamurchan on the N. by the lower part of Loch Suinart, from Morven on the N.E. by the Sound of Mull, and from Lorn on the W. by the lower part of Loch Linnhe; on all other sides it is washed by the Deucaledonian Sea. Its greatest length is about 30 miles from the point of Dowart to the Sound of Iona, and its greatest breadth about 25 miles. It is supposed to have derived its name from the rocky nature of its coast, Moel, or Mull, in Gaelic signifying "the bare head." The circuit of its coast line is about 120 miles, but following the sinuosities of the shore, which is very indented by bays, it can scarcely be less than 300 miles. The principal points along the coast are, Cailloch Point, in Loch Sunart, opposite Mingary Castle; Calgay Castle; Loch Tua; with the islands of Ulva, Gometra, and Little Colonsay; and farther out Staffa, celebrated for its caves, and the islands of Treshinish; the next point is Loch-Na-Keal, with its ivy-clad promontories, and containing the islets of Ardnisker, Eorsa, Inch, and Kenneth; also lochs Screden and Laich, with the narrow peninsula of Ross, and the island of Iona, celebrated for its cathedral, &c., lying off the coast. Near Auchnacraig ferry to Oban are the lochs Buy and Spelir, and at the entrance of Mull Sound, which is 15 miles by 2 wide, is the castle of Duart, an ancient stronghold of the Macleans, and, farther on, Aros Castle, near the mouth of Aros water. The island, which contains about 300 square miles, is divided into the pars. of Kilfinichen with the island of Iona, Kilninian with Staffa and many small islets, and Torosay. Its surface is mountainous and rugged, rising from 1,000 to 2,000 feet above sea-level, and intersected by a central group of mountains, the highest of which, Benmore, attains an elevation of 3,168 feet, bringing down immense volumes of rain and vapour on the island. The freshwater lakes are Ba, Erison, Uisk, besides several smaller sheets of water. The prevailing rocks are basalt, and other varieties of trap arranged in terraces, with granite and gneiss at the south-western angle; and in Iona, and in the Benmore region, syenite and a blue clay-stone. Interspersed among these are isolated beds of limestone and sandstone belonging to the lias and oolitic formations, and, from their distorted positions, indicate vast geologic changes. At the promontory of Ross a red granite is found; and at various places in the island agates, zeolites, and carbonised wood. The surface, where not entirely barren, is disposed in hilly sheep-walks, varied by some fine spots, few and far between, in sheltered valleys, or more frequently at the head of bays and the bolder inlets of the sea. The inhabitants are chiefly cattle breeders, shepherds, and fishermen, and have for the last quarter of a century been decreasing.

They chiefly reside in small hamlets near the coast, the only town being Tobermory, in the Sound of Mull, opposite Calf Island, where the chief trade of the island is centred, and where are its seats of justice and its civil institutions. The principal roads traversing the island are from Oban Ferry to Torosay and Tobermory, and from Tobermory to Rosshall, and towards Iona. The only objects of antiquarian interest are the three castles of Aros, Duart, and Moy, being good examples of the semi-ancient fortalice, and a few cairns and barrows. The extensive woods for which the island was formerly celebrated have been cleared, and considerable progress recently effected in husbandry. The Tweeddale breed of sheep has been universally substituted for the ancient Highland, and in some places a few Cheviots have been introduced; but the fine breed of native ponies, noted for their hardiness, have been decreasing. The whole of the island is comprised within the presb. of Mull, and the synod of Argyle.

MULLA. See AWBEG, co. Cork, Ireland.

MULLACREW, a vil. in the bar. and co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Louth. It is situated on the road from thence to Ardee. A considerable trade is carried on in wool. Fairs are held on the 2nd February, 25th March, 20th April, 1st May, 17th June, 26th July, 15th August, 8th September, 18th October, 16th November, and 21st December.

MULLAGH, a vil. in the par. of Kilmurry, bar. of Ibrickan, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Milltown-Malbay. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel. Fairs are held on the 1st January, St. Patrick's Day, Easter Monday, and Whit-Monday.

MULLAGH, a par., post-office and market vil., in the bar. of Castlerahan, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles E.S.E. of Virginia, its post town. It is 5 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The surface includes some bog and mountain, but the greater part is good soil. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £108, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Killinkere. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1819. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a Sunday and four daily schools. Lake View is the principal residence. There is a police station in the village, where petty sessions are held. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the last Fridays in January, March, May, July, September, and November.

MULLAGHANOE, a rivulet falling into the river Moy, co. Mayo, Ireland.

MULLAGHBRACK, a par. in the bar. of Lower Fews and West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing part of Markethill, its post town. It is 5 miles long by 4½ broad. The surface is diversified by several lakes. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with another, £1,313, in the patron. of the primate. The church was erected in 1830. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Ballymore and Acton. There are also two Presbyterian meeting-houses, and several Sunday and daily schools. Gosford Castle is the seat of the Earl of Gosford, the lord of the manor. The district appears to have been a Culdee possession before the close of the 13th century. It afterwards fell to the Acheson family by gift of James I. There are several raths, a cairn, and traces of forts.

MULLAGHCARN, a mountain in the co. of Tyrone, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Omagh. It has an elevation of 1,778 feet.

MULLAGHDERG, a lough and headland in Gweedore Bay, co. Donegal, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Dunglow.

MULLAGHDUN, a chplry. in the par. of Cleenish, bar. of Clanawley, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is a cur. in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher, and in the patron. of the incumbent.

MULLAGHHASH, a mountain in the co. of Londonderry, Ireland, 5 miles S. by W. of Dengiven. It attains an elevation of 1,518 feet.

MULLAGHMORE, a small lough in the co. of Ar-Ireland, 2 miles S E. of Market-hill.

MULLAGHMORE POINT, a small harbour and coastguard station adjoining Milk Haven, co. Sligo, Ireland, 4 miles N. by E. of Grange. It is sandy, and has a pier built by the late Lord Palmerston.

MULLANATIRE, a mountain in co. Leitrim, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Manor-Hamilton. It is situated near Upper Lough Macnean, and attains an elevation of 1,275 feet.

MULLARY, or MOYLARY, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Dunleer, its post town. It is 3 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 2 miles. The soil is light. The road from Dublin to Armagh traverses the interior. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Dunleer, £374, in the patron. of the crown. There are a church and a Roman Catholic chapel; the latter is united to that of Drumshallon; also two hedge-schools. Roxborough is the principal seat of the neighbourhood.

MULLAVILLY, a chplry. in the quoad civilia par. of Kilmore, bars. of Lower Orior and East O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Tanderagee. The surface is fertile. The road from Tanderagee to Portadown passes through the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Kilmore. The church was erected in 1736. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a Presbyterian meeting-house, also several week-day and Sunday schools. Mullavilly House is the principal seat of the locality.

MULLDON-PARK-CORNER, a vil. in the tnshp. of East Thornton, co. Northumberland, 5 miles W. of Morpeth.

MULLET, THE, a sandy peninsula on the coast of co. Mayo, Ireland, outside Blacksod Bay and Broadhaven. It is about 12 miles long, with a varying breadth of from 1 mile to 6 miles.

MULLINACUFF, a par. in the bar. of Shillelagh, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Tinahely, its post town. It is 3 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2½ miles. The surface, which is hilly and boggy, is intersected by the cross roads from Tinahely to Tullow, and from Hacketstown to Carnew. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £106, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a church and several day schools. Laragh House is the chief seat.

MULLINAHONE, a post and market vil. in the par. of Kilvemmon, bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S.E. of Killenaule. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a police station, and a dispensary, which last is in the Callan Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held here. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 1st May, on the first Thursdays in July and December, and on the 14th September.

MULLINAVAT, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilbeacon, bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Kilkenny, and 87 from Dublin. It is a station on the Waterford and Kilkenny railway. It is situated on the river Blackwater, and contains a police station. Fairs are held on the 29th March, 2nd September, 3rd and 28th October, and 9th December.

MULLINGAR, a par., post, market, and county town, in the bars. of Fartullagh, Moyashel, and Magheradernon, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The par. is 9¼ miles long, and its breadth ranges from 1 mile to 7 miles. The surface is slightly hilly, and diversified by several lakes, the principal of which are loughs Owel and Ennel. The Royal canal passes through the parish, as also does the road from Dublin to Sligo. The town is situated near the banks of the river Brosna, on the Grand canal, and between the before-mentioned lakes of Owel and Ennel. It is a station on the Dublin and Galway railway, and is considered the capital of Westmeath, being the place where the assizes are held. In 1227 a friary was founded here by Bishop Petyt, and the Nugents established another monastery in 1237. The town was first founded by the English, from whom it was won by MacGeoghegan in 1329, when Thomas le Botiller was slain. It was destroyed by fire in 1464, but was rebuilt, and given by Queen Elizabeth to the Forbeses, who caused it to be recognised as a borough. It was afterwards fortified by General de Ginkell in 1690. Previous to the Union it was a parliamentary borough, returning two members to the Irish parliament. The Petyts and Duke Schomberg took title of baron from this place. The town, which is well built, consists of one principal thoroughfare, with several diverging streets. It contains the court-house, county gaol, infantry barracks, market-house, infirmary, union poorhouse, two banks, and a chief police station. The principal trade is in wool and butter. Quarter sessions are held in January, April, June, and October, and petty sessions once a week, on Saturday. It is the headquarters of the county militia. The Westmeath Guardian is published in the town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £318, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a cruciform structure, erected in 1813 on the site of the ancient one. The Roman Catholic chapel, with another in the parish, is united to that of Gainstown. Besides there are in the town a convent with its school, Presbyterian and Wesleyan Methodist meeting-houses, diocesan, National, and Protestant schools. Belmount House, Lakefield House, Montevedo, and Lynn House, are among the principal residences. The Poor-law Union of Mullingar contains 26 electoral divisions in the county of Westmeath. Here are remains of two castles, and traces of Danish earthworks. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 6th April, 4th July, 29th August, and 11th and 12th November.

MULLINS, ST., LOWER and UPPER, two bars. in co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The former is bounded by the bar. of East Idrone, cos. Wexford and Kilkenny; it contains part of the pars. of Ballyellin, St. Mullins, and Ullard, comprising an area of 21,964 acres. The latter bar. is bounded by co. Wicklow and Lower St. Mullins; it contains Clonegall and parts of the pars. of Barragh and Moyacomb, comprising 7,784 acres.

MULLINS, ST., a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, and bar. of Lower St. Mullins, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Borris. Graigue is its post town. It contains the vils. of Tinnahinch and Ballymurphy. The surface is hilly, comprising a part of the Blackstairs mountains. The soil is of indifferent quality. Several small streams drain the interior, and the river Barrow traces a great part of the western border. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £125. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1811. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, and several day schools, some of which are under the National board. The parish takes its name from a friary which was founded here by St. Molin previous to the close of the 7th century, of which some remains are seen, besides ruins of a Knights Templars' house. Fairs are held in the village on the 17th June, 25th July, 8th September, and 1st November.

MULLION, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 7 miles S.W. of Helston, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast of Mount's Bay, in the English Channel, and opposite Mullion Island or Gull Rock. It is approached by a small cove, convenient for fishing, and is a coastguard station. The parish also contains part of Kynance Cove. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the fisheries. The soil is of loamy nature, with a subsoil of rock. About 2 miles from the village are the Soap Rocks, producing the celebrated steatite formerly in great repute with the manufacturers of china. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £178, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Melan, is a commodious and ancient stone structure, with a lofty square embattled and pinnacled tower, containing four bells. The interior contains an antique font and several monuments. There is an endowed school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school held at the Church school-room. The Wesleyans and Association Methodists have each a place of worship.

MULLOCH-CLEEVAUN, a mountain in the northern part of co. Wicklow, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Blessington. It has an elevation of 2,783 feet above the sea-level.

MULL-OF-CANTIRE, a rock off the coast of Argyle, Scotland, 8 miles S.W. of Campbeltown. It is situated in 55° 19′ N. lat. and 5° 49′ W. long, being only about 13 miles from the opposite coast of Ireland. It has a lighthouse upon it, erected in 1788, with a fixed light visible for 22 miles.

MULL-OF-ESWICK, a rock outside Catfrith Voe, East Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland, 7 miles N. by E. of Lerwick.

MULL-OF-GALLOWAY, a rock on the W. side of Wigtown Bay, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 133 miles S.W. of Edinburgh, and 7 from Wigtown. It is situated in 54° 38′ N. lat. and 4° 51′ W. long, being only 30 miles from Belfast Lough, on the opposite coast of Ireland. It has a lighthouse upon it at an elevation of 325 feet above sea-level, erected in 1830, with a revolving light visible for two and a half minutes, and dark half a minute, and which may be seen for 23 miles at sea.

MULL-OF-OE, or KINHO, a headland at the S. corner of the Isle of Islay, co. Argyle, Scotland, near the hill of Ben Oe, which has an elevation of 546 feet above the sea-level.

MULLOGH. See MOLOUGH, co. Tipperary, Ireland.

MULLYASH, a range of hills in co. Monaghan, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Castleblaney. The highest point is about 1,040 feet.

MULRANKIN, a par. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.S.W. of Wexford. Bridgetown is its post town. It is 2½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. The surface consists of a good soil, and includes a small proportion of moorland. The interior is traversed by the road from Broadway to Duncormuck. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with others, £500, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a new church and a Roman Catholic chapel. The latter is united to that of Tomhaggard. There is a day school in the parish. Brideswell and Rathyark are the principal residences. Here are ruins of the old castle of the Browns, besides two others.

MULROY BAY, on the coast of co. Donegal, Ireland, between Sheephaven and Lough Swilly. It is 13 miles deep, and from 2 miles to half a mile across, having 2 to 12 fathoms water. Off the entrance of the bay lies the Frenchman's Rock, and at its head stands the village of Milford.

MULROY HILL, in co. Inverness, Scotland. It is an elevated spot near the confluence of the rivers Roy and Spean, and is celebrated in history as the spot where a battle was fought between the clan of Macintosh of Glenroy and the Macdonnells of Keppoch.

MULTYFARNHAM, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Corkaree, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Mullingar, and 56 from Dublin. It is a station on the Midland Great Western railway. The par. is 3 miles long, and about 2½ in extreme breadth. The surface is boggy, with a poor soil. The lake of Dereveragh and Crockamore Hill are the only features worth noting. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Stonehall, £250, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Taghmon. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Lackan. There are three day schools in the parish. Here are ruins of the walls and lofty steeple of an abbey founded by William Delamere in 1236, in which a chapter was held in 1529, and in 1641 a meeting of Roman Catholics, asserted by some to have been the germ of the Great Rebellion. The ruin is spoilt by having been converted into a temporary place of worship. It contains tombs of the Nugent family. The principal seats are Donore, Mornington, and Ballinacloon. A police station is situated in the village, where petty sessions are held. Fairs are held on 4th March, 13th May, 1st September, and 2nd December.

MULWITH, a hmlt. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, in the West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Boroughbridge, and 4 S.E. of Ripon. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Ure, and is joined with Newby to form a township. Newby Hall is the principal residence.

MUMBLES, a vil. in the par. of Oystermouth, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.W. of Swansea, with which it is connected by a short line of railway. It is situated on the bay in the Bristol Channel, and has a good roadstead with 2½ fathoms water. Near it is the Mixon shoal. It is a fishing village of ancient date, and has a coastguard station. During the season it is much frequented as a bathing-place in Gower. Mumbles is celebrated for its pickled oysters, and for its lime pits near Mumbles Head. At the entrance of the bay, on Mumbles Head, there is a fixed light, 143 feet above sea-level, erected in 1798.

MUMBY, a par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S.E. of Alford, its post town, and 4 N.E. of the Willoughby railway station. The village, which is wholly agricultural, is situated near the coast. The par. includes Mumby-Chapel and the hmlts. of Elsey and Langham-Row. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1804. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £220, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Thomas, or, according to others, to St. Peter, is a neat structure with a tower containing four bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1843. There is also the district church of St. Leonard's, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £80. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The governors of Bethlehem Hospital are lords of the manor.

MUMBY-CHAPEL, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Mumby, Marsh div. of Calceworth hund., co. Lincoln, 3 miles from Mumby, and 7 S.E. of Alford. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Mumby. The church is a neat structure, dedicated to St. Leonard's. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists.

MUNCASTER, a par. in the ward. of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 1 mile from Ravenglass, its post town, and railway station on the Whitehaven and Furness Junction line, and 6 miles from Booth. It is situated on the river Esk, near the coast. It contains, besides the town of Ravenglass, the tnshps. of Muncaster and Birkby, also the hmlt. of Low-Eskholm, and the old city of "Barnscar." This parish, which was anciently written Meol-ceastre, is 4 miles by 3 in extent, and was formerly a Roman station. The greater part of the land is still unenclosed, only a third being arable and the remainder pasture and common, with about 300 acres of woodland. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £97. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure with a turret containing two bells. The E. window is of stained glass, and is in three compartments. The church contains two piscinas, numerous tablets to the Muncaster family, and four brasses of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum, of which £12 goes to a school. Muncaster Castle, situated at Esk-Meol, near the mouth of the river Esk, is the seat of Lord Muncaster, who takes from this place the title of baron. It is an embattled building situated in the midst of extensive and well-wooded grounds, in which are remains of the ancient castle, the original seat of the Penningtons, comprising stone towers and obelisks, one of the former answering for a landmark at sea. Adjoining the mansion is an extensive deer park, enclosed by a lofty wall. Lord Muncaster is lord of the manor.

MUNCHIN, ST., a par. partly in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, and partly in the bar. of Pubblebrien, Limerick city, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Limerick, which see.

MUNDEN, or MUNDANE, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Broadwater, co. Herts, 6 miles N. of Ware, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Puckeridge. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Nasty or Munden-Furnival, with parts of Dane-End and Haultwick. There are traces of Rownea or Rownay Priory, founded in the reign of Henry II. by Conan Duke of Brittany and Earl of Richmond. Its revenues at the Dissolution were returned at £13 10*s.* 9*d., but the priory had ceased to exist in the reign of Henry VI. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £785. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £703, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The register dates from 1576. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum, which goes for the support of the parochial school.

MUNDEN, LITTLE, or MUNDEN-FREWELL, a par. in the hund. of Broadwater, co. Herts, 5½ miles N. of Ware, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Puckeridge. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Dane-End or Munden Street, Haultwick or Artic, Green-End, and Potter's-Green. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 110 acres of woodland. The surface is hilly, and the soil a mixture of clay and gravel, alternated with chalk. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £570. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £523. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments. The register dates from 1623. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, which goes towards the support of the National school, built in 1822. Dane-End House is the principal residence.

MUNDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.E. of Brandon, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Thetford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the London-road and near the bridge over the river Wissey, which bounds the parish on the N. The extensive nursery of Mr. Henry Hammond is in this parish, and is considered one of the best in the county. Petty sessions are held at the "Crown" inn every alternate Wednesday. There is a small tract of common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £136. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a small flint structure with an embattled tower at the W. end, with freestone coping and quoins. There is a free school.

MUNDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Loddon, its post town, and 9½ S.E. of Norwich. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £442. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £148, in the patron. of the trustees of Norwich Hospital, who are impropriators of the great tithes. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small ancient edifice with a square embattled tower, and a highly enriched Norman doorway on the S. side. St. Etheldred's church is in ruins. The register dates from 1566. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, chiefly realised from land. There is a place of worship for the Baptists. G. S. Kett, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MUNDHAM, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Box and Stockbridge, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles S.E. of Chichester, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Drayton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a retired spot on the Arundel and Portsmouth canal, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Fisher and Runckton, at which latter place there was formerly a chapel-of-ease. The living is a vic.* with the vic. of Hunston annexed, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. respectively £269 and £348. The church, of which the dedication is unknown, is an ancient structure, subsequently enlarged, with a square embattled tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1558. There is a National school for both sexes. Runckton House is the principal residence.

MUNDHAM, SOUTH, a tythg. in the par. of Pagham, hund. of Aldwick, and rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 4 miles S. by E. of Chichester. It is situated near Pagham Harbour on the English Channel.

MUNDON, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 3½ miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town, and 12 S.E. of Chelmsford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near a creek of the Blackwater estuary, which bounds the parish on the N. It is wholly agricultural. Mundon-Wash is a meet for the Essex Union hounds. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture, marsh, or waste, with 56 acres of woodland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £160, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat ancient structure partly of stone, with a square wooden belfry. This parish has the privilege of sending two children for free education at the grammar school at Maldon. Mundon Hall is the principal residence.

MUNDON. See MUNDEN, co. Herts.

MUNDSLEY, or MUNDESLEY, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N. of North Walsham, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Cromer. It is a coastguard station and sub-port to Cley. The parish, which consists wholly of arable land, is situated on the coast. The village has of late years been much improved by the construction of marine villas and lodging-houses for the reception of visitors. It is small, and commands a view of the North Sea. Fishing is carried on to some extent. The land being gradually encroached upon by the sea, it was found requisite to construct two massive sea walls, forming an upper and lower terrace, to protect the village. There is a small jetty running out about 100 feet into the sea. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £168 14*s*. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £167, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated on a high part of the cliff. It was founded shortly after the introduction of Christianity into England, and is now in a ruined condition, so that divine service is performed in a part of the nave, which has been repaired. The register dates from 1760. The charities consist of the "sermon acre," valued at 10*s*. There are National and British schools for both sexes. There is a place of worship for Nonconformists. In a cliff near the sea have been found petrified bones of the fossil elephant, horns of the moose deer, and other extinct animals.

MUNGO, ST., co. Lanark. See GLASGOW.

MUNGO, ST., or CASTLE-MILK, a par. in Annandale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It contains the post town of Lockerby, situated near its northern boundary, and is 4 miles W. by N. of Eccles-Fechan. It was anciently called Abermele, from its situation at the confluence of the Mele or Milk with the Annan, and afterwards Castle-Milk, from the famous castle of the Bruces, lords of Annandale, built here in 1170; but after the Reformation it took the name of St. Mungo, the popular form of St. Kentigern, the British saint, to whom the church was dedicated. It was given by King Robert Bruce to the Archbishop of Glasgow as a mensal church in the 13th century. It lies in that part of the shire of Dumfries which was formerly called the Stewartry of Annandale, and is surrounded by the pars of Cummertrees, Dalton, Dryfesdale, Hoddam, and Tundergarth, to which last this parish was for a short time annexed. The par. is 5 miles long from N. to S., and its greatest breadth about 3 miles, with an area of 7 square miles. The surface is in general level, except some eminences of small elevation towards the centre and northern end, called the Barrhill, and Nut-Holm Hills, on which are vestiges of a Roman and several British camps. It is watered by the Annan and the Milk, the banks of the latter river being fringed with natural wood, and both abounding with salmon. The climate, though subject to heavy rains, is nevertheless healthy. The soil along the banks of the Annan and the Milk is a rich alluvial loam, about 18 inches deep, but the uplands are sterile, with a subsoil of sandstone rock or trap. About 300 acres are under wood, chiefly plantations, and the same number uncultivated, the remainder being arable. The principal landed proprietor is Jardine of Castle-Milk, but there are eighteen other smaller holders. There are several marl pits in the parish, and limestone is quarried. Game is abundant, but fuel is expensive. The great road from Carlisle to Glasgow runs through the E. end of the parish by the bridge over the river Milk, and the line of the Caledonian railway intersects it, having a station at Lockerby. This par. is in the presb. of Lochmaben and synod of Dumfries, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £174, besides a glebe valued at £60. The parish church, erected in 1841, is situated near the centre of the parish. There is a parochial school, the master's salary being £34 4*s*. 4*d*. with £30 fees. The only mansion in this parish of any historical interest is Castle-Milk, originally built by the Bruces, the ancient lords of Annandale, in the middle of the 12th century. It passed as the marriage dowry of the daughter of King Robert Bruce to Walter, High Steward of Scotland, and descended to their son Robert, the first of the Stewarts who came to the crown, in 1371. It afterwards passed to the Maxwells, Douglases, and other families, and now belongs to the Jardines by purchase. It was besieged by the Duke of Somerset while Protector during the minority of Edward VI. of England, and was again assaulted under Oliver Cromwell, whose intrenchments are still visible. The old castle was dismantled and modernised in the year 1707, when it was converted into a dwelling house, and in 1796 it was entirely rebuilt.

MUNGRET, a par. in the bar. of Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Limerick, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2 broad, and contains part of the vil. of St. Patrick's Well. The soil is good. The road from Limerick to Rathkeale passes through the interior. There is a police station in the village. The bishop's old seat, Cunegar, is now turned into a farm. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £189, in the patron. of the Dean of Limerick. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1824. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Crecora. There are three day schools, also ruins of a very ancient and once very extensive abbey. Its foundation is attributed to St. Patrick in the 6th century. The ruins consist of a wall, preceptory gate, church, and lepers' hospital.

MUNGRISDALE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Greystoke, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 8 miles E. by N. of Keswick, and 11 from Penrith, its post town. It is situated on the river Glenderamakin, under Souter Fell and Saddleback. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the slate quarries, which consist chiefly of blue slate and flagstone. The soil is principally clay, and the land in pasture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £118, in the patron. of the Rector of Greystoke. The church is a small ancient structure with a square tower containing two bells. There is an endowed school, also a Sunday-school. Henry Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MUNHIN, a stream of co. Mayo, Ireland. It is only 3 miles long, draining Loch Carrowmore into the river Owenmore.

MUNLOCHY, a vil. in the par. of Knockbain, co. Ross, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Inverness. It is situated in a moorland district near Loch Beauley. Sandstone is quarried, both red and variegated. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

MUNLYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Forden, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N. of Montgomery.

MUNSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Ledbury, its post town. The village is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £227. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a stone structure.

MUNSLOW, LOWER, a hund. in co. Salop, contains the borough of Ludlow and the pars. of Abdon, Ashford-Bowdler, Ashford-Carbonell, Bromfield, Clee St. Margaret, Culmington, Diddlebury, Easthope, Hold gate, Hopton-in-the-Hole, Munslow, Onibury, Lacy-Stanton, Long-Stanton, Stoke St. Milborough, Stokesay, Tugford, Cold-Weston, and parts of Ludford and Richard's-Castle, comprising an area of 59,670 acres.

MUNSLOW, UPPER, a hund in co. Salop, contains the pars. of Acton-Scott, Cardington, Eaton, Hope-Bowdler, Rushbury, Shipton, and Stretton-Church, comprising an area of 34,080 acres.

MUNSLOW, a par. in the lower div. of Munslow hund., co. Salop, 7 miles S.W. of Church-Stretton railway station, its post town, and 10 N. of Ludlow. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Corve, and on the high road from Ludlow to Wenlock. The par. contains Bach-Mill, Holloway, Topley, and seven other tnshps. The soil consists of clay and loam, with a subsoil of limestone and quarry stone. An Act was passed in 1838 for enclosing waste land to the extent of 170 acres. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Broadstone annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £665. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure with a low square tower containing four bells. The interior of the church has an antique font, also a stained E. window. The chancel is separated from the nave by a carved oak sceen, and attached to the latter is a chantry chapel, much dilapidated. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is a chapel-of-ease at Broadstone, and a place of worship for Wesleyans. There is a school for both sexes, supported by the children's pence and by voluntary subscriptions. Millichope Park is the principal residence. C. O. C. Pemberton, Esq., is lord of the manor. Munslow gave the title of baron to Edward Lord Littleton, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas and Keeper of the Great Seal, who was born here in 1589.

MUNSTER, the largest of the four provs. of Ireland. It is situated in the S.W. part of the island, and contains the cos. of Cork, Kerry, Limerick, Tipperary, Waterford, and Clare. It is 140 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 100 miles. It has 450 miles of coast, the entire circuit of the province being 610 miles. Its superficial measurement is 9,476 square miles, or 6,064,579 acres, of which 1,893,477 are in tillage, 151,381 are under water, and 873,000 are waste, hill, and the remainder in pasture. That portion of the province occupied by the county of Clare formed the ancient principality of Thomond, or North Munster, and the remaining counties formed Ormonde, or South Munster. From the 2nd century it was recognised as a kingdom, but ceased to be thus denominated in the time of Brien Boru, and was divided into counties by Henry VIII. Among the families who at different periods have held the territory were the MacCarthys, Geraldines, Fitzthomases, Barrys, Roches, and others. The Fitzclarences take the title of earl from Munster, which also gives name to a circuit, a synod, and a presbytery.

MUNTERCONNAUGHT, a par. in the bar. of Castlerahan, co. Cavan, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Virginia, its post town. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2½ miles. The surface lies along the shore of Lough Ramor, and the bank of the river Blackwater. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £112. The church was gifted by the late Board of First Fruits in 1832. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Castleregan. There are three or four day schools. A hospital formerly stood here, the site of which was granted to the Moore family by James I. Lakeview is the principal residence.

MUNTERLONY, a mountain in the co. of Tyrone, Ireland, 5 miles E. by N. of Gortin. It has an elevation of 1,432 feet.

MURCOTT, a tythg. in the pars. of Long-Buckby and Watford, hund. of Guilsborough, co. Northampton, 4 miles N.E. of Daventry.

MURCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Crudwell, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.E. of Malmesbury.

MURCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Charlton-upon-Otmoore, hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 4 miles S. of Bicester.

MURHER, a par. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.N.E. of Listowel. Tarbert is its post town. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. It contains the vil. of Newtown Sandes. The surface is very boggy, and has a poor soil. The river Gale traces the southern boundary, and the Listowel and Tarbert road intersects the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Listowel, £335. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Kilnaughton and Aghavallin. There are three daily schools. Moyvane is the principal seat.

MURKLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Thurso, co. Caithness, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Thurso, and 23 N. by W. of Wick. It is situated on Murkle Creek, in Dunnet Bay. The principal residence is Murkle House, the seat of Sir J. G. Sinclair, Bart.

MURLOCH BAY, a small harbour on the coast of Antrim, Ireland, between Tor Point and Fair Head. The produce of the Ballycastle coal-field is shipped here.

MURRAGH, a par. in the bars. of West Carbery and Kinalmeaky, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles W.N.W. of Bandon, its post town. It is 3 miles long and about half a mile in breadth. The surface lies along the left bank of the Bandon river, and is much diversified in contour and quality of soil. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £547, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1810. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Templemartin. There are a Sunday and several week-day schools.

MURRAH, a hmlt. in the par. of Greystoke, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 8 miles W. of Penrith. It is situated near the river Caldew. The soil is chiefly clay. There is an endowed school for both sexes. Henry Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor. It is joined with Berrier to form a township.

MURRAY. See MORAY, Scotland.

MURRELL-GREEN, a tythg. in the par. of Odiham, co. Hants, 2 miles N. of Odiham, and 2½ S.W. of Hartford Bridge. It is situated near the line of the South-Western railway.

MURRISK, a bar. in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is bounded by Clew Bay, the bars. of Burrishoole and Carra, co. Galway, and the Atlantic. It contains the pars. of Inishbofin, Kilgeever, Oughaval, and part of Aghagower, with the vil. of Westport, comprising an area of 137,062 acres.

MURRISK, a hmlt. in the par. of Oughaval, bar. of Murrisk, co. Mayo, Ireland, 2 miles from Westport, and 10 S.W. of Castlebar. It is situated near Clew Bay, and gives name to the barony. The principal residence is Murrisk House.

MURROES, or MUIRHOUSE, a par. in the district of Dundee, co. Forfar, Scotland, 2½ miles from Dundee, its post town, and 7 S. of Forfar. It comprises the hmlts. of Hole of Murroes, Bucklerhead, and Kellas. It extends in length about 3½ miles, with a breadth of 2½ miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Inverarity, Monikie, Monifieth, Dundee, Mains, and Tealing. The surface is of a hilly nature, and the greater part is in an excellent state of cultivation. The parish is traversed by the roads from Dundee to Forfar and Letham. This par. is in the presb. of Dundee, and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £172. The parish church was erected in 1848. There is a parochial school.

MURROES, THE, a demesne in the par. of Ballyhuskard, co. Wexford, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Enniscorthy. It was formerly called O'Moerough, and is situated near the coast.

MURROGHKELLY and MURROGHTWOHY, hmlts. in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, Ireland, 23 miles N. of Ennis. They are situated near New Quay Harbour.

MURROW FEN, in the hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 5 miles W. of Wisbeach.

MURSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 4 miles E. of Winslow, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Leighton-Buzzard. The village, which is small and straggling, is wholly agricultural. It was formerly a market town, and had two annual fairs. The par.

includes the hmlt. of Salden, where was once Salden House, the seat of Sir John Fortescue, who was visited here by Queen Elizabeth and James I. The house has been taken down, and only some slight remains mark the site. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1814 for land and a money payment. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £300. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a square tower containing a clock and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is an infant school, also a place of worship for the Baptists. W. S. Lowndes, Esq., is lord of the manor. Mursley gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Berks and dioc. of Oxford.

MURSTON, a par. in the hund. of Milton, upper div. of the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, three-quarters of a mile from Sittingbourne, its post town, 1 mile S.E. of Milton, and 5 miles S. of Queenborough. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Swale, opposite Sheppey. There is a ferry over the river to Elmley. Near the village is a quay and numerous docks on the Creek. There are extensive brick kilns in the parish. A large portion of the land is moory, and about 60 acres are in orchards. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £615. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £539, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is a small ancient structure, dedicated to All Saints, with a square western tower and wooden turret. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum, which goes towards the support of Housson's school.

MURTHLY, a hmlt. in the par. of Little Dunkeld, co. Perth, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Dunkeld, and 12 N. of Perth. It is a station on the Inverness and Perth railway. It is situated between the rivers Tay and Bran, and contains the seat of Sir W. D. Stewart, Bart., adjoining the ruins of the Old Fort, and near Birnam Wood, celebrated by Shakspeare.

MURTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ravenstonedale, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 6 miles S.W. of Kirkby-Stephen. It is situated near the sources of the river Lune.

MURTLE, a station on the Aberdeen, Banchory, and Aboyne section of the Deeside railway, 5½ miles from Aberdeen.

MURTON, or MOORTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Lamplugh, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 8 miles N.E. of Whitehaven. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Smaithwaite, Lund, and Whinnah, and several straggling houses. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the hardware manufacture, and there are several lime works. The Lamplugh parochial school is situated in this township. J. L. L. Raper, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleby St. Michael, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles N.E. of Appleby, its post town and nearest railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Eden, under Murton Pike and Murton Fell. The township is of large extent, but a considerable portion of it is moorland. The lead mines, which are very productive, are worked by the London Lead Company. The township is partly encircled by fells. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which was erected in 1855, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a school endowed with £7 per annum, originally founded by the Rev. J. Cock in 1738. The United Methodists, Free Church, and the Wesleyan Methodists, have places of worship. Murton Hall, formerly the seat of the Hiltons, is now converted into a farmhouse.

MURTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Osbaldwick, wap. of Bulmer, and lib. of St. Peter's, in the East Riding co. York, 1 mile E. of Osbaldwick, and 3 miles N.E. of York. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. — Thompson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MURTON, or MOOR-TOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Tynemouth, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.W. of North Shields. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly inhabited by colliers. There are quarries of freestone, and coal is abundantly worked. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

MURTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalton-le-Dale, N. div. of Easington ward, co. palatine of Durham, 8 miles N.E. of Durham.

MUSBURY, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Axminster, its post town, and 2 from Colyton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Axminster to Seaton, near the river Axe. Musbury Castle, a double-ditched camp of 20 acres, is in this parish. The soil is of a clayey and sandy nature, with a subsoil of gravel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £435. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £365. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a very ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. A south aisle was added by the Drake family towards the end of the 15th century. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Drake family, who settled here in the reign of Henry VII. The great Duke of Marlborough was born in the parish in 1650, and his maternal uncle, Sir John Drake, was created a baronet in 1660. Ash-House, the ancient seat of the Drakes, is now a farmhouse. The Rev. John Vaughan Payne is lord of the manor.

MUSBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles S.W. of Haslingden. It is a station on the East Lancashire railway. A sub-post-office was established in 1856. The township is of small extent, but the village is considerable. Many of the inhabitants are employed in cotton spinning. The river Ogden passes through the neighbourhood. The soil is light and shallow upon a subsoil of rock. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is a neat edifice, with a square spired tower containing eight bells. The church has a memorial window to the late William Turner, Esq., of Flaxmoss House, whose tomb is in the churchyard. The church was erected in the year 1851 at an expense of £3,000, chiefly defrayed by the late W. Turner, Esq., by whom also the site was presented. Flaxmoss and Flaxmoss House are the principal residences. There are several other residences.

MUSCLIFFE, a tythg. in the par. of Holdenhurst, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Christchurch. It is situated on the river Stour.

MUSCOATES, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkdale, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.W. of Slingsby, and 6 S.E. of Helmsby. It is situated on a branch of the river Wye. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay and gravel.

MUSCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Norton, co. Northampton, 3½ miles E. of Daventry. It is situated on the North-Western railway.

MUSDEN-GRANGE, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Cheadle. The land is chiefly in pasture. The rates are paid to the parish of Croxden, which is 8 miles distant.

MUSGRAVE, GREAT, a par. in the East ward, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles S.W. of Brough, its post town. It is a station on the Eden Valley railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Eden, which is here crossed by a bridge of two arches, built in 1826. It is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Fleetholm and Langrigg. It is bounded on the S.E. by the river Belo, and gives name to the Musgraves of Edenhall. The land is fertile. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £149, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Theobald, is a small modern structure, with a square tower containing two bells. In 1827, the late Dr. Septimus Collinson bequeathed the interest of £1,500 three per cent. consols for the endowment of a free school, which is conducted on the National system. Sir G. Musgrave, Bart., is lord of the manor.

MUSGRAVE, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby-Garrett, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 3½ miles N.E. of Crosby-Garrett, and 2½ S.W. of Brough. Sir George Musgrave, Bart., is lord of the manor.

MUSKERRY, EAST, a bar. in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by Duhallow, Barretts, Barrymore, Cork, Kinnalmeaky, and West Muskerry. Its area is 122,875 acres, and it contains the pars. of Aghabulloge, Aghinagh, Aglish, Athnowen, Cannaway, Carrigrohanebeg, Corbally, Desertmore, Inishcarra, Kilbonane, Magourney, Matehy, Moviddy, and parts of Ballinaboy, Carrigrohane, Donaghmore, Dunderrow, Garrycloyne, Grenagh, Inishkenny, Kilmurry, Kilnaglory, Knockavilly, St. Finbars, and St. Nicholas.

MUSKERRY, WEST, a bar. in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Duhallow, East Muskerry, Kinnalmeaky, East Carbery, Bantry, and co. Kerry. Its area is 188,487 acres, and it contains the pars. of Ballyvourney, Clondrohid, Dunisky, Kilcorney, Kilnamartery, Macloneigh, Macroom, and parts of Ballinadee, Drishane, Inchigeelagh, Kilmichael, and Kilmurry. The Deanes of Springfield take title of baron from this barony.

MUSKHAM, NORTH, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 3½ miles N. of Newark, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Great North-road, and near the W. bank of the river Trent at Holme Ferry. The par. includes the hmlt. of Bathley, and is traversed by the Trent navigation. The soil is fertile, and the land under profitable cultivation. An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1771. The tithes have been commuted for land, and the vicarial glebe comprises 91 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £230, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ripon. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, stands on the bank of the Trent, and is a neat structure with a tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £108 per annum, of which £61 goes to Woolhouse's free school, besides two almshouses founded by Mr. Kemp. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. James Thomas Edge, Esq., is lord of the manor.

MUSKHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 2 miles N. of Newark, its post town. The par., which is chiefly agricultural, contains the hmlt. of Little Carlton. It is bounded on the E. and S. by the river Trent, which is here crossed by a bridge leading towards Newark. The river affords facility of water conveyance to Gainsborough and Nottingham. The village, which is small, is situated on the Great North-road to York. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £677 4*s.* 3*d.*, and the vicarial for £139 17*s.* The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £139, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ripon. The church is a neat structure, dedicated to St. Wilfrid. Lord Middleton is lord of the manor.

MUSSELBURGH, a post and market town, parliamentary burgh, burgh of regality, and bathing-place, in the par. of Inveresk, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 2½ miles E.S.E. of Portobello, 4 N.E. of Dalkeith, and 5½ E. by S. of Edinburgh. It is a station on the Edinburgh, Portobello, Musselburgh, and Eskbank branch of the North British railway. It stands on the right bank and near the mouth of the river Esk, in a fertile spot, about 3 furlongs S. of the Frith of Forth, from which it is divided by the sandy downs called Musselburgh Links. The boundaries of the burgh include the considerable town of Fisherrow, lying along the opposite bank of the river; the large vil. of Newbigging, extending southward from Middleburgh; the vils. of North Esk, Westpans, and Levenhall, near the mouth of the Ravenshaugh burn; and the salt-works near Magdalene Bridge. Its ancient name was Eskmouth, or Eske-muthe, under which it is mentioned by Simeon of Durham so early as the 7th century; but this name was subsequently exchanged for Musselburgh, (as is believed) from a mussel bank near the mouth of the Esk. In 1201 the barons of Scotland assembled here to swear fealty to the infant son of William the Lion, afterwards Alexander II. In the reign of David I. it was granted to the abbey of Dunfermline, and remained part of the abbey lands till the Reformation, when it was given by James VI. to Lord Thirlestane, ancestor of the earls and dukes of Lauderdale, from whom it came in 1709 to the Duke of Buccleuch.—Musselburgh was "a burgh whan Edin' was nane," having been first chartered by David I. in 1340. It was subsequently erected into a royal burgh under the great seal in 1632; but the privilege being questioned by the citizens of Edinburgh, it did not obtain the right of representation in parliament till the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832, when it was united, with Portobello, to Leith. It now differs from a royal burgh in nothing but the name, and under the late Municipal Act is governed by a provost, 3 bailies, 7 councillors, and a treasurer. The town council and borough magistrates also act as commissioners of police and harbour-masters. The Edinburgh county police also have a station in the town, and the magistrates hold a court for recovery of small debts and adjudication of minor criminal causes. The burgh revenue is about £1,645, including the produce of the town lands, which were formerly more extensive than at present, a considerable portion having been long ago sold.—The site of the town, though only a few feet above the sea-level, is remarkably dry and healthy. The stream of the Esk, here crossed by four bridges, flows through the burgh; and to the N. of it are the Links, cutting off the view of the Frith of Forth; while on the S. the slopes of Inveresk bound the horizon. The town contains several good streets, as High-street, running eastward from the new bridge, and on the line of the Edinburgh and Berwick road; Mill-hill-street, running north-eastward from the end of the timber bridge to the links and the road to Newbigging; besides several cross streets, and various lanes and alleys. The houses are well and somewhat regularly built, and many of them are detached. The principal public buildings are the tolbooth, built in 1590 of materials taken from the ruined chapel of Loretto, and subsequently repaired. It is surmounted by a spire of still earlier date, and contains a clock of 1496. It is said to have been the first building erected in Scotland for secular purposes out of the materials of an ecclesiastical edifice; and for this sacrilege the citizens of Musselburgh were annually excommunicated at Rome during two centuries. Adjoining the tolbooth is the townhall, a more recent structure, containing the council and assembly rooms; also a church, five chapels, masonic lodge, grammar school, lunatic asylum, and sailors' society founded in 1669. There are also a public library, commercial bank, gas-works, breweries, and corn-mills; and at the W. end of the High-street is a monument to Dr. Moir, the eminent physician, and author of the papers signed "Delta" in Blackwood's Magazine. The monument consists of a statue 8½ feet high, sculptured by Ritchie, on a pedestal 20 feet high. Other objects of interest are the stone bridge of five elliptical arches connecting Musselburgh and Fisherrow, erected in 1807 from a design by Sir John Rennie; and the very ancient bridge farther up the stream, with a drawbridge in the middle, supposed to have been originally constructed by the Romans, being on the direct line between the Prætorium at Inveresk and the harbour of Fisherrow, and connected with the remains of an ancient causeway. There are traces of a Roman station at Fisherrow, and of a camp at Sheriffhall; but the principal object of attraction in the town is the vault of the hermitage of Loretto, once the most renowned in Scotland for miraculous cures. All that now remains of this once considerable building, which was regarded with superstitious veneration, is a vault or cell 12 feet by 10, covered by a circular wooded mount, and having in the roof a strong iron bar with an oaken pulley attached. Near that part of the Links where Huntley met the Covenanters in 1638, and where Cromwell encamped with his army for several months in 1650, is now the line of the Edinburgh racecourse; and here, too, is played the annual match of the Musselburgh Golf Club, established in 1774. J. Burnet, the eminent engraver, and Alexander and John Ritchie, the sculptors, were born here. Market day is Friday. A fair is held on the second Tuesday in October.

MUSTON, or MUSSON, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 5 miles W. by N. of Grantham, 13 N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and 1½ mile S.E. of the Bottesford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Devon, and is wholly agricultural. The Grantham canal passes through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £400, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a cruciform structure, with a spired tower. The living was once held by the poet Crabbe. There is a National school, entirely supported by the Duke of Rutland, who is lord of the manor. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

MUSTON, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 8 miles S. of Scarborough, its post town, and 1½ mile N. of Hunmanby. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Hartford, near Filey Bay. It is wholly agricultural. Above two-thirds of the land is arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture, with a few acres of woodland. There are stone quarries. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £254 17*s.* 6*d.*, and the incumbent's for £126 18*s.* 9*d.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £256. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure, with a turret containing two bells. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Muston Hall and Muston Lodge are the principal residences. Rear-Admiral Mitford is lord of the manor.

MUSTON, an ext. par. place in the par. of Winterborne Kingston, co. Dorset, 4 miles N.E. of Dorchester. It is situated on the river Piddle.

MUSWELL-HILL, a hmlt. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Hornsey, co. Middlesex, 5 miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London. It is a suburban district, situated in an undulating country, and commands a prospect of the metropolis to the S., with the richly wooded hills to the N. An extensive place of amusement called the Alexandra Park is in course of formation, which is expected to rival Sydenham. The strata in the pits are worthy of inspection, as affording much valuable geological information. There is also a mineral spring, formerly in much repute. Clerkenwell Priory formerly had a cell here, on the site of Alderman Roe's house. The village is very straggling, comprising many villa residences surrounded by gardens. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £296, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a brick structure, dedicated to St. James, and was erected in 1842. There is a girls' and infant school.

MUTFORD, a par. in the hund. of Mutford and Lothingland, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Beccles, its post town, and 5½ S.W. of Lowestoft. It is a station on the Lowestoft branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Lothing Creek, and near the line of the Norfolk railway. It is chiefly agricultural. The soil is fertile, and the land well cultivated. The living is a discharged vic. annexed to the rect. of Barnby, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £660, in the patron. of Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a circular tower surmounted by an octangular turret, containing three bells. The register dates from 1540. The parochial charities produce about £15 10*s.* per annum. There is an endowed parochial school, and a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Sir Samuel Morton Peto, Bart., M.P., is lord of the manor.

MUTFORD AND LOTHINGLAND, a hund. in the co. of Suffolk, contains the borough of Yarmouth, and the pars. of Ashby, Barnby, Belton, Blundeston, Bradwell, Burgh-Castle, Carlton-Colville, Corton, Flixton, Fritton, Gisleham, Gorleston, Guxton, Herringfleet, Hopton, Kessingland, Kirkley, Lound, Lowestoft, Mutford, Oulton, Pakefield, Rushmere, and Somerleighton, comprising an area of 32,960 acres. It gives name to a Poor-law Union embracing the hundred, and to a superintendent registry district.

MUTFORDS, a hmlt. in the parochial chplry. of Buntingford, co. Herts, 13 miles N. by E. of Hertford, and 3 S.E. of Buntingford.

MUTHILL, a par. in the southern part of co. Perth, Scotland. It contains the small post town of Muthill and the post-office vil. of Braco, also part of the quoad sacra par. of Ardoch. It is a station on the Crieff Junction railway. The par., which is 10 miles in extreme length by 8 in breadth, is situated on the borders of the highlands, and is traversed by the great military road from Stirling to Inverness, and by the Crieff Junction railway. The principal rivers are the Allan Water, Earn, and Machany, besides numerous small streams. The prevailing rocks are sandstone and trap, covered in parts by a light loam which is exceedingly fertile, but in the higher grounds the soil is barren and wet. The best lands are on the haughs of the Earn and Allan, where the greater part of the farms are arable, but above half the surface is still in hilly sheep pasture or barren waste, especially in the S.W. district, where there are many thousand acres completely covered with heath or deep moss. There are some native woods and several thousand acres of modern plantations. Game of all kinds are abundant, as also salmon and trout. The climate is damp and cold but tolerably healthy. Above two-thirds of this extensive parish belongs to the Drummond family, and the remainder to five or six heritors, who are all resident. Drummond Castle, the ancient seat of the illustrious family of Perth, but now of Lord Willoughby d'Eresby, is situated at the head of the Vale of Strathearn, near the Eagle's Craig beacon, and being built upon a rock, commands one of the most extensive prospects in Scotland. The small town of Muthill, by a cruel command of the Pretender, was burned in January, 1716. It is remarkably clean and well built, and is situated about 4 miles S. of Crieff. It is chiefly inhabited by farmers and weavers, the latter employed by the cotton manufactures of Glasgow. The par. is in the presb. of Auchterarder and synod of Perth and Stirling, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £250, besides a glebe of 8 acres. The church has been rebuilt on the site of a very ancient pointed one. There is another church, also modern, on the S. side of the parish. There are Free and United Presbyterian churches; also parochial and other schools. Amongst the numerous remains of antiquity, may be mentioned the famous camp at Ardoch, the most complete of any in Great Britain, covering an oblong area of 140 yards by 125; also a camp at Strageath, on the banks of the Earn, supposed to have been the Ad Hiernam of Richard of Cirencester, from which led the Roman way to Orchil. From the ramparts of the former of these fortresses may be seen the plain of Sheriff-Muir, where the ill-disputed battle of Dumblane was fought in 1715. Not far distant is a gigantic cairn measuring 182 feet by 45, where stone coffins have been found. In various parts of the parish are traces of Druidical temples and single upright stones 12 to 14 feet high. Fairs are held on the 19th January, 6th May, 5th August, and 31st October.

MUTTONHOLE, a vil. in the par. of Cramond, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, near Granton pier, and the river Almond.

MUTTON ISLAND, or ENNISKERRY, in Galway Bay, co. Galway, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Galway. It is situated in 53° 16′ N. lat., and 9° 3′ W. long., and has a lighthouse, erected in 1817, with a fixed light 33 feet above high water, and visible for 10 miles. There are remains of fortifications constructed in 1691. There is also another small island of this name on the W. coast of Galway, near Roundstone Bay.

MUXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lilleshall, co. Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Newport. It is situated near the Shrewsbury canal, and it contains many valuable mines.

MUXTON. See MUCKLESTON, co. Stafford.

MWEELREA, a mountain in the co. of Mayo, Ireland. It lies on the N. side of Killery Bay, and attains an altitude of 2,688 feet, being the highest peak in the county.

MWSTWR, a tnshp. in the par. of Corwen, hund. of Edernion, co. Merioneth, near Corwen, and 10 miles N.E. of Bala. It is situated on the river Dee, under Berwyn Mountain.

MYDDFAI, LOWER AND UPPER. See MOTHVEY, co. Carmarthen.

MYDDFEI, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarthney, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.W. of Llandilofawr.

MYDRIM, or MEIDRUM, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles from Llacharn, and 8 W. of Carmarthen, its post town. The parish, which is large, is situated on a branch of the river Taf, and contains Castell Brynule camp. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Llanvihangel Abercowin annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. David. There is an endowed school with an annuity of £8. An annual fair is held on the 12th March for horses, cattle, and flannel.

MYDWALLED, or MEDWALLETH, a tnshp. in the par. of Upper Beguildy, co. Radnor, 5 miles S.E. of Newtown.

MYERSCOUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S. of Garstang, and 6½ N. of Preston. The township, which is of irregular form, is situated on the Wigan railway and near the river Wyre. The chief part of the land is a forest belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster. Myerscough is the principal residence. There is a free school endowed with land, the gift of an unknown benefactor.

MYFOD, a par. in the hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery. See MEIFOD.

MYFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of St. George, co. Denbigh, 2 miles S.E. of Abergele.

MYHATHAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarthney, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.W. of Llandilofawr.

MYLERSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Robertstown. Kinnegad is its post town. The par. is 4 miles long, and its extreme breadth is nearly 3 miles. The surface is boggy and flat. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Castle Carbury, £233. There is a day school, also ruins of the church and of an old castle.

MYLLTEYRN, a par. in the hund. of Commitmaen, co. Carnarvon, 9 miles W. of Pwllheli. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Bottwnog annexed, in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £178, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice.

MYLNEFIELD, a demesne in the par. of Longforgan, co. Perth, Scotland, 11 miles N.E. of Perth. It is situated on the Forfarshire border, and has a view of the Tay. There is a quarry of purple sandstone of good quality for building.

MYLOR, a par. in the hund. of East Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 2 miles N.E. of Falmouth, and 3 E. by N. of Penryn. This parish forms a peninsula, bounded on the E., S., and W. by Falmouth Harbour, and on the N. and N.W. by the parishes of St. Gluvias and Perran Arworthal. It is nearly divided into two sections by Mylor Creek, or Pool, at the head of which is situated the village of Mylor Bridge. Until recently the populous village and small seaport of Flushing was also included in this parish, but in 1844 it was constituted a separate ecclesiastical district with the adjoining lands. About two-thirds of the parish is arable, and the remainder pasture and meadow, with some woodland. The surface is varied by hill and dale, and the lower grounds are watered by numerous streams and several navigable inlets or lakes, the shores of which are studded with marine villas. The substratum is slaty rock with veins of tin and copper. On account of the mildness of its climate this place is much resorted to by invalids. The government have a range of storehouses and a dockyard near the church, and at Flushing is a private dockyard with a building slip, also hot and cold sea-baths. At Perran Wharf, which is partly situated within the parish, is the Perran Foundry, having extensive works for the manufacture of boilers for steam vessels and mine machinery, and on the estuary of Carnon are copper steam works. An oyster fishery is also carried on. In the N.E. part of the parish is Carclew, the mansion of Sir Charles Lemon, Bart.; in the S.W. the ancient mansion of Trefusis, the property of Lords Clinton and Saye, who together own the greater part of the parish. A branch of the Cornwall railway passes along the creek to Falmouth. At Flushing is also a ferry to Falmouth, and on the N.E., at Restronget ferry, a boat conveys passengers and horses to Feock, on the road to Truro. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £453, and the vicarial for £215. The living is a vic.* with that of Mabe annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £385, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Melor, is an ancient Norman structure, situated on the margin of Mylor Creek, the churchyard wall being washed by the sea. It has a separate bell tower mantled with ivy, and on the N. side a Norman porch enriched with sculpture, while the S. porch has empanelled pillars. The interior contains many monuments and tombs of the ancient families of Donithorne of Carclew, and the Trefuses of Trefusis, also a monument by Westmacott to R. Cocks. In the churchyard is a yew tree one hundred years old, and more than 90 feet in diameter. There are also the parish church of Mabe, which has been consolidated with Mylor, and the church of St. Peter at Flushing, an independent ecclesiastical district, but held by the present Vicar of Mylor. In the church of Mabe is preserved a silver cup and lid, on which is inscribed the date 1276. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Bible Christians, Independents, Baptists, and Unitarians. A school is supported by Sir C. Lemon, Bart.

MYNACH, a river of the co. of Cardigan. It rises under Plinlimmon, and flowing by the Rheidiol, near the Devil's Bridge, forms a series of cascades.

MYNACHTY, a hmlt. in the par. of Llan-y-Crwys, hund. of Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles E. of Lampeter. It is situated on the Sarn Helen way.

MYNACHTY, a seat of the Gwynnes, in the co. of Cardigan, 3 miles E. of Aberaeron.

MYNISH, an islet off the W. coast of co. Galway, Ireland, near Ard Bay.

MYNISHMORE, and MYNISHBEG, islets off the W. coast of co. Mayo, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Newport. There is a small fishing harbour and coastguard station.

MYNYDD, a parcel in the par. of Bryn-Croes, co. Carnarvon, 9 miles W. by S. of Pwllheli.

MYNYDD signifies a mountain in Welsh, and is used as a prefix to many names of hills, as Mynydd Digoll, or Long Mountain, in co. Montgomery, 3 miles E. of Welshpool, where Madoc, after the death of his cousin Llewellyn, was defeated by the Lords Marchers in 1294; Mynydd Mawr, or the Great Mountain, in co. Carnarvon, 5 miles S. by E. of Carnarvon: it forms one of the peaks of Snowdonia, and attains an elevation of 2,300 feet.

MYNYDDMAEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Mynyddyslwyn, co. Monmouth, 8 miles S.W. of Wentllooge.

MYNYDDYSLWYN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 8½ miles N.W. of Newport, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Pontypool. The par., which is extensive, contains the hmlts. of Mynyddmaen, Clawrplwyf, and Penmaen. The inhabitants are employed in the numerous collieries, ironworks, stone quarries, and in cotton-weaving. The village is considerable. It is a meet for the Tyisha harriers. The surface is boldly undulating, and the lower grounds are watered by the rivers Sirhowy and Ebbw, which, after uniting their streams, flow into the Usk near its confluence with the Severn. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £580. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Tyder, is a spacious structure with a tower rebult in 1816. There is also a district church at Penmaen, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. The church is modern. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Calvinistic Methodists, Baptists, and Independents. Near the church is a large tumulus, supposed to have been a beacon or signal station, also slight vestiges of an ancient religious house.

984011

MYROSS, a par. in the bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Roscarbery, its post town. It is 2 miles in length and the same in breadth, and contains the vils. of Unionhall and Carrigillihy. The surface is hilly, but consists of a good soil, extending between Glandore Harbour and Castlehaven. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £375, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1827. The chief seats are Myross Wood and Rock Cottage, where Dean Swift lived. There are ruins of an abbey called "De Fonte Vivo," founded in 1172 by the MacCarthys, near which is the old church. A fair is held on Holy Thursday.

MYSHALL, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Forth and East Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 13 miles S.E. of Carlow, and 57 from Dublin. It is 4½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The surface is mountainous and boggy, and is traversed by the road from Leighlin Bridge to Newtonbarry. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £308, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1811 by a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Fenagh. There are two National and other day schools, also a dispensary within the Carlow Poor-law Union. Here is a police station, where petty sessions are held. Myshall Lodge is the principal residence. Fairs are held on the 10th May and 14th September.

MYSIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kettle, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles E. of Falkland.

MYSTYRRHOES-LLOWDY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandewy-Ystrad-enny, co. Radnor, 8 miles N.W. of Radnor.

MYTHE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.W. of Market-Bosworth. It is situated on the river Anker.

MYTHE WITH MYTHE HOOK, a tnshp. in the par. of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N. of Tewkesbury. It is situated between the rivers Severn and Avon.

MYTHOLD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stansfield, and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 1 mile E. of Hebden-Bridge. It is situated in the secluded vale of Todmorden. The surrounding country is hilly moorland. In the vicinity are extensive quarries of gritstone, also collieries and iron-works. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, and in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected here in 1835, at an expense of £2,700, defrayed by the parliamentary commissioners, exclusive of the site given by the Rev. J. Armytage Rhodes.

MYTHOLMROYD, a vil. in the tnshps. of Wadsworth and Midgley, par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Halifax. It is a station on the eastern section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It is situated in the valley of the Calder, and on the road from Halifax to Todmorden. The Rochdale canal and the line of the Leeds and Manchester railway pass near the village. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton and worsted mills in the vicinity. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £156, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a convenient modern edifice, with schoolhouse attached, the gift of W. Sutcliffe, Esq.

MYTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 20 miles S. by W. of Lancaster. It is situated near the Lancaster canal and the river Ribble.

MYTON, NORTH and SOUTH, wards in the par. of Kingston-upon-Hull, East Riding co. York, near Hull, of which it may be considered a suburb.

MYTON-UPON-SWALE, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles E. of Boroughbridge, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Swale and Ure, and over the former river is a ferry at this place. A battle was fought in this parish in 1319 between the Scots and about 10,000 English, amongst whom was a great number of priests, headed by Melton, Archbishop of York, in which the latter were defeated. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £150, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The chancel windows are of richly stained glass, representing the arms of the Stapylton family. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. It was erected in 1847, at the expense of Mrs. Margaret Stapylton, and by whom it is entirely supported. Myton Hall, the principal residence, is a white mansion situated near the ferry. It is the seat of Stapylton Stapylton, Esq., who is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

END OF VOL. II.

VIRTUE AND CO., PRINTERS, CITY ROAD, LONDON.

DA
640
.N30 1868
v.2

The National gazetteer :